FINIS CORONAT OPUS.

In the morning of life, ere the glorious ray
That was born of our childhood has faded away;
When the warm blood leaps up and the eye sparkles bright,
And the path of our future is roseate and light;
In the springtime of life, in the bright glow of youth,
When you drink from the chalice of friendship and truth;
Oh! ever and always on earth as we dwell,
Let us not only live, but always live well.

In the power of manhood, in the midst of the strife,
While valiantly fighting "the battle of life,"
Ere the bright star of hope, too brilliant to last,
That rose in the future, has set in the past,
Let us thank the Great Giver for the kind friends around us,
For the love whose bright blooming tendrils have bound us;
Oh! ever and always on earth as we dwell,
Let us not only live, but always live well.

In the evening of life, in the sunset of age,
When the "finis" is reached, and we turn the last page,
While we follow the hand that beckons us ever
To that beautiful country beyond the dark river;
As we pause at the end and look thoughtfully back
Through the trials and pain of the long weary track,
'Twill gladden our hearts to be able to tell
That we've not only lived, but have always lived well. —J. WALTON BROWN.

THE Swift County Times issued a boom edition for Christmas. It is a credit to the publishers. Benson must be quite a town.

DULUTH is a great city; and has great newspapers; but the 52 page Industrial Edition of the News Tribune is a great one, even for its surroundings.

THE stories about Hayward have about as hard a time dropping as had the original Harry himself. Nearly every paper in the country after telling how disgraceful the whole affair was, advises that it be "dropped."

EX-GOVERNOR MCGILL, it is said, will, at an early date, shy his castor into the Gubernatorial race. Quite a number of people think A. R. was set down upon rather hard when he was not given a second term and are now waiting for a chance to vote their sentiments on the subject.

IF St. Paul could find the original Mrs. Toodles, and secure the famous door plate, bought at auction by her husband because it would be handy to have in the house, and bearing the name of Thompson with a "p" in it, it could be nailed on the door of their now most noted citizen, and people going by could know without asking who resided there. "It would be so handy to have you know."

THE decision recently given by Judge Buck of the Supreme Court, in the case of Boiler Inspector Sutton, that no man can hold any other office except Post Master, while he is a member of the Legislature; nor for the time for which he was elected whether or not he serves, seems to meet the approval of the people generally. In most cases it would be better for the country if one man could hold but one office at a time whether it be a member of the Legislature or some other office.

GREAT financiers keep telling the people that there is plenty of money in this country. Yet it appears that some of them want the nation to borrow from Europe. And it is said now that Russia has offered to loan $400 000,000, that the Rothchild's syndicate is around making offers. If there is plenty of money in this country why don't people loan it to our own government? Why be around borrowing from others? We do not desire to be bound up with financial ties to any foreign country so long as we have plenty of money of our own.

Now the dailies are at work writing up sensational stories about one Thompson, whom few people seem to ever have heard of before. They are trying to make out that Chief Clark and the balance of the police force are lying about the whereabouts of his pal, Hoskins, and other things. It would be a good thing for St. Paul and Minneapolis both to get some policeman or some newspaper reporters, one or the other, or both, that wouldn't lie so outrageously. People are weary of the continued announcement that the Sheriff or the Chief, or somebody had said that a wonderful mysterious affair something was, but it is beleived they know more about it than they let on."

The remains of Harry Hayward were taken, by his brother, to Chicago, and cremated, and the ashes placed in a receptacle to be returned to Minneapolis and buried in the cemetery.

St. Cloud is to have a department store. They seem to be spreading out into the country.

W. E. Hale says the story about Harry Hayward having anything whatever to do with the death of his sister-in-law, in Chicago, is absolutely false. He denounces the originator of the story as mean and cowardly.

A Minnesota State League, base ball organization is talked of. Eight of the leading amateur clubs in the state to furnish the material.

Charles McCartey near St. Peter, got drunk a few days ago, froze his feet, had them amputated and died.

Charles Thompson, a noted gambler of St. Paul, fatally shot; no one knows how. LATER.—He is recovering.

IT seems to us, for a man who did not even take the trouble to visit the Delano site, this Rev. Dr. Smith is making himself considerably conspicuous in the Asylum imbroglio. Had he been to Delano and looked over our site, perhaps he could have persuaded a majority to vote for it.

LAST week's Star-News says of the "insane" commission "up to noon of the day when action was taken, Anoka had positive pledges from a majority of the commission to locate it there, but some mysterious influence was brought to bear on some of the members just before the balloting commenced that wrought a wonderful change in their convictions as to the best location. It is even intimated that cold cash played a prominent part." Has Anoka found out the mysterious influence with which to work the committee; or how did the vote come to be reconsidered and Anoka get the Hospital?

THE proceedings of the Commission to locate the Fourth Hospital for Insane, is most purile, or terribly tricky; or both. First, after a number of votes, a majority of one voted for Hastings. Then the vote was made unanimous. A few days later the Commission met at Fergus Falls, and by a majority of one voted to reconsider, and give Anoka the Hospital. Anoka people tried to rush the contract but found that Dr. Smith had protested in the interests of the first choice. Delegations of citizens from both places are running to the Capitol to work in the interests of their locations. The officers will have to wait for the courts to tell them what to do.

THE Waseca Herald makes a good point when it asks why do the gold bugs want more gold if the less the amount of the money standard in use the better for the country? The gold advocates tell the people that it is only necessary to have one standard, and all money can be measured by it. They favor the credit system. If this is so, and the credit system is the right thing, why fool around with gold at all? Let a Syndicate correl all of one of the metals that are more valuable and less plenty than gold and have manufactured a nice little "standard" which they can keep their thumb on, so to speak, and let gold be a commodity, with silver, how would that suit some of the gold bugs? The Herald asked a fair question. Let some gold-bug answer it. David B. Hill, at St. Paul, gave out the same idea when he said he hoped the discovery of gold in South Africa would solve the money question.

Venezuela.

London Punch has published some verses in reference to the position of the United States concerning Venezuela and the Monroe doctrine, in which occur the following lines: "But when things look squiffy, we'll back down in a jiffy, and drop the name of Monroe." Apparently England is on the point of finding out whether the United States will drop the name of Monroe, when things begin to look "squiffy." There is only one sentiment in America in regard to the Venezuelan question, and that is that England must not be allowed to take one foot of the disputed territory till the whole boundary question between herself and Venezuela has been submitted to the fullest investigation. If it shall be found she has a right to the land as far as the Schomburgk line, which she claims, then the United States will be the last one to interfere with her possession of it. But her claim will not be allowed until she proves it beyond dispute. To that the United States is bound by all the history of her past, all the policy of her future. If without arbitration England seeks to hold the Schomburgk line, it will be regarded as an act of hostility by this government and as an infringement of the Monroe doctrine. England's record in the past is that of grabbing whatever she can get, right or wrong, and this record tends to foster little faith in her justice when it comes to seizing territory anywhere. The Monroe doctrine must be maintained by the United States. It is vital to our own existence. It will be matter of deep regret if we must maintain it forcibly, but we are ready for even that.—Mankato Morning News.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 20, 1895.

Speaker Reed's muzzles are in prime working order. He muzzled the members of the Ways and Means committee and compelled them to report two bills prepared by him: one increasing the tariff upon wool, woolens and lumber to 60 per cent of what it was in the McKinley law, and raising the tariff upon everything else, excepting sugar, 15 percent above present rates, and the other providing for the issue of three percent coin bonds to replenish the gold reserve whenever the Secretary of the Treasury deems it necessary, and of $50,000,000 in three per cent three year Treasury certificates, or so much thereof as the Secretary of the Treasury may need from time to time. He muzzled the objecting republicans who wanted the bills submitted to a caucus before being reported to the House, and lastly he muzzled the House and had his bills passed, notwithstanding that the democrats did all the protesting they could under the Reed rules, against the railroading of such important legislation through the House without debate. When one of his party went to Mr. Reed and asked that a reasonable time be allowed for debate on the bills before they were passed, Mr. Reed dismissed him by saying sharply: "The House isn't a debating society." In fact, for all practicle purposes there is no house. It's powers have all been usurped by Mr Reed, and its only important duties are to obey his orders.

But there are neither Reed rules nor methods in the Senate, to which these bills have now gone, and the country may count upon their being thoroughly debated before they are acted upon.

It is doubtful whether either of them can pass the Senate at all, and certain that neither can get through without being materially ammended.

The President this week formally declined to accept the ram Katahdin, built by the Bath Iron Works, because of the failure of the vessel to make the speed stipulated in the contract. The rejection is merely a technical one, as the administration and the naval officers are entirely satisfied with the boat and know that the failure to reach the required speed was no fault of the builders who merely followed the government plans in the construction of the vessel. It would have set a precedent which might make trouble in the future to accept the vessel after its failure to make the speed named in the contract, so it was deemed best to refuse to accept. But the administrations influence will be used to get the joint resolution authorizing the President to accept the Katahdin, which has already been introduced, adopted by Congress, so there is little doubt that the Katahdin will soon be a part of Uncle Sam's navy.

In creating three Election committees to bounce those democrats whose seats are being contested by republicans and to give those republicans who are holding seats which are contested by democrats a valid title to their seats, Mr. Reed overlooked one thing that is already making trouble. The committee on Elections has but one room, and each of the three committees claim the right to use it.

The Union printers are not so glad about the extension of the Civil Service rules to the Government Printing Office as they were. Already four non-union printers have secured positions in the building by passing the required examination, and there will be others, until their number grows so great that the office will have to be classed non-union.

The report, although not yet officially confirmed, that Russia had offered to loan the United States $400,000,000 in gold, without interest, has probably created greater consternation among the European gold kings who have been squeezing enormous profits out of the United States under our present bad financial system than did President Cleveland's bold announcement in behalf of the Monroe doctrine. Already an agent of the Rothschilds has been to Washington to asure Secretary Carlisle of their willingness to furnish all the gold this government might need, notwithstanding their assertion right after the Monroe doctrine message was published that American securities of all sorts had been put on the black list. Of course there is no probability that this government will accept Russia's offer, but it was none the less a very friendly and gracious act on the part of Russia, and it furnishes the administration with a weapon that will inspire fear in the minds of the European gold kings, who know by experience what Russia can do in the financial line in opposition to them. Russia has not only made itself independent of the aforesaid European money kings, but while doing it has accummulated $800,000,000 in gold. More than half of this gold, for which Russia has no particular use, is deposited in European banks outside of Russia. That is the gold that she is willing to loan us. Its withdrawal from Europe would be a knockdown blow for the gold kings.

From the Valley Herald, Chaska, we clip the following letter, which we presume to have been written by a former resident of Chaska:

MR. EDITOR.—I arrived here on the Colony lands (soldiers) Saturday morning and am well pleased with the country, much better than I really expected. There are between 3 and 4 thousand people on the land, and the best feeling prevails, and everybody is happy and busy, putting up houses, grading the streets for the city and clearing the pine trees from 1000 acres for the city. There are all kinds of business houses on the lands, at the present all kinds of goods are sold and the average is about the same as up there. There are quite a few here from Minnesota, but I have found none yet that I knew; we five that came down together are having a jolly time. I would not advise anybody to come here that has no shares. Send the Valley Herald down to me this week if possible, and give my best regards to my Carver County friends

The Fashionable Color.

Every season, just as spring fills the world with green and autumn colors both atmosphere and forests with its own russet gold, society accepts what is called a prevailing color. Last season forest green and sealing wax red were the dominating shades. Walls were hung with either one or the other, books bound in them, card cases covered with red or green, while on hats and writing-desks, stationery and upholstery, red or green greeted the eye. Again the change has come, as subtile as the shifting of the seasons, and Episcopal Violet now binds the pretty books of devotion, covers the opera-glass case, enamels the silver backs of brushes, even covers the dinner table under a cloth of embroidered white muslin. It is the rich purple shade with which theological college hoods are lined, and it first came into use for binding the splendid sets of church service that women carry about rather conspicuously of a Sunday. These volumes are large and thin, with silver-edged leaves, gloriously illuminated. They are covered in violet leather, and then wonderfully overwrought with delicate ecclesiastical solid silver traceries. In place of the pretty ribbon markers ordinarily used, with their silver symbols of cross, anchor, etc., at the end, between the leaves are slipped three broad, long strips of silk, one violet, one ecclesiastical red, and one white. These are finished at the ends with silver fringe, and solidly embroidered in gold and silver threads, after designs taken from ancient church vestments.—From "Society Fads," in Demorest's Magazine for January.

PROF. J. MCIVOR TYNDALL, of Los Angeles, Cal., is making preparations to be buried alive on January 7. He says he will remain entombed for 30 days and then return alive to daylight. This is a tolerably common feat of the East Indian fakirs.

THE new governor of New Jersey announces that he does not propose to appoint to office men who have made a failure in business. His theory is that men who can not successfully conduct their own private business are certainly but ill-equipped to conduct affairs for the public.

THE late official report shows that, contrary to the common belief, cases of religious mania are rare in the British isles. It also discloses the strange fact that more mental abberation is developed among the tribe of peddlers than among any othe class, physicians and druggists coming next.

MRS. P. K. W. SHIMER, of Mount Carroll, Ill., has signified her intention of turning over to the University of Chicago the Mount Carroll seminary for females with 200 students and property valued at $100,000. In addition, she promises to endow the university with at least $155,000 in cash.

ACCORDING to the latest census there are in Michigan 651,920 persons of voting age, and that of this number 34,545 can not read or write. This shows the per cent. of illiteracy to be 5.30. It is further shown that the proportion of native born illiteracy is 2.77 per cent. and of foreign born 9.15 per cent.

PROF. DEWAR, of London, whose experiments in the liquefaction of gases are well known, has at last solved the problem of producing liquid air cheaply. ENGLAND expects that its census to be taken next year will show that Great Britain has at last passed France in population, though its area is but little more than half as great. The population of France in 1891 was 38,343,192 and of Great Britain 37,888,153. The birth rate in France has been unsatisfactory for years, while that in Great Britain is comparatively large and increasing.

THEODOR MOMMSEN, the historian, has resigned the office of permanent secretary of the Berlin Academy of Sciences, which he had held 21 years. The professor celebrated his 78th anniversary of his birth a few weeks ago, and has found that, with the increasing infirmities of old age, he is unable to attend to his duties as secretary. Mommsen is now hard at work on a volume of his Roman history.

HUNTERS returning from the Okefenokee swamp, in Georgia, where comparatively few hunters go, say that it abounds with game of all sorts—deer, bears, alligators, turkeys, wild fowl, and fish. The people who live in the swamp district know little or nothing of the world outside, and apparently care nothing. They supply all their wants from the products of the swamp region, and though by no means wealthy are exceedingly independent.

AN Illinois genius has discovered that a fine quality of sirup can be made from corn cobs. His process is not a secret, either. He demonstrated it a day or two ago by boiling 12 clean corn cobs in a gallon of water until the cobs were soft. The juice was then strained off, and a gallon of dark brown sugar solution was added. This was boiled a little while, resulting in a sirup which experienced grocers pronounced to be as fine in flavor as genuine maple sirup.

IN 1890 the number of prisoners in Russian jails was 764,373, and for the next three years 817,945, 855,356 and 842,729. The unfortunates in military prisons, the peasants in village houses of correction, and the prisoners in the Trans-Caspian district would make up a total of 1,000,000 who are under lock and key. These figures do not include those transported to Siberia, who in the years named numbered 18,363, 20,106, 20,727, 17,160—a total of 76,356. Nor do they include 5,328 convicts sent within the same period from Odessa to the penal stations of the Island of Saghalien.

CURIOUS carboniferous fossils were discovered in the Dodge mine of Scranton, Pa., recently by John B. Davis. It was the head and neck of a woman's figure, the features being regular and clearly defined. The fossil weighs 65 pounds and is composed of fire clay. It is 24 inches high, 14 inches from the tip of the nose to the back of the head, and the neck is nine inches in diameter. The convolutions on the top of the head resemble curls of hair, and they end in a knot such as is worn at present. It was found in a solid piece of fire clay, and it dropped out entire when the chunk was broken.

THE report that Japan has subdued Formosa, it may seem strange to say, should interest the housewife above all; for, as a matter of fact, the one way in which Japan's supremacy in the east will make itself felt in the United States is through the camphor chest. Camphor is practically a monopoly of the Japanese, and, as the acquisition of Formosa has made the control of the crude camphor market more complete, this valuable gum has increased in price from 34 to 59. The increase is partly due to the export tax which Japan has placed upon camphor, and partly to a corner in that drug.

CRY OF "FIRE."

It Brings Death to Over a Score in Baltimore.

Mad Rush of a Theater Audience for the Doors—Men, Women and Children Crushed—List of Killed Now Reaches Twenty-Four.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 28.—Twenty-four people were killed, two fatally injured and ten more seriously hurt Friday night in a senseless panic at the old Front Street theater. A defective gas burner burst in a blaze, a woman cried "fire!" and the tragedy followed. Most of the victims were Poles. Only four of the dead had been identified at midnight.

The United Oriental Opera and Dramatic company, of Boston, under the management of A. Schongold and Abram Tansman, was billed to present the Jewish opera "Alexander" and the theater was filled with a motley throng. About 2,500 persons were in the house when the orchestra began playing the introductory.

Cry of Fire Causes Panic.

A strong odor of gas was noticed in the second gallery of the theater and one of the attaches of the place was seen hunting for the leak with a lighted torch. Suddenly a jet of flame flashed out as the torch came in contact with the punctured gas pipe. Cries of "Fire" were heard in the upper galleries and in an instant the excitement became intense. Some one rushed to the gas meter and turned off the supply, plunging the main body of the house into darkness. The stage jets alone remained lighted, being fed through another meter.

Instead of allaying the excitement caused by the sheet of flame from the leaking pipe, the turning off of the gas and consequent darkness only served to add to the confusion. The audience arose en masse and made a rush for the exits. The actors ran down to the footlights and shouted: "Sit down! there's no danger!" but the excited throng paid no heed to the advice, but continued their wild scramble for the doors

Scene of Horror.

The gas was quickly turned on at the meter, and as the theater again became illuminated an indescribable scene of horror was presented. Men, women and children, crazed by fear, were fighting and struggling in the aisles and on the stairways in their efforts to reach the open air.

The actors on the stage and a few cool heads in the audience added to the turmoil by shouting their commands to "Sit down" and cursing those who were most vigorous in their efforts to get out. The struggling mass of humanity made little or no headway for a few minutes; every aisle was congested and every doorway jammed with the frantic Poles and Russian Jews, who mainly comprised the audience.

Wild Scene in the Street.

A hurry call for policemen had brought a large squad to the theater by this time, and a fire alarm had also been sent in, bringing some engines to the scene. The excitement in the street was almost as great as in the theater, as relatives began searching for those from whom they had become separated during the mad rush. Fathers and mothers rushed about looking for their children and attempted to reenter the theater in their search for missing ones. The crowd grew so great that the police, fearing a riot, caused the fire engine hose to be turned on, and in that way the struggling mass was driven back from the theater entrance.

A Sickening Sight.

Meanwhile officers had entered the theater and encountered a sickening sight. In every direction were found bodies from which life had been crushed and trampled. A majority of the victims were young men, girls and children. They were tenderly carried to the front of the house and taken to the city hospital and the morgue as fast as the ambulances and patrol wagons could make the trips. Great crowds followed the ambulances and patrol wagons—and stormed the entrances to the hospital and morgue in their anxiety to learn if their relatives or friends were among the injured or dead.

Seven Dead in One Group.

The majority of the victims of the disaster, however, were not killed in the struggle at the entrances, but at the foot of the stairs leading down from the second and third galleries. The bodies of five children and two women were found just inside the doorway below the second gallery stairs.

Death List Reaches Twenty-Four.

Nine bodies were taken to the morgue—all of them dead from suffocation. Of those taken to the city hospital 15 died. Two more will probably die, and 20 are desperately hurt. The confusion at both places was indescribable.

Was No Danger.

When the mass on the landing had been cleared the frightened mob inside quieted down sufficiently to enable the police to clear the theater. Then it was found that there had been no danger, and that not a soul would have been injured had the audience but remained seated.

Like an Earthquake.

Lockport, Ill., Dec. 28.—The powder magazine at Smith & Eastman's section of the drainage canal near here, containing 2,000 pounds of dynamite, blew up at four o'clock Friday morning. No one was injured. The watchman had left the magazine, and supposedly an ember from the stove fell upon the floor. The shock was the severest ever felt here, and reports state that it was felt at a distance of 30 miles. Many of the buildings at the works were badly shattered.

An Important Ruling.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Dec. 28.—Judge Jackson, of the United States court, has ordered the release of T. A. Morgan, a pensioner, arrested for obtaining goods from merchants at St. Marys, on promise to pay for them out of his pension money. Judge Jackson held that pension money could not be attached or levied on for debt.

Rebel Chief Shot.

Havana, Dec. 28.—Acebo, the insurgent chief who was shot at Cienfuegos Thursday by order of the authorities, died bravely. The execution took place at six o'clock in the morning. Acebo before being taken to the place of execution recommended his family to the care of his friends in the locality of his home.

Most of the business portion and many residences of Ryan, I. T., were destroyed by fire.

WAGES OF SIN IS DEATH.

Striking Confirmation of the Old Proverb in Kentucky.

Lebanon, Ky., Dec. 30.—A mob inflicted horrible vengeance on a faithless woman and her paramour Saturday night when they burned Mrs. T. J. West alive and killed W. A. Dever, her paramour, at Mrs. West's house on Cartwright's creek, on the Springfield pike, three miles north of this city.

The mob is said to have numbered about 75, and it was about 12 o'clock when they appeared at Mrs. West's house. Mrs. West, Dever and his little daughter were the only persons in the house, and when the mob called to Dever to come out Mrs. West and the little girl responded, but Dever remained inside. Just as Mrs. West reached the door several shots were fired at her and she ran back into the house, but the child remained outside. The mob then fired several shots in the house, none of which took effect, and after several attempts to get Dever to come out the mob fired the building.

The intense heat finally forced Dever out, and with pistol in hand he started to a cornfield, a few steps from the house, where he took shelter behind a corn shock and was shot to death. Mrs. West perished in the burning house, and in the morning her remains were found in the chimney, where she had taken refuge. Her legs and the upper portion of the body were almost entirely burned off. The little girl gave the alarm Sunday morning, but meager information can be gained from her.

The awful night's work and the horrible result is simply the price of sin. W. A. Dever is the man who shot and killed T. J. West, husband of the burned woman, at Beaver Green, on Cartwright's creek, three weeks ago. Dever had a preliminary hearing and was released on the ground of self-defense. The killing is thought to have been caused by intimacy on the part of Dever and West's wife.

A CHECK TO TRADE.

Fear of Monetary Trouble Has a Depressing Effect.

New York, Dec. 28.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"The foreign and financial messages of the president were followed by violent reaction in the stock market last Saturday, with grave fears of monetary trouble. The sudden panic checked business in many departments and the industries cannot be expected to show signs of improvement until the new year begins. Orders have for months been so much smaller than they were in the summer, when they were expanding and prices mounting rapidly, that new causes of uncertainty have the more influence

"Failures for the week have been 322 in the United States against 350 last year and 40 in Canada against 41 last year. The failures of the fourth quarter and the year 1895, not yet finished, cannot be definitely stated, but the aggregate of deferred liabilities for the year, while much smaller than in 1893, will vary but little from that of 1894. The year's aggregate of commercial liabilities will probably be about $170,000,000 in manufacturing over $73,000,000 or ten per cent. more than last year, but in trading about $88,000,000, or nine per cent. less than last year."

Bradstreet's says:

"As is the rule in Christmas week, wholesale trade has been quiet. The holidays, the close of the year and stock-taking tend to make business slow and promise only a light trade until late in January. At various cities, notably New York, Boston, Baltimore and Chicago, anticipations as to the character of trade early in the coming year are hopeful but it remains to be seen whether the downward movement of demand and prices and the delay in putting the currency on a sound basis, all of which have begun to show themselves in trade conditions, will permit of as early and marked gains in staple lines of trade in 1896 as has been confidently anticipated.

"Business failures in the country for a completed year number 13,013, an increase of more than two per cent., notwithstanding this is the second year following the panic in which, as shown by the records, it is usual for the number of failures to decline. The increase of two per cent. in number is accompanied by a gain of six per cent. in liabilities of those failing."

ON A SECRET MISSION.

Special Envoy from Venezuela Arrives in Washington.

Washington, Dec. 30.—Venezuela has sent a special commissioner to the United States. Senor Torge Uslar arrived here Sunday afternoon and went at once to the residence of Minister Andrade, to whom he presented the papers intrusted to him by his government. There was a story afloat to the effect that Venezuela is not satisfied with the conduct of Minister Andrade and had decided upon his recall, and the presence of the special envoy gave a tinge of truth to this statement.

When interrogated as to the purport of his visit to this country Senor Uslar replied that he was the bearer of important dispatches from the Venezuelan government to the United States, and his instructions were to communicate with the diplomatic representative of his government as soon as Washington was reached. This he had done, but he was not at liberty to divulge the contents of his communication, which had an important bearing upon the present boundary dispute between Great Britain and Venezuela.

THREE MEN BURNED

Lose Their Lives in a Sawmill Fire at Ashland, Wis.

Ashland, Wis., Dec. 27.—By the burning of the sawmill of the Southerland Lumber company Thursday morning three men lost their lives. Two of them, Bill and Jack Noonin, cousins of Careek, the noted Cornish wrestler, were found dead in the boiler room four feet from the door, while the third was so badly burned that he died in agony soon after. One of his arms was burned off. The men had been asleep on the boilers and did not waken till the flames had burned off the roof of the room.

Violent Storm in Berlin.

Berlin, Dec. 27.—A terrific snowstorm prevailed in Berlin Thursday. The streets were rendered impassable because of their slippery condition, and traffic was necessarily greatly impeded and in many cases wholly suspended. Friedrichstrasse, at ten o'clock in the morning, was strewn with fallen men and horses, and passengers in cars drawn by horses alighted and assisted the drivers to lead their animals, to enable them to keep on their feet. Several persons were injured by falling.

The storm was predicted by Prof. Rudolph Falb, the celebrated German meteorologist.

Many of the liberal clubs throughout the United Kingdom telegraphed congratulations to Hawarden castle, Mr. Gladstone's residence in Chester, from which place the messages were forwarded to Biarritz, France, where Mr. Gladstone has gone for the benefit of his health.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Seized.

A freight car loaded with furs and wild game valued at $55,000 stands on a sidetrack in the yards of the Omaha railroad company in Minneapolis. It is billed to Max Ams, New York city, and the bill of lading implies that the car contains 28 packages of frozen fish and two boxes of notions, weighing 12,760 pounds.

The carload in question started from Tower and is said to have been consigned by the Arion Fish company. At Duluth the car was seized by the game and fish commission. The cargo was examined there and found to contain, instead of the frozen fish and notions specified in the bill of lading, 3,000 partridges, six moose heads with pelts, two caribou heads with pelts, besides a large quantity of other smaller furs. In loading the car enough fish had been put around the outside to give the cargo an appearance of being all right.

It is claimed that Max Ams, Jr., is responsible for the shipment of the car and its contents. That gentleman is said to be in Chicago at present, and Agent Fullerton will cause his arrest as soon as he is found in this state.

The fine for shipping a partridge out of the state is $25; for shipping out a moose or caribou head, $50. The total amount of fines due for the shipment of the carload, under the law, is about $95,000.

State Fair Finances.

Secretary Randall, of the State Agricultural society, has made public the report of the society for the year.

At the beginning of the year there was a debt of over $1,000. There was also a necessity for much of improvement in both buildings and grounds. Some additional grading has been done, 250 trees have been planted, and improvements and additions have been made to buildings costing in the aggregate over $1,500. After the close of the fair the society was able to pay, in addition to all the premiums, purses and expenses of every nature connected with this year's work, all items of old indebtedness, and for permanent improvements made, and today has a comfortable cash balance of $5,816.32 on hand.

Undelivered Letters.

There are several letters in the postoffice at Minneapolis that are waiting for more explicit directions. They have been dropped in the mail boxes during the last few days and are mostly addressed to one Santa Claus. Some of them are addressed to him at the North Pole, others to Fairyland, and still others are just inscribed with his name and no address given. One of them evidently comes from a religious little tot, for it is addressed Sante Claws, Heaven, in care of God.

The directions are printed and run up and down the envelope without regard to such little things as straight lines or blots. Of course, these letters are sacred and have not been opened by the postmaster.

Amateur Cowboys.

Two young men, yet in their teens, giving the names of Frank Bostwick and Raymond Scott, were in custody at the police station at Minneapolis, charged with vagrancy. They were arrested by Sergt. Linehan, and are considered to be rather tough for their years. They claim to belong in Chicago and are on their way west to become cowboys. They had boarded a train on the Hastings and Dakota division, but were put off by the officials near the western end of the city. Each lad sported a heavy moustache, fastened to his upper lip by the aid of wax.

Cremated.

The body of Harry T. Hayward, who was hung for the murder of Catherine Ging, was sent to Chicago to be cremated at the Graceland cemetary crematory. It appears that the family of the murderer have been in fear ever since the hanging that the body would be stolen from Lakewood and used either for scientific or exhibition purposes. The latter idea is apparently untenable, but the first seems to have a good deal of foundation. In fact, rumors had been afloat for over a week that an effort of the sort was to be made, and W. W. Hayward at once placed guards at the cemetery to watch the vault and prevent body snatching.

Fell 100 Feet.

The body of the man who fell over Dayton's bluff at the head of Hoffman avenue, St. Paul, was identified as that of Christian Copz, of 950 Mound street. He was a man 64 years old and a wood sawyer by trade. Of late he had been living with his son-in-law, Charles Schreiber, of the above number. There seems to be some uncertainty as to whether Copz fell over the bluff or threw himself over.

Elmer Thomas, the 3-year-old son of James A. Thomas, was instantly killed while playing on the Selby avenue cable tracks, St. Paul. The little fellow failed to see a rapidly approaching cable train and was caught by the fender of the front car.

May Grier, a teacher at a small school in the outskirts of Duluth, was walking home with her month's salary one night upon a lonely road, when she was held up and robbed by an unknown highwayman. As he started to run she pulled a revolver and fired four shots, and he dropped his plunder.

LITTLE THINGS.

It was only a little thing for Nell
To brighten the kitchen fire,
To spread the cloth, to draw the tea,
As her mother might desire—
A little thing; but her mother smiled,
And banished all her care,
And a day that was sad
Closed bright and glad,
With a song of praise and prayer.

'Twas only a little thing to do
For a sturdy lad like Ned
To groom the horse, to milk the cow,
And bring the wood from the shed;
But his father was glad to find at night
The chores were all well done.
"I am thankful," said he,
"As I can be,
For the gift of such a son."

Only small things, but they brighten life,
Or shadow it with care;
But little things, yet they mould a life
For joy or sad despair;
But little things, yet life's best prize,
The reward which labor brings,
Comes to him who uses,
And not abuses,
The power of little things.

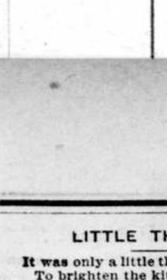
ON STEALING BICYCLES.

BY LUKE SHARP.



CERTAIN news agency has telegraphed abroad the report that I am in Switzerland, not for the benefit of my health, but for the purpose of stealing bicycles, and added that I was an expert thief, that, for a time at least, I had succeeded in baffling the most praiseworthy attempts of the police of two towns to capture me.

While this statement is naturally flattering to me, it is nevertheless a libel, and, in fact, if I cared to use strong language, I might go so far as to take the last syllable away from the word "libel."

The whole trouble arose through Switzerland not having a proper language of its own, that hilly country preferring to express what few thoughts it has in a mixture of French, German and Italian, depending on what particular canton you happen to be in. They say that the Swiss are natural linguists. Unfortunately, they are. Any combination of sounds you may make, means something to any Swiss to whom you happen to be talking, for he knows so many langages that you are sure to hit one of them, and so you convey ideas to him that you had no thought of expressing.

October weather is lovely in Switzerland. Most of the visitors have then gone, prices come down one-half, and the air is sweet and cool, with usually a cloudless sky.

Under these circumstances I thought it would be a nice thing, as the roads were good and the scenery picturesque, to take a bicycle tour right around Lake Thun, beginning at the town which gives the lake its name, and going around to the north side of the lake to Interlaken, and returning by the south shore.

The hotel keeper told me that if I went up the street, turned to the right, went under an arcade until I came to a tunnel, penetrated that and emerged on another street, turned to the left and kept on, I would come to the shop of a man who would let me have a bicycle on hire by the day or the hour. I followed the directions as closely as possible, and thought I recognized the shop because a bicycle was leaning against the wall. The owner was leaning against the doorway, looking at the bicycle outside. The following conversation in many languages took place between us:

"Haben sie un bicyclette a louer?" I opened out on him with the above impartial mixture of German and French. It seems he understood me to ask if that was his bicycle, whereupon he replied in four languages:

"Yaw, yaw, oui, yes, se."

Then, throwing in a bit of Italian, I led off with:

"Quanta costa la machine a la hoor. oder per tag?"

Now I submit that to any educated person, or even to a university man, this sentence said as plainly as print: "How much do you want for this machine by the hour or the day?" I tried afterwards to get the magistrate to see this, but he, not knowing Italian, abied at the very beginning of the phrase. The owner of the bicycle on oath declares that he thought I asked how much the bicycle had cost him. He says he answered that he paid 500 francs for that brute of a machine, made in France, while I understood him to agree to let me have it for five francs a day, which was cheap. I was in a hurry to be off, and was afraid he might repent his offer, so I said it was all right and I would take it, whereupon, without further parley, I wheeled the bicycle into the middle of the road, sprang on its back, and was off, leaving the astonished man standing by the door, too thunderstruck, it seems, to make any outcry until I had passed beyond his sight at the first turning in the road.

I pedaled serenely on, little realizing what a commotion I had left behind me, and the one funny thing about this most regretable episode is that I spent an exceedingly quiet, peaceful and enjoyable day, not knowing I was pursued, making no attempt to elude anybody, and yet eluding them in what appeared afterwards to be by subtle and crafty dodges. The magistrate could not be persuaded that my sitting on the veranda of a restaurant in the main street of Interlaken, with the bicycle in plain view of everybody, was not the brazen act of a hardened criminal, who knew the police would be searching for him in the back streets.

When the man standing against the doorway had recovered partly from his amazement at my sudden flight on his machine he rushed to the police station and told the authorities there a plausible foreigner had engaged him in polite Ollendorfian conversation, and, while his mind was distracted in trying to follow his remarks, had seized the opportunity and also the machine and was at that moment making his way by the north road towards Interlaken.

Now, capture under these circumstances seemed to be deliciously easy. There were no branching off roads. The mountains were on one side and the lake on the other, on neither of which was bicycling practicable. Therefore all the two policemen had to do, when they mounted their machines, was to ride faster than I did and so overtake me. As I had no idea that a race was on, I plugged along in a leisurely manner and would undoubtedly have been taken near Interlaken if it had not been for the fact that some years ago a company built a funicular railway from the margin of the lake, a mile or so up to St. Beatenburg. I had lived in St. Beatenburg once, and I remembered that the road from there to Interlaken was a good one, so I thought that perhaps it would not be a bad plan to go up on the railway and coast down to Interlaken. I knew a man who had done it once. I can well believe now that no one ever tries it the second time. The car goes up to St. Beatenburg three or four times a day only, but when a couple of miles away from the landing I saw a steamer coming in and I knew if I reached the landing about the time she did I would get a car.

The policemen, it seems, caught sight of me as I was making my spurt, and they at once put on extra steam, but there is a deep bay just before one reaches the funicular and they lost sight of me as I turned the point. I just managed to catch the car and got on board somewhat short of wind. As we went up I noticed an innocent and unfortunate Englishman standing on the road at the foot of the hill with his bicycle beside him, and he was watching us go up, taking a rest at the same time before mounting the steep hill that rose between him and his destination. I had little idea at the time that I was making trouble for that unknown stranger, and I hope he will accept my apologies if this recital should chance to meet his eye.

The policeman overtook him near the top of the hill, and, with the craft that distinguishes all continental officials, they said nothing, but followed him until he reached Interlaken, where, in spite of his protestations, they arrested him on the charge of stealing his own bike. The man was justly indignant, and showed them his customs receipt from the French government, and it was no use; they knew they had the right man, and they telephoned to Thun for the owner of the machine to come to Interlaken on the next steamer and identify his property. This took a few hours, and when they let the poor man go, he was exceedingly hungry and angry, swearing he was going to bring an action against the Swiss authorities, as if that would do any good.

Meanwhile, I had reached the top of the railway funicular and I bicycled the mile or more along the street, high up above the lake, on one side of which is scattered the village of St. Beatenburg, with its wonderful view of the snow mountains—the Jungfrau, the Eiger, the Monch and a host of others.

I found the ride down the zig-zag road not such fun as I had expected. I saw the brake was not going to last if I kept on, so I had to walk most of the way down. Coming to a more level ground, I cycled gently into Interlaken, making for the place where they sell Munich beer, and there, over a mug and a sandwich, on the main street, I made a frugal lunch with the bicycle standing against a pillar of the veranda.

After a smoke, I proceeded out of Interlaken, and took the south road that borders the lake. This road is not so good for cycling as the other, being much more hilly, while the roadbed is more stony. I therefore walked a good deal, taking it very leisurely, and in course of time I was overtaken by a policeman who also was walking with his machine. He asked me if I had met a man on a bicycle coming from Thun, and I told him quite truly that I had not. He seemed discouraged, and told me all about the bicycle theft and the arrest of the wrong man. He feared the thief had hidden in the forest until he and his comrade went past, and then perhaps took the steamer across the lake; or the villain might merely have pretended to take the north road, while in reality he went by the south. Thus the policeman hoped to meet him yet. I promised to keep a lookout, and the officer went on.

When I reached Thun, and came to the place where I got the bicycle, I found the man was in Interlaken, and his wife, who knew all about the robbery, was amazed to see the thief return the machine and place five francs and his thanks on the counter.

I regret to say that the apparent honesty of this action did not commend itself to the authorities. They looked on it as the ruse of a crafty scoundrel who realized that, so vigilant were the police, it was impossible for him to escape, and so endeavored to throw dust in the eyes of the wise men of the place. I therefore had to pay the expenses of the chase and apologize to everybody concerned.

Thus the bicycle at five francs a day was not so cheap as I had at first supposed.—Detroit Free Press.

PASSED THE BILLS.

Dingley's Revenue and Bond Measures Adopted by Congress.

This Is the Answer of the Lower House to President Cleveland's Last Financial Message — Report on the Tariff.

Washington, Dec. 27.—The house Thursday responded to the appeal of the president by passing a tariff bill, the operation of which is limited to two and a half years, and which is designed to raise $40,000,000 for the relief of the treasury. The vote was on party lines, with two exceptions. The republicans all voted for the bill except Hartman (Mont.), who did not vote, and the democrats and populists against it, save Newlands (pop., Nev.), who voted in favor of the measure.

The especial order under which the bill was brought to a vote at five o'clock in the evening, after three and a half hours of debate, was iron-clad in its character, and compelled the members to adopt or reject it without opportunity of offering amendments of any kind.

Immediately after the reading of the journal Mr. Lingley, chairman of the ways and means committee, reported from that committee the revenue bill which the speaker forthwith referred to the committee of the whole house.

The Committee's Report.

In presenting the bill to the house Mr. Dingley made the following report of the ways and means committee:

"The committee on ways and means to whom was referred so much of the president's annual message and so much of the annual report of the secretary of the treasury as relates to revenue and the condition of the treasury and also the president's special message presenting the urgency of immediate action of congress in a direction calculated to bring relief, report, that the committee appreciate the seriousness of the situation and the importance of prompt remedies so far as congress can give them."

The report then goes on to review the growing "deficiency of the past two years and a half" and says that "if the consequences of such a chronic deficiency were only the necessity of borrowing money to meet current expenses in time of peace, even this woud afford abundant reason for increasing the revenue. But the consequences are more wide reaching than that unsufficiency of revenue has made it necessary to use the redeemed United States legal tender notes to pay current expenditures, and thus to supply additional means to draw gold from the greenback redemption fund—in short, to create the 'endless chain' of which the secretary of the treasury complains and which has made it necessary to sell issue after issue of bonds to replenish the reserve.

Want to Increase Revenues $40,000,000.

"Your committee believes that it is the duty of the house of representatives to which body the constitution commits the inauguration of revenue bills, to frame and pass a measure that will yield not far from $40,000,000—sufficient to put an end to the deficiency—and to do this without delay, too, leaving to others whose cooperation is required to finally place such legislation on the statute books to meet the responsibility in their own way. And the president's special message, setting forth so pointedly the seriousness of the situation and the necessity for the promptest action only emphasizes the duty of the house.

"Your committee have not undertaken a general revision of the tariff on protection lines, as a majority hope can be done in 1897-99, not only because they know that such tariff legislation would stand no chance of becoming a law, but also because general tariff revision would require many months and the need is more revenue at once. We believe, however, that this need of more revenue is so great that a simple measure increasing all duties of the dutiable list, and taking from the free list of the present tariff a few articles that were always on the dutiable list until August 27, 1894, and which have always been important revenue producers, and limiting the operation of such legislation to about two years and a half—until the present deficiency of revenue is overcome—ought to receive the approval even of those who do not favor protective duties, on patriotic grounds; and that the fact that it may incidentally encourage the production of many articles that we require at home instead of abroad will not be regarded as a ground of opposition under present circumstances.

A Horizontal Increase of Duties.

"But while we have presented in the brief measure reported a horizontal increase of 15 per cent. of existing duties on all the schedules but two, which is an addition of less than eight per cent. to the average advalorem rate — giving about $15,000,000 revenue from that source; yet more than $25,000,000 of the $40,000,000 which is estimated this bill will add to our annual revenue, will come mainly from wool, which is taken from the free list and given a moderate duty, and from manufactures of wool, which are given a compensatory duty equivalent to the duty of wool (which is always necessary when a duty is placed on wool) in order to give the wool grower the benefit, and make it possible to manufacture woolens at home.

"The bill reported by our committee proposes to make the duty on imported clothing wool 60 per cent. of the duty imposed by the act of 1886, which would give an equivalent of 6 6-10 of a cent per pound on unwashed wool, or about 40 per cent. ad valorem. This reduction from the duty of the act of 1890 has been made because the restoration of the full duty in that act might seem to be too great a change from the present law to those whose cooperation it is necessary to secure in order to have any legislation and not a measure of what might be done when all branches of the government are in harmony with the majority of the house on protection lines. The duty on manufactures of wool is increased by a specific duty equivalent to the duty on wool.

"The duty on carpet wools is left at the 32 per centum ad valorem where it was placed in 1890. This is a purely revenue duty, as we raise very few carpet wools. Such lumber as was placed on the free list by the act of 1890, without the slightest justification, is restored to the dutiable list, but with a duty of only 60 per cent. of the duties provided by the act of 1890—giving an equivalent of only about 15 per cent. Such a reduction from the low rates of 1890 is justified only on the ground that the object of your committee has been to frame a bill mainly on revenue grounds, in the hope that it would secure the approval of those in official place whose cooperation is essential to legislation and who may be supposed to feel that in such an exigency as now exists the public necessity must control.

"Believing that such an increase of revenue as is proposed is essential as a first step in the restoration of confidence and the restoration of the treasury to a sound condition, and that other legislation to be proposed to this end cannot be effective without adequate revenue to meet the expenditures of the government, your committee recommends the passage of accompanying bill H. R.—'To temporarily increase revenue to meet the expenses of government and provide against a deficiency.'

The Bond Measure.

Washington, Dec. 30.—After the reading of the journal Saturday the discussion of the bond bill was resumed in the house, the discussion to close at three o'clock.

At three o'clock the debate ended, and Mr. Johnson (rep., Cal.) demanded a division of the bill, and the vote was taken by yeas and nays upon the passage of the first section, authorizing the sale of three per cent. coin bonds.

The measure was discussed at considerable length by Messrs. Brosius (rep., Pa.), Parker (rep., N. J.), Cannon (rep., Ill.), Connolly (rep., Ill.) in favor of the bill, and Messrs. McLaurin (dem., S. C.), Bartlett (dem., N. Y.), Crisp (dem., Ga.), and others in opposition.

The vote on the passage of the first section of the bill authorizing the issue of bonds was: Yeas, 169; nays, 126. The second section was agreed to without a division and the bill declared to be passed.

The Bill.

[The bill, as passed, amends the resumption act so as to permit the issue of three per cent. coin bonds redeemable after five years at the pleasure of the government and payable in 15 years, with the specific proviso that nothing in the bill shall be construed to repeal the act of 1878 for the reissue of greenbacks, and that the bonds shall first be offered for subscription at the subtreasuries and depositories of the United States. The second section of the bill privides for the issue of three-year three per cent. debt certificates of denominations of $20 and multiples thereof in amounts not exceeding $50,000,000 to meet temporary deficiencies.]

Following is a list of the republicans who voted against the bond section of the bill:

Aitken, Beach, Burrell, Curtis (Kan), Doolittle, Graff, Hermann, Johnson (Cal.), Linney, Marsh, McGarblan, Murphy, Pickler, Settle, Scrover, Wilson (Idaho), Baker (N. H.), Bowers, Burton (Mo.), Danford, Eddy, Harris, Hilburn, Kerr, Long, McCall (Tenn.), Miller (Kan.), Newlands, Prince, Shafroth, Towne, Wilson (O.), Barham, Broderick, Clark (Ia.), De Witt, Ellis, Hartman, Hyde, Kirkpatrick, Loud, McClure, Mondell, Pearson, Reeves, Shuford, Walker (Va.).

ONLY ONE REMEDY.

Secretary Carlisle Talks on Financial Situation.

Washington, Dec. 30. — Secretary Carlisle gave to a reporter his views on the tariff measure now pending in congress. He said:

"I had supposed that very few could now be found who believe that our financial difficulties were caused by a deficiency in the ordinary revenues of the government, or that they can be relieved by increasing taxes upon the commodities consumed by the people. These difficulties are the necessary results of our financial legislation, and they cannot be removed, even temporarily, by tariff laws nor by any other measures which do not directly enable the government to procure the means necessary for the maintenance of gold payments."

"Do you think then that the bond bill reported in the house will furnish any relief to the treasury?"

"I am satisfied that there is but one permanent remedy for our financial embarrassments, and that is legislation providing for the retirement and cancellation of the legal tender notes, but, recognizing the fact that such a measure would require time for its consideration, and for its complete execution if adopted, I had hoped that congress would immediately take the necessary steps to assist the government in its efforts to procure and maintain such a gold reserve as may be required to remove the distrust and apprehension which have precipitated the present emergency. The bill reported by the committee on ways and means falls very far short of the requirements of the situation, and its passage will not beneficially affect the situation with which we now have to deal.

"Our difficulties were produced and have been prolonged and aggravated by the fear that, notwithstanding all the efforts of the administration, we may ultimately be unable to procure gold for the purpose of redeeming our notes, and consequently be forced to a silver basis, and this fear cannot be wholly removed until some action is taken by congress clearly indicating a purpose to pay all our obligations in gold when demanded by the holders. Although there is no substantial reason to distrust the character of our notes or other securities, or to doubt the purpose of the government to maintain gold payment, the fact that there has been no legislative declaration upon the subject and that no legal authority exists to make them expressly payable in gold, not only prevents the sale of our bonds for the replenishment of the reserve upon the most advantageous terms, but increases the demands for gold by the presentation of notes at the very times when we are least able to meet them without injury to our credit.

"If it was not generally expected that the three classes of bonds already authorized by law will be paid in gold at maturity, if demanded, they could not be sold except at an enormous sacrifice, but even this general expectation is not sufficient to altogether satisfy investors especially in times of financial disturbance. About $16,000,000 in interest could have been saved to the people on the last issue of bonds if congress had consented to make them expressly payable in gold, instead of coin. This condition is not at all improved by the pending bill, which still requires all bonds to be payable 'in coin' as heretofore, and confers no new authority except the power to issue and sell three per cent. bonds, also payable in coin, after five years, with interest payable in coin semi-annually. At the present time our 30 year four per cent. bonds, with interest payable quarterly, are selling in the markets at rates which yield investors more than three per cent. per annum, and this fact should not be overlooked in determining whether or not a five-year three-per cent. coin bond could now be sold at par, as the pending bill requires."

Speaking of the second section of the bill, which authorizes the issue of certificates to meet deficiencies in the revenue, Secretary Carlisle said: "While there is no necessity at the present time for resorting to the exercise of the power which that section confers, and may not be in future, the secretary of the treasury ought always to have the authority to issue and sell or use in the payment of expenses, short-time certificates, or bonds, of the character described in the bill. Such authority ought to have been conferred upon him a long time ago and it ought to be made permanent instead of being limited to $50,000,000 as it is by the bill. Except as to this limitation, the second section of the bill is a good one."

IN the year 1894, the De Kalb Fence Co., of De Kalb, Ill., doubled the capacity for producing their lines over 1893 which gave them an output of 20 miles per day. The demand for their goods has been so great the past season, that in order to be able to supply their trade, they have been compelled this year to double the capacity of 1894, which now gives them an output of 40 miles per day.

This in itself speaks well for their product and merits the attention and inspection of readers and all that are in need of smooth wire fencing of any kind. Bottlebinding.

You can't judge of the quality of a book by the binding, nor tell the contents by the title. You look for the name of the author before you buy the book. The name of Robert Louis Stevenson (for instance) on the back guarantees the inside of the book, whatever the outside may be.

There's a parallel between books and bottles. The binding, or wrapper, of a bottle is no guide to the quality of the medicine the bottle contains. The title on the bottle is no warrant for confidence in the contents. It all depends on the author's name. Never mind who made the bottle. Who made the medicine? That's the question.

Think of this when buying Sarsaparilla. It isn't the binding of the bottle or the name of the medicine that you're to go by. That's only printer's ink and paper! The question is, who made the medicine? What's the author's name? When you see Ayer's name on a Sarsaparilla bottle, that's enough. The name Ayer guarantees the best, and has done so for 50 years.

DELANO DIARY

—Rev. M. N. Roy, of Litchfield, conducted Episcopal Services, in the Swedish church, here, Monday evening.

—Quite a number of children, and several older persons have been ill the past week with colds, bronchial and lung troubles. Some of them have been very sick.

—A sociable was held at the M. E. Parsonage on New Years Eve. A large number of our citizens were in attendance and enjoyed the evening. Quite a few remained until '96.

—A slight fire in the Front Street Theater, Baltimore, and a cry of fire, caused the stampeding of 3000 people, 24 of whom were killed. Narrow stairways was the main difficulty.

—Grand Secretary, E. H. Godfrey, of Minneapolis, will be here, Saturday night to organize a Lodge of Good Templars at the Odd Fellow's Hall. All who desire to be charter members should be present.

—Our village officers should read up Judge Buck's recent decision on one man holding several offices. Perhaps they would find that it doesn't look very well, at least, for a few men to try to run the town, any more than it does for the state.

—Our village officers should read up Judge Buck's recent decision on one man holding several offices. Perhaps they would come to see that it don't look very well for a triumvirate to do the village business, when the law provides for other arrangements.

—On Saturday evening, last, a number of young people assembled at Mrs. Davis residence and surprised her daughter Stella on the 17th. anniversary of her birthday, by making her a present of a card receiver. An enjoyable evening was spent by the entire party.

—C. W. Ingerson informed us, New Years morning that "67 years ago to day, there was two feet of snow." He said he was there, down in York State, but did not remember about it, but that his folks had told him that such was the case. He says that was his birthday.

—Desmond Dugan got a couple of fingers badly mashed by cars, lately. He, we heard, settled with the company, by taking $1000, his doctor bills, and to have a good job when he gets well. Railroading is still dangerous business for beginners, and even for old hands.

—Miss Alta Clark, teacher of the Grammar Department of the Delano High School has resigned her position, on account of ill health. We understand she has accepted a professorship of Vocal Music and Modern Languages in a college at Hot Springs, South Dakota, where she will go in about two weeks. Miss Ellen will accompany her mother on a trip to Florida.

—Caroline Deka, of Red Wing, will take Miss Clark's place in the grammar department.

—Our village authorities should see to it that the broken windows, behind the curtain at the City Hall, are replaced by good ones, and that when the hall is rented for entertainments it is properly warmed and ventilated. Several bad colds were attributed to the "Cantata," and when the Hutchinson family was here they had to wear their outdoor wraps on the stage.

—About thirty-five dollars was netted by the Cantata, King Winter, this money has been used to buy flour, coffee etc. for several deserving families in town. This is a good start and we hope it will be kept up. We understand that Prof. Ed. Freeman is entitled to the credit for having suggested the entertainment, and to thanks of those deriving a benefit therefrom.

A divorce was granted Dec. 23, 1895, to Anna F. Schefchik, she to have the care of two minor children, and a good share of money and property.

Revival services will commence in M. E. Church next Saturday evening We shall have good help from abroad and everybody is earnestly invited to attend and aid in the good work.—Annandale Post.

Be all this as it may, yet the undisputed fact remains that during the last campaign the office was promised to Mr. Vorse to keep him in line and that is the promise the Judges have just carried out.—Buffalo Journal.

We are informed that a disease is prevalent among the swine of Nicollet and Courtland. Charles Bode of Nicollet is said to have lost forty-six hogs, and Henry Bruns of Courtland twelve. The trouble is not hog cholera but is said to be lung affection.—St. Peter Herald.

When it came to the "tug of war" it seems all the "independent" Republican newspapers in the county except the Journal were for the G. O. P. first, last, and all the time; no matter if they didn't like the candidate before, and if he was incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Attorney General Childs holds that under the Constitutional provision, lately defined by the Supreme Court, a member of the Legislature, during the term for which he is elected, cannot hold any other office under the authority of the State or United States, except Postmaster. He cannot be a city or town official, justice of the peace, nor even a notary public.—St. Cloud Times.

From the Maple Lake Messenger we learn that John Wolf, of Albion, while hauling wood, in driving down hill, was thrown in front of the wagon and had his leg broke and was otherwise injured. The cause of the accident was the breaking of a front stake letting the wood and driver onto the horses. He got off lucky. It is a wonder more people are not hurt or killed by the breaking of front stakes where they load so heavy and then sit on the front of the load.

Among Our Exchanges.

No man has been seriously named as a republican candidate for President that any good republican would object to voting for.—Buffalo Journal.

Rev. Sherwin has been holding a series of meetings at Cokato the past two weeks. As a result, thirteen adults have united with the church.—DASSEL ANCHOR.

It might as well be generally understood first as last, that any community expecting to get a public institution in this state must have a long purse and unscrupulous political tricksters.—Sherburne County Star News.

The Breckenridge division of the Great Northern shipped more wheat last year than any railroad in the state. The total number of cars was nearly 19,000. The next greater amount came from the Milwaukee road.—Litchfield Independent.

And now they are accusing President Cleveland's Venezuela message of being a political dodge to carry public favor. Well it may be, but even that will hardly do to overbalance all the rest of the things he didn't do when he ought to.—Dassel Anchor.

Chaska was beaten out of the hospital no doubt by unfair means, but it is a thing of the past and we don't want to cry about spilled milk. In conclusion will say, that we fully endorse the action of Mr. Carlson in this matter.—The Carver Free Press.

A panic has fallen upon stocks and wheat made the biggest break made on the present crop. This is due to the war scare, the Britishers who hold United States securities retaliating by a demand for payment in gold.—Moorhead News.

Rev. Wm Copp reports that about $7 50 worth of carpenter tools were stolen out of the shed in the rear of his home last week. A reward ought to be offered by the business men or the council for the apprehension of the thief or thieves that are doing the stealing.—Eden Valley Journal

Hastings gets the New Asylum. We would have been glad to have seen it come to Delano, but could see no prospect of it. The whole system of placing public, state institutions in this state is and has been wrong. This county never had any show to get any such favors. There was not money enough up here.—Buffalo Journal.

The new proposed fourth insane asylum was located last week at Hastings. Anoka was an urgent solicitor for the prize, and now the Herald accuses the commissioners of duplicity and dishonesty. They appear to have played fast and loose with the Anokans Litchfield can extend symyathy. She tried to get the soldiers' home once on a time.—Litchfield Independent.

We will not moralize, all that is necessary to say is that Chaska was badly deceived and that promises in matters of this kind, are of but little value. Hastings was our second choice, and we are satisfied with the result. We have the satisfaction of knowing that Chaska was potent in naming the location, and that the 3d District is the victor.—Valley Herald, Chaska.

The commission to select a site for a new insane hospital met at St. Paul last week and selected Hastings. It made an awful blunder. Anoka or Delano should have had it. There are fifteen state institutions, twelve of them are south of St. Paul, and three north and west of it. This last institution should have gone to the north, and that section will be justified in making a vigorous kick in the legislature for a reversal of the decision of the commission. If the six senators from the Sixth Congressional district stand together, it can be accomplished. We are surprized that St. Paul's representative should be so short-sighted as to vote for the Hastings site. We have no sympathy, however, with the querulous fault finding which our neighbors in Anoka are making with Governor Clough. He appointed a commission that was eminently satisfactory to the members north of the St. Paul line, and to the state at large, and there is no use of being unreasonable over the matter.—Clearwater News.

If you have any intention of going to the Southeast this fall or winter, you should advise yourself of the best route from the North and West. INCOMPATIBILITY.

It's a pretty big world, John Bull, you know,
And there ought to be room for all,
The youngsters should have a chance to grow,
Though this continent's far from small.
We really fear
That we cannot hear
Of your trying to crowd in this hemisphere.
We can both be the friendliest of powers
If you will keep your side while we keep ours.

The Orient arch of the globe you rule
In a manner mankind reveres;
But we've trained ourselves in a different school
Of government all these years.
It would danger us be,
'Twixt you and me,
To mix up families who can't agree.
But we'll live 'mid sunshine and song and flowers
If you will keep your side while we keep ours.

A SOUTHERN VOLUNTEER.

Yes, sir, I fought with Stonewall,
And fac'd the figt with Lee;
But if this here union goes to war,
Make one more gun for me!
I didn't shrink from Sherman
As he galloped to the sea;
But if this here union goes to war,
Make one more gun for me!

I was with 'em at Manasas—
The bully boys in gray;
I heard the thunders roarin'
Round Stonewall Jackson's way.
And many a time this sword of mine
Has blazed the route for Lee,
But if this old union goes to war,
Make one more sword for me!

I'm not so full 'o fightin'
Nor half so full o' fun
As I was back in the sixties
When I shouldered my old gun;
It may be that my hair is white—
Sich things, you know, must be;
But if this old union's in for fight,
Make one more gun for me!

I hain't forgot my raisin'—
Nor how, in sixty-two,
Or thereabouts, with battle shouts
I charged tho boys in blue;
And I say I fought with Stonewall,
And blazed the way with Lee;
But if this old union's in for war,
Make one more gun for me!

THE Prison Mirror gives the population of the Stillwater States Prison on Jany. 2, 1896 as Males 454, Females 1.

DULUTH is having an epidemic of Typhoid Fever, said to have been occastoned by the bursting of the water pipes and the consequent supplying of water filled with city sewerage. Too much care can not be taken in water supplies for drinking purposes.

THE latest bond issue is to be advertised over the country any one having $50. to invest can buy one. This looks a little like President Cleveland had determined to have the people who are howling about his issuing bonds, under Republican laws, to either "put up or shut up."

CONGRESSMAN TOWNE wants the boundary line from Lake Superior to Lake of the Woods between Canada and the United States made definite. It is claimed that the plats of the original surveys were burned and never recorded. It would be well enough to know just where the line is.

FROM present indications neither Hastings nor Anoka will get the Fourth Insane Hospital. The commission has voted it to both, and as there is but one Hospital they can't both have it. Delano seems to stand a good chance to get it after all, and would really be a much better place for it than either of them.

KNUTE NELSON is said to have made another flop on the tariff, and now wants the McKinley Bill. If the wily Norwegion who cannot reach any higher position than his present one can succeed in having the people learn that the Norwegian constitution is far superior to our own, perhaps he can succeed in having himself crowned Knute I. of the United States.

THE Missouri University graduating class of 1896, have elected Bob Ingersoll as their orator for commencement day. The faculty objects; as they do not approve of his doctrines. If Bob should contradict himself as often, and make such a botch of speaking as he did to the Minnesota Editorial Association in Minneapolis a few years ago, the best plan to cure the average University graduating class of any leaning in his direction, would be to allow him to talk.

THE Supreme Court seems to have its hands full these times. They have to decide many important matters that it should never be necessary to bring before them. The very idea of the Governor appointing a commission to locate an asylum for the insane and then having the Supreme Court locate the site! And, again, the appointment of a Clerk of Court of Wright county by the full bench of District Judges having to be decided by the Supreme Court, seems rediculous, absurd in the highest degree. It seems as if Legislators might make laws read so plain as to mean something. So that affairs like these would not have to be brought to the Supreme Court to decide. If every thing has to be ruled on by that august body why go to the useless expense and trouble of electing a Legislature to make a lot of befuddling laws that amount to nothing? Why have the Governor appoint Commissioners to locate sites for Hospitals? Just turn the whole business over to the Supreme Court.

IT seems Canadian Indians are troubling Montana people again; and that the authorities at Washington have previously informed Montana officials that it is a State affair and not a National concern. This being the case quite likely the Indians will have to go, shortly; and those wild bronchos are apt to take the line over into British territory, when the Lion would roar and the affair at once assume national importance.

LIQUOR DEALERS in St. Paul have agreed among themselves to keep the laws in future. Perhaps the vigorous prosecutions to which they have been subjected for laxness in this direction, has prompted them to this step. Should they succeed in their determination there would be much less misery among people generally, and they themselves would live more pleasant lives. Law abiding citizens are most respected. Below we quote from the laws of 1889. If these are lived up to we can readily see how saloons would at once become less disorderly places than under the present regime. Though it seems to us the crop of customers would soon become so small as to hardly pay the proprietors to harvest. In fact it is claimed that many saloons intend closing their doors soon:

Sec 19. All persons heretofore, or that may hereafter be licensed to sell intoxicating liquors in this state, whether such license has been granted by the board of county commissioners of any county or by the officers of any city, village or town in this state, as the case may be, are hereby required to close their places of business (hotels excepted) at eleven o'clock at night, and keep the same closed until five o'clock in the morning, and it is hereby made unlawful between the hours last named, for persons so licensed as aforesaid, to sell, give away or otherwise dispose of any fermented or intoxicating liquors at their said place of business, or to permit the throwing of dice or playing cards, billiards or pools therein, by any minor at any time.

Minnesota Politics.

Despite its great Republican majority of 1894, Minnesota cuts but a small figure in the Republican organization of the House of Representatives of the 54th Congress, which becomes very apparent on a review of the make u of the committees of that body lately announced by Speaker Read. Not a solitary chairmanship was allowed to Minnesota, although it had three representatives in that body who had distinguished themselves in the last House of Representatives, namely: Fletcher, McCleary and Tawney. The seniority of the service of these men connected with the standing of Minnesota as a member af the Federal Union, its geographical position, wealth and intelligence entitled the North Star Commonwealth to an important recognition in the councils of our nation.

On investigation we find that the chairmanship of ten important committees was given to New York, nine to Pensylyania, six to Iowa and three to Maine, but Minnesota, whose population and wealth compares favorably with that of Iowa, is left without a single chairmanship. Can any patriotic citizen of Minnesota view this slight to his state with indifference? The course of Speaker Reed is excused by some because he conformed to the custom of giving seniority of membership the preference, under which members from other states possessing an older seniority than Minnesota members, were preferred. While such a course may possess a semblance of Justice, yet through it, states forming an important part of our nation, are deprived of important positions in its councils.

There certainly was no lack of ability on tha part of the three Minnesota Representatives referred to above. Loren Fletcher, prominous to his experience in the last congress, served as a member of several legislatures of Minnesota, being presiding officer over one of its branches part of the time, which position he filled satisfactorially to his constituants and to the state, and likewise Tawney, an ex-member of the Minnesota Legislature, and McCleary are men of ability.

With these characteristics of several of its representatives in Congress, the average citizen of Minnesota can see no reason for the entire state of Minnesota being deprived of chairmanships of committees in the National Councils. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.
Pasadena, Cal., Dec. 25, '95.

Mr. C. R. Carlton, of Independence, hands us the following clipping from the Representative: "Mr. W. L. Terry has some very bright suggestions in 'The National Binetalist, for November. From nearly fifty independent propositions we reprint the following:

'From the earliest periods of history, gold and silver have been money metals,—just as wheat and corn are now food products. To close the mints against the free coinage of silver, would depreciate its value and increase the value of gold, just as the price of corn would be decreased and the price of wheat increased if the mills were closed against corn.'

'Corn selling at 40 cents a bushel, and wheat at 80 cents, if the mills were closed against corn, the value of corn as a bread material being largely thrown upon wheat, would lower corn to about 20 cents a bushel, and at the same time raise wheat to $1.00 a bushel.'

'The closing of the mills against corn would not only injure every corn grower but every person who had been using corn meal for food; and every such person would have to pay more of his labor and more of his products in exchange for wheat, flour or any form of bread.'

'If it were proposed to repeal the wicked law that closed the mills against corn, and made wheat the single standard of food, the men interested in keeping up the price of wheat, would denounce the proposed repeal as simply a 'movement in favor of corn growers,' and such a person would be branded as nothing less than an extortioner and an enemy of the people.'

'With the mills open to both corn and wheat, however, the commercial ratio of corn and wheat would be 2 to 1 but with the mills closed against corn, that ratio would be 5 to 1. Under such circumstances would it be just to say that before a law should be passed to open the mills to corn, the government should declare, so far as it was concerned and its influence would reach, it should take 5 bushels of corn to equal 1 of wheat?' "

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jany. 3, 1896.

President Cleveland may or may not have felt complimented when Senator Sherman offered a resolution providing that when greenbacks or U. S. Trersury notes are redeemed for gold they shall not be reissued except for gold, but that resolution and a speech made in its favor by Mr. Sherman have been the most sensational occurrences of the week in Congress. It will be remembered that when President Clevelladd in his annual message and Secretary Carlisle in his annual report recommended the retirement of the greenbacks and Treasury notes as the best remedy for our financial troubles, Senator Sherman was foremost among those republicans who hooted at the idea. Now Senator Sherman offers a resolution which, if it became a law, would probably result in retirement of greenbacks and Treasury notes, although he claims that it wouldn't. The basis of his claim is not, however, a very substantial one. He figures that the law would work like the assurance of a bank cashier to a frightened depositor, that he could have his money if he wanted it; and that those who have been presenting these notes for redemption in gold will stop as soon as they know that the notes so presented will not be again paid out for them to present again.

The scrambling among these who want more of the protection pork than the tariff bill passed gives them, has not been equalled since the McKinley bill was being made up. It has been and is making life miserable for the republican members of the Senate Finance committee, which ie now trying to decide in what shape the bill is to be reported back to the Senate. The greed of those seeking protection for special lines, at the expense of everybody else, would make the scramble sufficiently disagreeable, but Presidential politics have also been brought into it. The McKinleyites declare that the bill as passed by the House is in the interest of Reed's candidacy, and that they will have more McKinleyism put into it, or know the reason why it isn't done. The democrats are not taking much interest in the bill, although the nearer it gets to McKinleyism the better it will suit them; they believe that the country is as strongly opposed to McKinlyism now as it was when it elected Mr. Cleve[illegible]and President and gave the democrats control of both branches of the Fifty-third Congress and that the nearer the bill approaches the original McKinley bill the greater will be its effect towards helping to elect a democratic President next November. Democratic Senators have not agreed upon any programme on the tariff bill, but the general sentiment among them indicates that after putting the party on record against the bill they will place no obstructions in the way of reaching a vote. Even if the bill passes the Senate in a shape to meet the approval of Mr. Reed, who is to all intents and purposes the House, it is well-nigh certain that it will be vetoed by President Cleveland.

Mr. Reed wanted a rest this week. Consequently the House has dons nothing except to go through the form of holding sessions Tuesday and today.

There has been a considerable change of opinion as to the attitude of England towards the Venezuelan boundary commission, the membership of which could hardly have been improved. Instead of being violently opposed to the commission, as many supposed it would be, it seems, from trustworthy information, that the British government, while not officially recognizing the commission, proposes to unofficially assist it in every way possible to get at the actual facts as to the true boundary between Venezuela and British Guiana.

The resolution adopted by the Senate, calling upon the Secretary of the Navy to state whether in his opinion it would be advantageous to contract for six battleships, instead of two as authorized by the last Congress, is intended to give Secretary Herbert an opportunity to call the attention of Congress to the favorable nature of the bids submitten to the department for the building of battleships, and it is expected that his communication will result in Congress authorizing the construction of four battleships in addition to the two which have been ordered of the Newport News ship yard.

New York city is for the first time in my recollection making a real effort to secure the democratic national convention, or in fact, any convention. The residents of that city seem at last to realize that this is the day of the hustler and that things not worked for are seldom obtained. Whether New York will get the convention is a problem. Only two of the democratic National Committee—Wall, of Wis., and Wallace, of Wash.,—are now in Washington and neither will commit himself on the subject.

INDEPENDENCE, MINN. Jany. 7, '96.

EDITOR BUFFALO GAZETTE:—Ever since the Ging murder we have read and heard more or less about Hypnotism—Hypnotic (Greek). Webster says "A medicine that produces or tends to produce sleep; an opiate, etc." Now it was said that the Devil Hypnotized Hayward and Hayward Hypnotized Blixt and Blixt killed Miss Ging. If Hypnotism means sleep, then the whole world, it seems to us, is asleep or under the influence of Hypnotism, and more especially the United States of America.

Never since the days of Caesar Augustus, when all the world was taxed to keep up a revenue or pay tribute to its rulers, were the people of a country more oppressed than we seem to be at this present time. We are the heirs of an ungodly heritage bequeathed to us from some our political fathers nearly half a century ago.

We have only to go back to the building of the Union Pacific railroad and its branches, to find gigantic fraud and deception of the worst kind practiced upon any free republic. But, Mr. Editor, there is too long a history connected with these railroads and its conspirators to go into print in a small country newspaper. At the time of building the Union Pacific R. R. many of our Congressmen were Directors and stockholders of the road and they got bills through Congress in favor of said roads, and filched the people. And it is said that today the people are now taxed annually to the amount of many millions of dollars to pay the interest on the bonds issued to the Pacific railroads. And the people of this country, (or at least a majority of them) have no conception of what they are paying to corporations, just for the privilege of letting these fellows fleece us out of many millions annually. And besides, we are paying to the amount of $18,000,000 or $20,000,000 in way of interest on the banking capital of the country, the stock of a gigantic corporation chartered by Congress, put in the hands and under the control of private individuals and companies. But, some one will ask, how is this? It is this; because our national banking system is based upon the indebtedness of our country, government bonds. The people pay the interest on those bonds semi annually.

And corporations do our banking business and the people pay for it, only they pay one cent to the government for issue of their notes. At the time of the Rebellion the government should have paid the bond holder in the same kind of money as she paid the soldier who went forth to fight the battles of his country; instead of paying them, principal and interest, in gold, and to day our country would not be in such a deplorable condition.

At the time these deep laid plans were concocted our country was in the hands of the Republican party. So this thing was not done in a corner, and many men now living and also many who are now dead, (if they could send their ghostly spirits back here.) could tell how this thing came about. And so this administration with Cleveland and Carlisle as Master Workmen are only working upon the same sandy foundation that was laid more than thirty years ago. and if the fabrication is built much higher and broader it will soon collapse and great will be the fall thereof.

Now the country cannot live on party alone, there must be a foundation and principle to work upon, country should be first and party only a second consideration.

If I know anything by what I read, see, hear, and observe, we are going at a breakneck speed to utter ruin and destruction.

I believe I am right in saying that but few wars, if any, were ever carried on on a coin basis. It is always done on paper,

It was so with the late war of the Rebellion. And now while we are at peace at home and abroad, our government must issue bonds on a gold basis in order that the credit of our nation may be maintained. This sounds more like the talk of a Judas than that of a Statesman. And it also seems strange that at this age and generation our government cannot be self sustaining.

War with England and the United States is talked of but this is only a bluff and of a mushroom origin, and for fifty dollars I will agree to settle all the fight between these two nations if our government will only furnish me with one 12 lb. Howitzer and give me right of way for thirty days.

Wars are exciting and if the money lords can only get the people's attention turned from the things that most concern their welfare and prosperity as a nation, they, (the money lords) will come in and steal their goods while they are Hypnotized or asleep.

"Put not your trust in Princes nor in the son of man in whom there is no help." Ps. 146, 3.

Our President issued a very strong message in upholding the Monroe Doctrine, and sent it to the two houses of Congress for their consideration, saying that England must not attempt to extend the boundary line of British Guiana on to Venezuela (or words to that effect.) or the United States would be likely to interfere. The first clause of the Monroe Doctrine reads like this: "We owe it to candor and to the amicable relations existing betwee the United States and the allied powers, to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere, as dangerous to our peace and safty." While It is all very well in our President to uphold and maintain the Monroe Doctrine in regard to our rights and privileges connected with foreign nations but from which at present I apprehend no danger. He overlooks things of more vital importance. Why does he not come out in some of his messages to Congress denouncing trusts, combines, monopolies and the money power that is daily fleecing the poor of this country and bringing the masses of the people down to pauperism? In his long and laborious message sent to the two houses of Congress at the beginning of the 54th session he made no mention of the most important industry of this coutnry, that of agriculture. In all that document he did not as much as breath one syllable in the interest of agriculture in this country, but was very extravegant in his opinion on national banks, bond issue and the finances of the country. When our agricultural industry begins to wane then we, as a nation will only play second fiddle to European powers.

In issueing of government bonds it provides a safe deposit for idle capitol, it provides the means whereby the rich and idle can be protected, fed and clothed in scarlet and fine linen and fare sumptuously every day at the expence of the poor who labor incessently for the simplest necessaries of this life. We believe in sound money, sound gospel, sound politics, sound sense, sound philosophy, and sound men who are not Hypnotized, to take part in running this government of ours.

Now, Mr. Editor, there is much more to be said on this all important question for it is without length, breadth, highth and can not be bounded by the mariners compass.

And in conclusion would say that my faith in all earthly powers grows weaker day by day and yet for the good of the people and the nation, I hope there may be found somewhere in the bull-rushes a Moses that will be able to lead us out of the wilderness unto the borders of Canaan, safe from all political harm.

If the constitution of the United States, the Declaration of Independence and the principles of our forefathers are to be carried out, then it seems we have gone in bye and forbidden paths. JOHN H. MCGARY.

Some of our young ladies think it would look much better for certain of our so called young men to mingle with married people than to always go in young company. STATISTICS furnished by the Railway Age show that only 1,782 miles of new railroad were built in the United States during 1895. This is the lowest point reached in any of the last 25 years, and only twice since 1865 has so small a mileage been constructed, while the total is but about 100 miles in excess of the record for 1855, which is 40 years ago. The decline in activity of new construction has been great and continuous since 1887, when 12,983 miles of new track were laid. The railroads of the United States aggregate a trifle over 181,000 miles at the close of 1895.

A PROBLEM which has puzzled railroad companies for years is the selection of some means of properly protecting express cars against the attacks of train robbers. This question has been solved at last by an Indiana conductor named Doctorman, who succeeded in putting to flight a half dozen armed men who had held up a train in that state. The weapon employed by Doctorman was a poker, one end of which had been well heated. So well did this succeed that the railroad companies may hereafter arm all their employes with similar weapons. Verily, the poker is mightier than the gun.

BRADSTREET'S gives the total number of business failures in the United States for the full term of 12 months ending a few days ago as 13,012, which is an increase of 2.2 per cent. over the 12,721 reported for the corresponding time one year earlier. This is the largest number of failures ever reported since the record was begun, with the single exception of 1893. The aggregate then was 15,500, compared with which the decrease in 1895 was 16 per cent. The total number of firms, corporations and individuals having a recognized place of business is about 1,054,000, against 1,047,000 a year ago.

Secretary Carlisle Calls for Bids on New Issue of Bonds.

Text of the Circular Issued at Washington—A Feeling of Relief Comes to Political and Financial Circles—Some Comparisons.

Washington, Jan. 6.—At midnight Secretary Carlisle prepared the following notice, which will be issued to-day:

"Treasury Department, Washington, Jan. 6, 1896.—Office of the secretary: Notice is hereby given that sealed proposals will be received at the office of the secretary of the treasury at Washington, D. C., until 12 o'clock noon on Wednesday, the fifth day of February, 1896, for the purchase of one hundred million dollars ($100,000,000) of United States four per cent. coupon or registered bonds in denominations of fifty dollars ($50) and multiples of that sum, as may be desired by bidders. The right to reject any or all bids is reserved.

"The bonds will be dated on the first day of February, 1895, and be payable in coin 30 years after that date, and will bear interest at four per cent. per annum, payable quarterly in coin, but all coupons maturing on and before the first day of February, 1896, will be detatched, and purchasers will be required to pay in United States gold coin or gold certificates for the bonds awarded to them, and all interest accrued thereon after the 1st day of February, 1896, up to the time of application for delivery.

"Payments for the bonds must be made at the treasury of the United States at Washington, D. C., or at the United States subtreasuries at New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis or New Orleans, or they may be made at San Francisco with exchange on New York, and all bids must state what denominations of bonds are desired, and whether coupon or registered, and at what place they will be paid for.

"Payments may be made by installments, as follows: Twenty per cent. (20 per cent.) upon receipt of notice of acceptance of bids, and 20 per cent. (20 per cent.) at the end of each ten days thereafter; but all accepted bidders may pay the whole amount at the date of the first installment, and those who have paid all installments previously maturing may pay the whole amount of their bids at any time, not later than the maturity of the last installment.

"The bonds will be ready for delivery on or before the 15th day of February, 1896.

"Notice is further hereby given that if the issue and sale of additional or different form of bond for the maintenance of the gold reserves shall be authorized by law before the 5th day of February, 1896, sealed proposals for the purchase of such bonds will also be received at the same time and place, and up to the same date, and upon the same terms and conditions herein set forth, and such bids will be considered as well as the bids for the four per cent. bonds herein mentioned.

"J. G. CARLISLE,
"Secretary of the Treasury."

Differs from Previous Proposals.

Washington, Jan. 7.—A feeling of relief is experienced in political and financial circles here over the fact that the administration has at last announced its position on the question of selling bonds. The tension for the past ten days had been extreme.

The bond proposal differs from all the three others that have gone before in that it is alternative in character. It opens the way for the acceptance of bonds on terms prescribed by congress, should congress see fit to act before February 5. Under the clause reserving the power to reject any or all bids the administration can sift out from the proposals should congress act before February 5 whatever bids that may be considered most favorable to the government, and should congress not act then under the administration's popular loan proposition, those proposals most favorable can also be accepted and those not considered favorable rejected.

Thus, while inviting proposals for $100,000,000 four per cent. 30-year bonds, less than that amount may be accepted, should the terms proposed be considered unfavorable. The bonds sold to the Morgan-Belmont syndicate are now bringing in the open market 115 and over, and the public is now given an opportunity to determine the disputed proposition whether a popular loan at present market prices can be floated by the United States within the United States.

Previous Bond Issues.

So far during this administration three bond issues have been made, aggregating $162,315,400, for which $122,000,000 in gold was received.

These issues were made as follows:

First issue of $50,000,000 of five per cent. ten-year bonds on January 23, 1894, for which $58,633,295 in gold was realized; second issue of $50,000,000 five per cent. ten-year bonds on November 17, 1894, for which $58,538,590 in gold was received; third issue of $62,315,400 of four per cent. 30-year bonds to the Morgan-Belmont syndicate, for which $65,116,244 in gold was received. These bonds were sold at slightly less than 105 and in the market are now quoted at 115 and over.

MAY SAVE SHEA'S LIFE.

Convict Confesses a Crime for Which He Is Sentenced to Death.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 6.—The confession of John McGough to the crime for which Bartholomew Shea was to be electrocuted in Dannemora prison caused Gov. Morton to grant Shea a respite for four weeks, during which time counsel can take proper means to bring the matter before the courts for a new trial. This was the climax of one of the most dramatic criminal and sensational incidents in the state's history, and was made public Sunday just 48 hours prior to the time set for the execution upon Shea of the death sentence.

[The crimes occurred March 6, 1894. Shea and McGough headed a crowd of repeaters who had worked almost every polling place in Troy. They had been told not to work their game in the ward in which the Ross brothers, William and Robert, were the head of the republican party, but announced that they would. In anticipation of their visit the Rosses, John Boland and several other citizens had armed themselves with clubs and some with pistols loaded with blank cartridges. It was shortly after that the melee occurred, and, while 20 or more shots were fired, the two Ross boys fell. It was while Robert lay prostrate that somebody ran up and shot him in the head. This crime was finally laid to Shea's door, and he was sentenced to death, while McGough was sent to prison for 19 years for his assault upon William Ross.]

It is learned that after Wednesday's fight Dr. Jameson's column, originally about 700 men, moved southward, fighting hard all the way throughout the night, and eventually reached Vlakvonteln, six miles from Johannesburg, on Thursday morning, when the column was completely surrounded by a force of 4,800 Boers. In spite of this Dr. Jameson's followers fought stubbornly until noon, when all their cartridges were exhausted. In addition, they had not tasted food for 24 hours and were worn out with fatigue. Mrs. Lee and Miss Hibbard, of Barnesville, are nieces of Mr. Hibbard, and were spending the holidays with their uncle. Dorothy and Allen Hibbard are children of John H. Hibbard.

Besides these unfortunate people there were in the house at the time Annie Bell, a colored servant, and four other children of the Hibbard family, viz.: Webster, Walter, John and Hinton, whose ages ranged from eight to 14 years. They all escaped by jumping from a second-story window. Annie Bell suffered a fracture of one ankle, and Walter Hibbard sprained one of his ankles. The others are not injured. The house is a large modern frame, two stories and attic in height, and was heated with natural gas, by means of a furnace. The fire probably resulted from an explosion of natural gas.

SIX TRAINMEN KILLED.

Chillicothe, O., Jan. 6.—At 11 o'clock Saturday night two freight trains stood on a switch at Schooley's station seven miles east of here. The first train pulled out and the conductor thinking that the second one would follow, left the switch open. Fifteen minutes later the east-bound express came along at 40 miles an hour, and running onto the switch, collided with the train standing there. Both trains were badly wrecked. Engineer Tom Michaels, of the express, had both arms and legs cut off and died Sunday morning at his home in this city. His fireman, Leon Mathers, was instantly killed.

Engineer Fitzsimmons of the freight escaped without serious injuries, but his fireman, George Addis, and another fireman, J. H. Cox, were killed. Jesse King, the front-end brakeman, was also killed, and Postal Clerks J. E. Edington, of Loveland, and J. D. Murphy, of Greenfield, were badly injured. Edington has since died. Conductor Hendershot of the freight is responsible for the wreck, as he left the switch open. The passengers in the express were badly shaken up, but none seriously injured.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Caused Excitement.

News has been received of an exciting but probably not serious encounter in the northern part of the state a few days ago between a party of Indians and two men who were or who claimed to be deputy game wardens. It seems that the Indians have been under the impression that the treaty between the tribe and the government gave them the right to hunt and fish on the reservation, but it is now declared by the district attorney that this clause only affects the territory as far as the Mississippi, and as the place where the encounter occurred was beyond this limit, the seizure which was attempted was probably legal. There were three Indians in the party, and they had as many saddles of venison when the encountered the strangers. The latter notified them that they must surrender the game, which the Indians refused to do, under their idea of the law. The wardens then drew guns to enforce their errand. The encounter was the cause of considerable excitement, which has, however, practically subsided, and there seems to be no danger of further trouble resulting therefrom. The Indians when brought to task for their resistance, pleaded that they had been previously victimized by white visitors who claimed to be game wardens, in order to secure venison and other game which they were not skilled enough to acquire by shooting, and it is likely that the matter will be dropped where it is.

Full of Carrion.

The water war in Duluth is still at its height. Investigation continues and details are more awful as it progresses, showing that Duluth has been supplied for years from a reservoir and wells, the bottom of which are lined with carrion and garbage. An evening paper publishing the disgusting story of a former employ of the water company, who testified that the reservoir, pumps and wells, have been in a long time in a most frightful and noisome condition, and that there were never cleaned out unless carrion became so plenty that it stopped the pumps, which masses of putrid fish often did. At a council meeting it was decided to investigate the lake side pumping station, and to instruct the city attorney to see if the result of the investigation would not warrant an action to revoke the company's franchise. If he decides that it does, such an action will be brought immediately. The local directors of the water company have expressed surprise at the results of the investigation and offer to make alterations in the plant to suit the council. A new steel water tight well is to be put in, and the intake pipe to be extended into the lake several hundred feet.

Used a Clothes line.

John Holl, 35 years of age, took his life by hanging. He had been boarding with a family at 2237 Twenty-one-and-a-half avenue south for some time past, and shortly after 5 o'clock one morning cut off a piece of rope from the clothes line in the yard, and going to a vacant store at 2317 Minnehaha avenue hanged himself from the ceiling.

Failing to respond to a call to arise from a member of the family, his room was opened and found empty. The cutting of the clothes line was noticed, and becoming fearful for the safety of the man, the police were notified. The latter found Holl suspended in the store, dead. Despondency is assigned as the cause for the deed. Deceased spent the summer in the harvest fields of Dakota and arrived in Minneapolis several weeks ago with over $100 in cash. He proceeded to enjoy himself, and want followed. His inability to obtain work rendered him desperate. Coroner Kistler ordered the removal of the body to the county morgue, where a postmortem was held.

During the winter the citizens commitees will be found at the same place, but later will have more pretentious quarters.

HE DARED THE ENGINE.

A Drummer Tells What He Saw in a Railroad Yard.

"One Christmas I was down watching the 'yard geese' or switchmen in the yard at Ottumwa, Ia.," said the drummer to a San Antonio Express man. "The whole crew were celebrating, more or less, and had paid many visits to 'The Road to Hell,' kept by old Stormy Jordan, who bucked the prohibition law so long. A fellow in the crew 'pulling pins,' a tall, lank, blue nose from the eastern limit of Nova Scotia, was always 'chewing the rag' and 'rawhiding' with the 'eagle eye' or engineer on the yard engine. Both were pretty well tanked and got to bluffing each other, and finally the blue nose bet the engineer he could stand in the middle of the track and get on the head end of the engine as fast as she could turn a wheel.

"They put up $25 a side, but that wasn't all the stakes. Failure meant certain death for the switchman and a trial of the engineer for murder.

"They went out into the yard to settle it. There stood the switch engine all 'hot.' The ground was frozen and slippery and the track full of hard-packed and frozen snow to the top of the rail. Up to then we thought they were bluffing, but when they took the engine back a quarter for a start we tried to get the fool off the track, but he was armed with a car pin and stood us off.

"The engine came at full speed, 25 or 30 miles an hour easy; that fellow stood staggering drunk in the center of the track and never moved. When the engine reached him he leaned 'way back, set one foot up on the step and she picked him up lake a flash and never even threw him up against the iron hand rail! They went back to the saloon and one more drink apiece put 'em both asleep."

THE THIEF ON THE SHIP.

"Mrs. Melhurst's compliments, sir, and would you please come down to her stateroom immediately?"

I had just shut myself into my little office on deck, having run through the ship's accounts before turning in that night. It is quite a mistake, by the way, to think that we pursers have no more onerous duties to perform when at sea than to watch over the passengers' comfort, read papers on Sunday and keep a store of nautical information at our finger ends for the benefit of every curious voyager. Nowadays the purser of a crack American liner—making, perhaps, a record passage of six days or so—has his work pretty well cut out for him during the entire voyage.

On the present occasion I had scarcely got my accounts fairly in hand when I was interrupted by a slight tap at the door. I arose at once and opened it, and there stood Mrs. Melhurst's Canadian maid, with flushed face and nervous, agitated manner.

"Is there anything wrong?" I asked, with some surprise, when she had delivered her message.

"There is, sir," she replied, hastily.

"All I know—"

She was about to make some other statement, but pulled herself up suddenly and tripped along the deck without another word.

I switched off the electric light, locked the door and hurried away after her. When I got to Mrs. Melhurst's stateroom I saw at once that something had occurred to cause her serious anxiety. The berths, the couch and even the floors were littered with the contents of cabin trunks and hand-bags. In the midst of the confusion stood the lady herself, looking decidedly perplexed and annoyed.

"This is very singular, Mr. Morse," she said, pointing to an empty jewel case which lay open on the upper berth. "My diamond ornaments are missing."

"You don't say so!" I exclaimed, in sheer astonishment.

"I do say so!" she replied, sharply. "You can see for yourself that they are gone."

"How did it happen?"

"I cannot possibly tell you. At dinner this evening I happened to mention to Mrs. Latimer that I had picked up a certain crescent-shaped brooch on the continent. She expressed a wish to see it. When the tables were cleared I came in here, took out the brooch and left the jewel case lying on the berth, but when I got back the case was empty."

"How long were you absent?"

"Not more than half an hour."

"You are sure you had the key in your possession all the time?"

"Positive. I never let it out of my hand while I was in the saloon."

I was totally staggered. I examined the lock carefully, but there was absolutely nothing to show that it had been tampered with. I could hit upon no better suggestion than that Mrs. Melhurst might possibly have mislaid the jewels somewhere. This had the sole effect of exasperating the lady to such a degree—for it seems that she had already searched every nook and corner in the cabin—that I was glad to beat a retreat in order to lay the matter before the captain.

I had just got to the head of the saloon stairs when I heard some one bounding up after me, three or four steps at a time. I turned and saw Mr. Carter—who, by the way, had made several voyages with us on previous occasions.

"I say, Mr. Morse," he said, taking me confidentially by the arm, "you've got some queer customers on board this trip."

"How so?"

"Why, some one's gone and walked off with my silver cigarette case, a couple of rings and a pair of gold—"

"The deuce!"

"Well, it looks uncommonly like as if the individual you refer to had a hand in the business, for I don't see how any ordinary mortal could get into one's cabin, with the door bolted on the inside, unless he managed to squeeze through the porthole."

"Tell me exactly how it happened."

"My dear fellow, how can I? It's enough to puzzle a Philadelphia lawyer! You see, I went to my stateroom after dinner—I can swear to that—and I remember slinging my cigarette case, rings and a pair of gold sleeve links on the upper berth. Then I put on my dressing gown, stretched myself upon the couch and had a downright good snooze. When I got up, about five minutes ago, I found my trinkets had vanished."

'Pon my word, things were beginning to look serious and no mistake! I lost no time in hunting up the captain and made him acquainted with the state of affairs. He was just as much puzzled as I was myself. The first thing next morning he sent a message to Mrs. Melhurst, requesting a private interview in his cabin on deck. He also signified his wish that I should be present. We both questioned the lady closely, but her replies did not tend to throw any light upon the singular occurrence.

Nevertheless, we determined to keep a close watch upon the stateroom in future. It was pretty evident we had a "black sheep" on board—probably an old hand at the business. For the next few days we had no further complaints. The thief was evidently "lying low," waiting until tranquillity was restored before making a fresh attempt. Meanwhile I kept my eyes open. I observed the little peculiarities of the different passengers and took particular note of the manner in which they occupied their time.

On board ship when you find a man who shows a marked preference for his own society above that of the loungers on deck or habitues of the smoke-room one is inclined to jump at the conclusion that he has some solid reasons for his exclusiveness. If, in addition to this, he happens to be of an uncommunicative disposition, with black hair and swarthy complexion, given to wearing a slouch hat and long coat—rightly or wrongly, you put him down as a decidedly suspicious character.

Now, we happened to have a passenger on board—a Brazilian named De Castro—who tallied in every way with this description. But for the fact that I had conclusive evidence to show he could not have been directly concerned in the robberies—for inquiries proved he had remained on deck the whole evening—he certainly would have been treated to a private interview in the captain's cabin. As it was, I was forced to conclude that black hair, swarthy complexion, slouch hat and cloak were quite compatible with a man's innocence.

Nothing further occurred to excite suspicion until the last day or two of the voyage. Then, one evening after dinner, word was brought to me that three other staterooms had been rifled in the same mysterious manner. Watches, jewelry and even money had disappeared, though in all three cases the passengers stoutly declared they had left their doors locked.

When the alarm reached me I happened to be standing in my deck office. I had in my hand 20 sovereigns, which I had just taken in exchange for American money to accommodate one of our passengers. I didn't wait to lock up the gold; I simply placed it on my desk, switched off the light and hurried away. I had no fear for the safety of the sovereigns, my door having a particularly intricate lock, in which I took good care to turn the key before leaving.

I remained below for an hour or so, investigating these fresh complaints, but, as in the other cases, I was utterly unable to make head or tail of them. Vexed and bewildered, I went back to my office, unlocked the door, turned on the light, and mechanically stretched out my hand to take the sovereigns from the desk. My hand closed upon nothing more solid than thin air—my little pile of gold had vanished!

For a moment or two I stood there gazing blankly before me, so utterly confused and dismayed that I could scarcely bring my wits to bear upon the mysterious affair. Then I managed to pull myself together, and took a look around my little cabin. In the course of my observations my eye happened to rest upon the port hole, which stood wide open, the weather being oppressively hot.

I regarded the innocent looking porthole with the air of a veritable Sherlock Holmes. I went outside and thrust my arm in through the opening, but my hand did not reach within fully two yards of the desk. Still, it struck me as being the only way by which the thief could have got at the money, and I determined to put my theory to a practical test.

I hurried down into the saloon, where most of the passengers were congregated. As yet few of them were aware of the robberies, for we had kept the matter as secret as possible. I went straight up to a young American gentleman who I knew had a great many trinkets in his stateroom and was rather careless too in the way he left them lying about.

"Don't show any surprise," I whispered, glancing around at the other occupants of the saloon, "but might I ask whether your stateroom is locked?"

"It is."

"And the porthole open?"

"I should say so! I don't want to find the place as stuffy as the engine-room when I go to turn in."

"Well, just pass me your key; I want to try a little experiment. Wait till I'm gone and then stroll up on deck. Let yourself be seen—on the lower deck particularly—but don't pay too close attention to anyone you may notice loitering there."

He fell in readily with my scheme.

I went and shut myself in the stateroom, crouching down so that I could just keep an eye on the porthole over the top of the lower berth. I remained in that cramped position until my limbs fairly ached, and I was half inclined to give it up as a bad job.

But suddenly, as I glanced up at the porthole, my blood ran cold, and in all my life I never had such difficulty to keep down a yell. In the dim light I saw a long, thin hairy arm thrust in through the opening. The next moment a small black hand had fastened upon a leather case lying close to the window and withdrew it as quick as thought almost.

I sprang to my feet and bolted outside into the passage. I dashed up the saloon stairs and made for the lower deck. There, just about the spot where I judged the stateroom to be situated, I came face to face with the Brazilian, De Castro. In spite of the heat he was wearing his long cloak with the deep cape, and had his eternal cigarette between his teeth. He looked at me with an air of frank surprise, and I looked at him with an air of profound suspicion.

Suddenly a happy thought flashed through my mind. I turned round and sprang down the saloon stairs, running full tilt against the chief stewart, who was standing at the bottom.

"Get me a handful of nuts—quick!" I cried.

When he brought them I hurried back on deck. The Brazilian had moved away a little toward the stern. I went close up, stood right in front of him, and then began deliberately to crack the nuts.

He regarded me with a pitying sort of look but I paid little attention to him. Presently I saw a corner of the cape drawn aside and behind a pair of small, gleaming eyes fixed greedily upon me.

It was enough. My suspicions were confirmed. I flung the rest of the nuts in the sea, and walking straight up to De Castro, said:

"I must ask you to accompany me to the captain's cabin."

"Vot you mean?" he asked, drawing back.

I was determined to stand no nonsense, and straightway took him by the shoulders. The moment I laid my hands upon him I heard a vicious snarl under his cape; it was pulled suddenly aside and out flew a monkey.

The little brute went at me tooth and nail. I saw the gleam of a knife, too, in the Brazilian's hand, but I let him have my fist straight between the eyes before he could use it, and he measured his length upon the deck.

The quartermaster came running up and the rascal was dragged off to the captain's cabin. When searched there Mrs. Melhurst's diamonds, Mr. Carter's cigarette case and rings and a miscellaneous collection of other valuables were found upon him. In his stateroom we discovered a perforated box, apparently intended for the use of the monkey, who was evidently quite as accomplished as his master.—Cassell's Journal.

COMMISSION IS NAMED.

Men Who Will Decide Upon Venezuela's Boundary Line.

Short Sketch of the Careers of the Appointees—Public Opinion in England Will Recognize What Diplomacy Must Ignore.

Washington, Jan. 2.—The president has announced the composition of the Venezuelan commission which will consist of five members as follows:

David J. Brewer, of Kansas, associate justice of the supreme court of the United States.

Richard HH. Alvey, of Maryland, chief justice of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia.

Andrew D. White, of New York.

Frederick R. Coudert, of New York.

Daniel C. Gilman, of Maryland, president of the Johns Hopkins university.

The commission is regarded here among those who had an opportunity to see the list of names, after they were made public, as a very satisfactory one, whose opinions and conclusions will be received by the American public with that confidence which the standing of the members of the commission in the public eye inspires.

Associate Justice Brewer.

David Josiah Brewer, associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, was born in Smyrna, Asia Minor, June 28, 1837. His father, Rev. Josiah Brewer, was laboring at the time as a missionary among the orientals. His mother was a sister of David Dudley, Cyrus W. and Stephen J. Field. Justice Brewer received his education at the Wesleyan university and at Yale, from which he graduated in 1856. He studied law in the office of his uncle, David Dudley Field, in New York city, and subsequently graduated at Albany law school in 1858. He was admitted to the bar in New York city. He did not immediately enter upon the practice of his profession, but for a year after his admission carried on farming in Stockbridge, Mass. In 1859 he moved to Kansas City, Mo., and subsequently located at Leavenworth, Kan. In 1862 he was elected probate judge and judge of the criminal courts of Leavenworth county, Kan. From 1865 to 1869 he was judge of the district court. In 1869 he was elected county attorney of Leavenworth, and held that position until he was elected justice of the supreme court of the state of Kansas. That was in 1870. He was reelected to the same position in 1876 and continued to occupy a seat on the supreme bench of the state till he was appointed judge of the United States circuit court for the Eighth district in 1884. In December, 1889, he was nominated to succeed Justice Stanley Matthews on the supreme bench of the United States and his nomination was confirmed December 18, 1889.

Andrew D. White.

Andrew Dickson White, of New York, is also distinguished as an educator. He is a native of New York, having been born at Homer, in that state, in November, 1832. He is of New England parentage, and also a graduate of Yale university. He was president of the state convention of New York in October, 1861, and was United States minister to Germany from 1879 till 1881. Mr. White was also one of the United States commissioners to Santo Domingo, and aided in preparing the report of that commission. Mr. White was also for a brief period under Gen. Harrison's administration, the American minister to St. Petersburg.

President Gilman, of Johns Hopkins.

Daniel Colt Gilman is distinguished as an educator. He is a graduate of Yale college, and has been an extensive traveler in Europe, where he gave great attention to the social, political and educational condition of various countries. In 1875 he was elected the first president of Johns Hopkin's university in Baltimore. Among the many works that he has written is a memoir of James Monroe, which was prepared for the American Statesman. His fame as a scientist and historian is world wide. Mr. Gilman is said not to be affiliated with any political party, but his tendencies are inclined to the republican organization. He is a native of Connecticut, and in his 65th year.

Judge Alvey.

Judge Richard Henry Alvey, who President Cleveland has announced as a member of the Venezuelan commission, is a native of Maryland. He was on the judiciary committee of the constitutional convention of 1867, and was elected chief judge of the Fourth circuit under the new constitution and was reelected in 1882. He was designated by Gov. Hamilton as chief justice of the court of appeals of Maryland to succeed Judge Bartol. This place he resigned to accept the office of chief justice of the federal court of appeals in the District of Columbia. This court had just been created by act of congress, and President Cleveland strongly urged Judge Alvey to take the place of chief judge and organize the new court.

Frederick R. Coudert.

Frederick R. Coudert is the head of the law firm of Coudert Brothers, of New York city. He has a world-wide reputation as an advocate and an authority on international law. He served with distinction on the Behring sea commission, and was complimented by the president of the French republic for his speech before the commission, and was entertained at the palace. Mr. Coudert was president of the Manhattan club for several years, and is now a member of nearly a dozen prominent New York clubs. He is a democrat and is classed as anti-Tammany. He presided at a mass meeting at Cooper Union called to oppose Tammany in 1894. He is a brilliant orator and a shrewd advocate. He has been one of the leaders of the New York bar for many years, and has been engaged in many famous cases. His firm administers the affairs of many French estates and investors in this country.

Comments of English Journals.

London, Jan. 3.—The Westminster Gazette, in an article on the subject of the appointment of the United States Venezuelan boundary commission, says: "Great Britain should treat the Venezuelan commission with perfect politeness and give them all possible informal assistance, though not admitting their jurisdiction, but should not allow British officials to give evidence of their public capacity."

The St. James Gazette regrets the absence of ex-United States Ministers Lincoln and Phelps from the commission, but highly commends the appointment of Messrs. White and Gilman.

The Daily News says that the nominations will command general respect in England, where public opinion will readily recognize a commission which diplomacy must necessarily ignore. Its report cannot fail to be instructive to both sides. During the interval of the inquiry the jingoes of both sides will confer the greatest possible benefit on humanity by not making any noise.

The Morning Post says: None of the members of the commission except Justice Brewer and Hon Andrew D. White has any claim to occupy the great position assigned to him, while Mr. Frederick R. Coudert, on any principle of fair play or common sense, is disqualified by his public declarations. The position of the gentlemen appointed is in complete harmony with the overbearing language of President Cleveland's Venezuelan message.

Hearing Set for January 20.

Washington, Jan. 7.—At the request of Attorney General Harmon, the supreme court of the United States Monday set for hearing on the 20th inst. the cases presenting the long and short haul clause of the inter-state commerce act for judicial construction and settlement. The Coffin bank wrecking case, from Indianapolis, will be argued the first Monday in March.

Dry-Goods House Burned Out.

Guelph, Ont., Jan. 7.—The large dry-goods store of J. D. Williamson & Co. was gutted by fire Sunday night, causing a loss of $40,000; insurance, $39,000.

SHERMAN'S CURE.

Ohio Senator Presents a Remedy for Financial Ills.

Washington, Jan. 4.—The resolution offered by Senator Sherman (rep., O.) in relation to the reserve fund was laid before the senate and Senator Sherman addressed the senate.

Senator Sherman opened his speech by a reference to the two recent messages of the president of the United States in relation to the Monroe doctrine and to the condition of the national finances. As to the former, he remarked that congress had "perhaps too hastily, but with entire unanimity" supported the president in maintaining the interests and honor of the country "in the field of diplomacy," but as to the latter congress had not approved and would not approve his recommendations as to the financial policy and especially as to the currency. The president had mistaken the cause of the present financial condition in attributing it to the demand for gold for United States notes instead of to the deficiency of revenue caused by the legislation of the last congress, thus placing the effect before the cause. And he had proposed as a remedy the conversion of United States notes and treasury notes into interest-bearing bonds, "thus increasing the interest-bearing debt nearly $50,000,000." The president had proposed a line of policy that would produce a sharp contraction of currency, add greatly to the burden of existing debts, and arrest the progress of almost every American industry that competed with foreign productions.

In these views the president was supported by the secretary of the treasury. It was with diffidence that he (Senator Sherman) undertook to controvert their opinions, but his convictions were so strong that they were in error that he hoped to convince the senate by the facts which he would submit that the true line of public policy was to supply the government with ample means to meet current expenses and to pay each year a portion of the public debt. The only difficulty in the way of an easy maintenance of United States notes at par with coin was the fact that during the administration the revenues of the government had not been sufficient to meet the expenditures.

"It is humiliating to read in the newspapers of the day that our government is negotiating for money from associated bankers and, like a distressed debtor in view of the bankruptcy, is offered by a friendly power its accumulated gold to relieve us from our supposed financial distress. The true remedy is to supply by taxation in some form additional revenue and until this can be effected to borrow from the people of the United States enough money to cover past and future deficiencies.

"Congress," Senator Sherman continued, "neglected to cure the defects pointed out by me as secretary of the treasury in December, 1880, but I hope will correct them now at the request of the president. Notes once redeemed should only be reissued for gold coin, and such reissues should be mandatory when coin is deposited in the treasury."

The resumption fund should be segregated from all other moneys of the United States and paid out only in redemption of United States notes. With such provisions in the law the resumption fund could not be invaded to meet deficiencies in the revenue. They should be provided for by bonds or certificates of indebtedness, of such denominations at a low rate of interest which would be readily taken by the people through national banks, subtreasuries and post offices.

Further on in his speech Senator Sherman spoke of the president's complaint that notes were presented and paid, reissued and paid again and again, making a continuous circuit. When, he asked, had that circuit commenced? It had commenced when this administration (supported by the last congress) had created a deficiency, and it continued because the deficiency continued.

The free coinage of silver he regarded as the most dangerous policy of all. There was scarcely a doubt but that in all probable conditions of trade or finance (except the contingency of war), the whole mass of United States notes and treasury notes now in circulation could be maintained at par with coin if it were supported by a reserve of gold or bullion, or silver bullion in due proportions, equal to one-third or one-fourth of the amount of such notes.

Senator Mills (dem., Tex.) took issue with the statement of Senator Sherman that the tariff act of 1893 was the cause of the present financial difficulties.

Senator Mills said the burden belonged to the 51st congress, and Senator Sherman was partly responsible for the legislation of that congress. The democrats had turned over to the Harrison administration in 1889 $230,000,000. How was it, he asked, if the claim that the McKinley act had produced sufficient revenue was true, that in 1893, when the democrats again assumed control, all that surplus was gone, consumed and dissipated?

WAS A FAILURE.

Second Strike of Philadelphia Carmen a Fiasco.

Philadelphia, Jan. 4.—The second strike of the motormen and conductors of the Union Traction company was a dismal failure and was over before it was fairly begun. The strike was ordered at the mass meeting of about 450 of the men held early Friday morning. The strike was disapproved by the leaders of the association and the more conservative element among the men and when it was inaugurated only about 1,000 of 1,500 employes of the Traction company went out. At no time was any of the departments of the road completely tied up and by noon the cars were practically running on every division on schedule time. There were no disturbances of any kind. President Mahon, of the Amalgamated association has expelled Lutz, a member of the executive committee from the order on the ground that he had ordered the strike without authority. It is now probable that the men will try to have any grievances they have adjusted by peaceable means.

Fatal Mirth.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Nicholas Klughardt, 22 years old, of South Bend, Ind., laughed so violently at a performance given at a local theater Sunday that he burst an artery and died soon afterwards. He went to the theater with a friend, and before the performance was over complained of feeling choked, and they went into the open air. When two blocks away he had a severe hemorrhage and died in a drug store. A bad cough of long standing aggravated the attack.

Fearful Disaster in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Jan. 3.—Six persons were killed and 31 others received injuries more or less serious as the result of an explosion that occurred Thursday afternoon at 309 Second street. A loss of at least $100,000 resulted to the buildings and their contents, which were destroyed by the explosion or damaged by fire or water. This is fully covered by insurance.

Assigned.

Baltimore, Jan. 7.—Morton C. Stout, the merchant tailor, corner of Baltimore and Liberty streets, assigned Monday to Moses R. Walter, a lawyer. The assets are about $30,000; liabilities, about $30,000. The assignment covers branch stores in Washington, D. C., and in Wheeling, W. Va.

Shot by His Wife's Father.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 7.—Near Forrest City, Ark., W. D. Logan went forth to kill W. C. Ferguson, the father of the wife who had left him, and had his own head blown from his shoulders by Ferguson.

NO DOCTORS' BILLS.

In Sweden the Price of Service Is Left with the Patient.

Sweden has doctors, but no doctor's bills. If you have occasion to call a physician you will find him not only skillful in his profession, but a highly educated and most honorable gentleman. You will also have another proof of the honesty of the Swedes and their friendly confidence in each other.

Swedish doctors send no bills to their patients.

What you shall pay your physician is left entirely to your own choice. The rich pay him liberally whether they have need of his services or not, if he has been once retained by them. The poor pay him a small sum and the very poor pay him nothing. Yet he visits the poor as faithfully as he does the rich.

On the last day of the year you put into an envelope, addressed to your physician, a sum of money which you think not only sufficient to compensate him, but in accordance with your own position in life, and inclosing your card with the money, send the envelope by a servant to your doctor. The servant returns with the card of the doctor in a sealed envelope directed to you. This shows that he has received your money and no word about the matter ever passes between you.

Should you send him nothing he will come and prescribe for you all the next year and as long as you live, and he is too dignified ever to say a word about it.

THE FAMOUS ALERT.

A Historic Ship That Has Just Been Sold for Her Metal.

Beached upon the Beauport shoals, near Quebec, lies the old steamship Alert, remarks the New York Sun, which in 1875-76 was moored nearer to the north pole than any other vessel has ever been. She was the flag ship of the Nares artic expedition and lay all winter at Floeburg, 82 degrees 14 minutes north latitude. In 1883 she was presented by the British government to our government to take part in the Greely relief expedition, and after that successful enterprise she was returned with thanks to the British. In 1885 she was loaned to the Canadian government to investigate the navigability of the Hudson strait, and to bring back the party of explorers left upon its banks in 1884 by the Neptune. On this trip the Alert was commanded by Capt. Gordon, and for three weeks was jammed in a field of ice. It was her last northern voyage. The imperial authorities presented her to the Canadian government, and the latter, finding her at last unseaworthy, after employing her for some time in the buoy and lighthouse service, sold her at auction several days ago. She was bought for $4,000 by a ship builder of St. John for the sake of her old metal and other materials.

EARLIEST ONIONS PAY.

There's a market gardener in Minnesota. He is prosperous, makes his money on earliest vegetables, gets his seeds from Salzer, follows Salzer's instructions how to grow 1000 bu. per acre and sells Salzer's King of the Earliest onion already in July and gets $1.50 a bu.! Catalogue tells all about it and of lots of other seed for garden and farm! 35 packages earliest vegetables $1.00.

IF YOU WILL CUT THIS OUT AND SEND it with 12c. stamps to John A. Salzer, La Crosse, Wis., you will get free his catalogue and a package of yellow watermelon sensation. (K.)

DELANO DIARY

BUFFALO GAZETTE and D MORIST'S MAGAZINE One year for $2.50.

--Dr. Niven will be in Rockford, Jan. 13; Delano, 14 and 15; Waverly, 16; Haward Lake 18 and 19. See Add.

—This week's Eagle calls the Supreme Court a "boby" and in another place, says: "If you read it in the Eagle it is so."

--Beginning Sunday, Jan. 12 the morning passenger train east will leave Delano about 6:20 a. m., and west in evening about 9:20 p. m. 15.

--The Methodist and Presbyterian churches observed the week of prayer by holding meetings each evening at the Methodist church. Quite a few attended.

—Since last Friday a few cold nights have been spent. A couple of times the thermometers indicated 22 degrees below zero. Otherwise the present winter has been one of more than usual mildness.

—On the inside of this paper see the article "Comission is Named" for sketches of the men who constitute the Venezuela boundary line commission recently appointed by President Cleveland.

—L. M. Maxfield expects to live in his son-in-law Green's house till spring, when he will rebuild, his own having burned last Sunday. Mr. Green will move over the store to vacate his premises for Mr. Maxfield.

--January is here and we have had but little severe winter weather. Hay is being sold for $4 50 to $5.00 per ton. Now is the time to lay in what is needed till spring, as we are apt to have big snow storms in March and need lots of feed while it is hard to move it.

—The Howard Lake Herald says: "Straws show which way the wind blows. The oil trade of Howard Lake, by the records, exceeded last year that of Delano, Rockford. Waverly or Watertown, and Morgan & Co. sold more than any one firm in these towns." What ails Saylor now? Dont he know Delano uses electric lights? If he doesn't, suppose he consults the "wise men of the east."

—Yesterday afternoon what might have been a serious accident occurred. While Buck's woodsaw was at work in front of Len Dedrick's, and Dedrick, Tom Shaw and Mike O'Hair were looking on, standing on the edge of the sidewalk, the saw burst and a piece flew along where the bystanders were, giving some of them slight bruises and considerable of a scare. It is not always safe to stand too near to machinery of any kind when it is in motion.

—The M. E. services were just getting under way Sunday evening when the fire alarm was given. Church was dismissed and most everybody went to Maxfield's to see his dwelling burn. The fire had made such headway that there wos no stopping it. Mrs. M. got her aged father out in time to prevent harm to him. Sam Coffin who was occupying a room upstairs and attending school, lost most of his effects. The furniture in the lower rooms was nearly all saved. Insurance on the building. The fire is supposed to have caught around the chimney.

—While Editor Wharton is receiving praise from most of his exchanges for the able manner in which he is conducting the Eagle, now-a-days, there is quite a little dissatisfaction expressed among those who have read week after week the viscious and uncalled for attacks upon innocent and defenceless citizens for the past score of years, under previous management. The innovation is certainly a very great one, and perhaps our community will be in a better frame of mind generally, when the remembrance of the foul seeds of discord sown to the winds, have been forgotten.

--A Good Templars Lodge was organized in Delano, Saturday evening Jan. 4, by E. H. Godfrey, G. S. F. F. Farber assisted by others had obtained something like 30 signatures of persons favorable to the organizing and the G. S. was notified and promptly responded to the call. 16 joined as charter members. Officers elected and installed as follows: C. T., Mrs J. L. Farber; V. T., Miss Mary Catlin; R. Sec., F. W. Parslow; Assistant; Miss Erma Wilder; F. S., Miss Ollie Johns; Treas., Miss Anna Parslow; Chap., T. J. Catlin; P. C. T., Wm. Sleight; Marshal, A. E. Powell; Deputy Mar., Miss Stella Davis; Guard, Mrs. C. H. Green; Sentinel, F. F. Farber. Dr. Catlin was recommended for appointment as Lodge Deputy. Lodge to be held every Saturday evening in I. O. O. F. Hall. Those joining tomorrow evening will be considered Charter members.

Mrs. Jonas Johnson returned home this morning from Mayville, N. D., where she has been for a few weeks visiting her son, the Professor, and family.

Editor Whittaker of the Commoner made us a neighborly visit on Monday evening. He thinks the Eagle has improved greatly, under the new management.

Sawin Dyer, a former resident of Delano, now of Excelsior, was in town yesterday. He was the man on the Hayward jury who was sick. County Cullings.

Smith Lake claims to be out two barns and almost a post office by the incendaries' hand. They ought to catch him or her, once.

Archie Gillmer, of Smith Lake, was brought before a Justice of the Peace, lately, charged with assaulting a Miss Caffrey. He was bound over in sum of $500, to appear before the Grand Jury, next June.

While we believe it is but right that the county should pay living prices for its printing as well as other necessaries, we do not approve of the combination of five newpapers to "whack up" and secure it on one bid, and we doupt if publications made in accordance with the accepted bid, will stand law when attacked by some good attorney who wishes otherwise.

We did not know until Wednesday when looking over the Commissioners Proceedings in the Auditor's office that Editor Saylor had been promoted to Quintette Editor, and had been allowed the county printing, agreeing to publish a part of it in five papers. Why not abolish your little one hoss affairs, gentlemen and have your Quintette sheet run off in Delano, on the power press. The Herald-Journal-Eagle-Times-Tribune would be quite catchy, and might make a live of it.

We understand that Johnston Mealey has tendered his resignation, as President of the Wright County Agricultural Sotiety. If the Society wishes to continue they had better hold on to Mr. M. He is made of good material for such a position, and would be as likely to place the society on its feet as any one we know of.

The Buffalo Journal arrived promptly on time yesterday morning notwithstanding the recent accusation of the Eagle publisher, that Eaton purposly kept it back, so that it would not get here until after his paper was out.

On Monday would-be-Clerk of Court Vorse proceeded to Buffalo and after filing his certificate of appointment and bond, demanded of the present incumbent that he forthwith vacate the office. Col. O'Leary thought he would wait awhile and give the Supreme Court a chance to decide whether or not he should vacate. Mr. Vorse came back to Delano and the Col. proceeded to attend to the business of the District Court as usual. Should the case go against Mr. O'Leary, his pay would stop, and as Mr Vorse would begin to draw the salary he would doubtless be allowed the privilage of assuming the responsibilities of the office. Attorneys Cutting and Tarbox are engineering Mr. O'Leary's case while Senator Culkin will appear for Mr. Vorse. Politics are powerfully precarious now-a days.

DISTRICT COURT.

Jan. 6. Court re-convened after holiday vacation; Judge Robert Jamison presiding.

The Flour City National Bank vs. Julius Stale, verdict of Jury for the bank damage $115.53. Stay of 30 days allowed.

State of Minnesota vs. Con Czock. Deft. pled guilty; by agreement case continued till next term. Czocks bond fixed at $200.

Town of Albion vs. village of Maple Lake, on motion of Plaintiff, case dismissed.

State of Minnesota vs Herman Ladda, on motion of County Attorney, nolle prosique.

State of Minnesotat vs. Wm. Young, on motion of County Attorney, nolle prosique.

Isaac Knotts vs. Albert Zindler, Jury found for defendant. Stay of twenty days allowed. C. W. Purple is stenographer for the term. Adam Wood, Owen Groves, James Erickson, and Andrew Anderson, Deputy Sheriffs.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

On Jan. 6, at a special meeting, the bond of C. H. Vorse, appointed Clerk of Court, was read and approved.

Jan. 7. The Board all being present, organized for the year, by electing G A. Kemper, Chairman. Committees were appointed as follows: Roads and bridges, Thomas Hudek, August Hafften and John Buckman. Court House, August Hafften, Charles Bugbee and Thomas Hudek. On Taxes, G. A. Kemper, August Hafften, and F. B. Lamson.

Salaries were fixed for the year: Superintendent of Schools, $10 per district, making $1360.

County Attorney, $1200; Clerk of Register of Deeds, $600; Clerk of Judge of Probate $150; Janitor $33 per month.

Bids of Joseph Enghauser and John Couplin were read: Enghauser's bid was accepted.

The names from which Jurors are to be drawn for next term of Court were selected.

There being but one bid, that of H. S. Saylor, for the County Printing, it was accepted. The bid was as follows.

I will publish in the Howard Lake Herald, the Wright County printing for 1896 as per advertisement at legal rates said matter to be set in nonpariel, brevier or long primer type, 100 copies of the financial statement to be furnished free, and Proceedings of the Board of County Commissioners and Board of Equalization to be published in the Herald, Buffalo Journal, Delano Eagle, Wright County Times and Waverly Tribune and proof copies of the above proceedings will be furnished to all the county papers which will use them. The necessary bond will be submitted in the case that bid is accepted. H. S SAYLOR.

Dr. Niven at Rockford, Jan. 13; Delano, Jan. 14, and 15; Waverly, 16. 3t.

Gathered at the County Seat.

On Wednesday while in Buffalo, we noted that Court and the County Commissioners being in session things were a trifle more lively than usual. Billy Cochrane is about again and holds down the Clerk of Court office, while Col. O'Leary and C. H. Vorse wait for the Supreme Court to decide as to who he shall have for "boss." Numerous Deputy Sheriffs were about the Court House, though the original was not in evidence. The Judge of Probate was listening to a display of forensic pyrotecnics before Judge Jamison, who presided with dignity. Attorneys Culkin, Cutting, Tarbox, Pidgeon and a Minneapolis man were looking after the affairs in the Court Room. Joseph Wendell was about the building but said he was not feeling well but had to work. The term of Court has had three Judges so far, and threatens to be as long and entail on the county as great an expense as has most of its predecessors. And lots of people seem to be getting off without punishment. Either officials should be more careful in commencing suits, or conduct them to a proper termination. This way of hauling up a lot of guilty law breakers and turning them loose, or of preferring serious charges, to injure the reputation of inoffensive citizens of the county, and then, with a shadow on their name, letting them go, to make a long term of Court, and distribute to favored ones honors and plums for political preferment, if such it be, is wrong. If a man is guilty he should be punished. If he is innocent he should not be subjected to a summons before a Court for someones selfish ends. Most of these latter day terms of court are far too long and much too expensive for the actual business done. There seems to be a screw loose somewhere, or several of them.

The County Commissioners and Auditor Lamson were busy at work with a basket of free apples on the table. It didn't take them long to hear Charley Shermerhorn of Monticello, swear the scalp presented was that of a she wolf shot by him, and that he had tried his best to kill all the wolves he had seen; they issued an order for the bounty, $15. The majority of the Board are pretty good looking, but we suspect a couple of them might be bald headed as they did business with their hats on; but that is preferable to the incessant and intolerable smoking indulged in by some of their predecessors. We gladly note the improvement in this latter direction. Mr. Tousley, of Howard, and E. H. Sherwin, of Monticello, were in on business with the Auditor.

Treasurer Mattson is out visiting his constituents and taking their contributions to county expenses, school and other taxes, leaving the office in charge of his able assistant, Esq. Junken.

The American House serves out just as good meals as ever and appears to be well patronized.

Dr. Cody says he feels he is growing old. He is one of the old timers in these big woods. Dr. Shannon is quietly awaiting the arrival of his credentials as Pension Examiner. He is one of the kind diligent in business and will attend to matters with promptness.

The Journal had a small fire in one corner of the building Monday morning, charring the cases and furniture, and destroying three years files of the county papers; caused by a lamp falling to the floor; a narrow escape.

The Gorman brothers appeared good natured. We expect Jurry business is good as roads are fine, allowing the most profit of any season of the year.

Post Master Nugent was represented at the delivery by his assistant, Dodd Himself being engaged in Agricultural pursuits these fine spring-like days.

Literary News.

No one ever thought of introducing so expensive a feature as lithographic color work in the days when the leading magazines sold for $4.00 a year and 35 cents a copy. But times change and the magazines change with them. It has remained for the Cosmopolitan, sold at one dollar a year, to put in an extensive lithographic plant capable of printing 320,000 pages per day (one color). The January issue presents as a frontispiece a water-color drawing by Eric Pape, illustrating the last story of Robert Louis Stevenson, which has probably never been excelled even in the pages of the finest dollar French periodicals. The cover of The Cosmopolitan is also changed, a drawing of page length by the famous Paris artist Rossi, in lithographic colors on white paper takes the place of the manilla back with its red stripe. Hereafter the cover is to be a fresh surprise each month.

—Dr. Niven will be in Rockford, Jan. 13; Delano, 14 and 15; Waverly, 16; Haward Lake 18 and 19. See Add.

—This week's Eagle calls the Supreme Court a "boby" and in another place, says: "If you read it in the Eagle it is so."

—Beginning Sunday, Jan. 12 the morning passenger train east will leave Delano about 6:20 a. m., and west in evening about 9:20 p. m. 15.

—The Methodist and Presbyterian churches observed the week of prayer by holding meetings each evening at the Methodist church. Quite a few attended.

—Since last Friday a few cold nights have been spent. A couple of times the thermometers indicated 22 degrees below zero. Otherwise the present winter has been one of more than usual mildness.

—On the inside of this paper see the article "Comission is Named" for sketches of the men who constitute the Venezuela boundary line commission recently appointed by President Cleveland.

—L. M. Maxfield expects to live in his son-in-law Green's house till spring, when he will rebuild, his own having burned last Sunday. Mr. Green will move over the store to vacate his premises for Mr. Maxfield.

—January is here and we have had but little severe winter weather. Hay is being sold for $4 50 to $5.00 per ton. Now is the time to lay in what is needed till spring, as we are apt to have big snow storms in March and need lots of feed while it is hard to move it.

—The Howard Lake Herald says: "Straws show which way the wind blows. The oil trade of Howard Lake, by the records, exceeded last year that of Delano, Rockford, Waverly or Watertown, and Morgan & Co. sold more than any one firm in these towns." What ails Saylor now? Dont he know Delano uses electric lights? If he doesn't, suppose he consults the "wise men of the east."

—Yesterday afternoon what might have been a serious accident occurred. While Buck's woodsaw was at work in front of Len Dedrick's, and Dedrick, Tom Shaw and Mike O'Hair were looking on, standing on the edge of the sidewalk, the saw burst and a piece flew along where the bystanders were, giving some of them slight bruises and considerable of a scare. It is not always safe to stand too near to machinery of any kind when it is in motion.

—The M. E. services were just getting under way Sunday evening when the fire alarm was given. Church was dismissed and most everybody went to Maxfield's to see his dwelling burn. The fire had made such headway that there wos no stopping it. Mrs. M. got her aged father out in time to prevent harm to him. Sam Coffin who was occupying a room upstairs and attending school, lost most of his effects. The furniture in the lower rooms was nearly all saved. Insurance on the building. The fire is supposed to have caught around the chimney.

—While Editor Wharton is receiving praise from most of his exchanges for the able manner in which he is conducting the Eagle, now-a-days, there is quite a little dissatisfaction expressed among those who have read week after week the viscious and uncalled for attacks upon innocent and defenceless citizens for the past score of years, under previous management. The innovation is certainly a very great one, and perhaps our community will be in a better frame of mind generally, when the remembrance of the foul seeds of discord sown to the winds, have been forgotten.

—A Good Templars Lodge was organized in Delano, Saturday evening Jan. 4, by E. H. Godfrey, G. S. F. F. Farber assisted by others had obtained something like 30 signatures of persons favorable to the organizing and the G. S. was notified and promptly responded to the call. 16 joined as charter members. Officers elected and installed as follows: C. T., Mrs J. L. Farber; V. T., Miss Mary Catlin; R. Sec., F. W. Parslow; Assistant; Miss Erma Wilder; F. S., Miss Ollie Johns; Treas., Miss Anna Parslow; Chap., T. J. Catlin; P. C. T., Wm. Sleight; Marshal, A. E. Powell; Deputy Mar., Miss Stella Davis; Guard, Mrs. C. H. Green; Sentinel, F. F. Farber. Dr. Catlin was recommended for appointment as Lodge Deputy. Lodge to be held every Saturday evening in I. O. O. F. Hall. Those joining tomorrow evening will be considered Charter members.

Personals.

Paul E. Burke went west across the river, Monday.

Prof. Hawker was on the sick list the fore part of the week.

John Cunningham spent Sunday in the Sawdust City with friends.

Charley Cooley, of Smith Lake, was home over Sunday "seein' the folks."

George Swadner, of Hutchinson was here visiting relatives and friends this week.

Frank Nagel of Minneapolis is visiting his father-in-law, Frank Smarsik, of Woodland.

Roy Mulford is home from Sedalia, Mo., on a visit with his mother and Delano friends.

Grand Secretary Godfrey, of the I. O. G. T. was in town Saturday. He is a pleasant man to meet.

Emery Cunningham and Miss Grace O'Hair returned Monday evening to their studies in the University.

Chairman Kemper and Mr. Glaseing, of Victor, and Mr. Erickson, of Cokato, were early visitors in town, Monday on their way to Buffalo.

Doctors (in embryo) Kohler and Halgrén, of Watertown, Roberts, of Devil's Lake, and Chance, of Delano spent part of their vacation here.

Mrs. Jonas Johnson returned home this morning from Mayville, N. D., where she has been for a few weeks visiting her son, the Professor, and family.

Editor Whitaker of the Commoner made us a neighborly visit on Monday evening. He thinks the Eagle has improved greatly, under the new management.

Sawin Dyer, a former resident of Delano, now of Excelsior, was in town yesterday. He was the man on the Hayward jury who was sick. He says that was the best jury he ever served on; and things Hayward in the only safe place for the community at large. Mr D. says his sons Hurbert and Arthur are working at their trade, boat building, at Excelsior.

County Cullings.

Smith Lake claims to be out two barns and almost a post office by the incendaries' hand. They ought to catch him or her, once.

Archie Gillmer, of Smith Lake, was brought before a Justice of the Peace, lately, charged with assaulting a Miss Caffrey. He was bound over in sum of $500, to appear before the Grand Jury, next June.

While we believe it is but right that the county should pay living prices for its printing as well as other necessaries, we do not approve of the combination of five newpapers to "whack up" and secure it on one bid, and we doupt if publications made in accordance with the accepted bid, will stand law when attacked by some good attorney who wishes otherwise.

We did not know until Wednesday when looking over the Commissioners Proceedings in the Auditor's office that Editor Saylor had been promoted to Quintette Editor, and had been allowed the county printing, agreeing to publish a part of it in five papers. Why not abolish your little one hoss affairs, gentlemen and have your Quintette sheet run off in Delano, on the power press. The Herald-Journal-Eagle-Times-Tribune would be quite catchy, and might make a live of it.

We understand that Johnston Mealey has tendered his resignation, as President of the Wright County Agricultural Sotiety. If the Society wishes to continue they had better hold on to Mr. M. He is made of good material for such a position, and would be as likely to place the society on its feet as any one we know of.

The Buffalo Journal arrived promptly on time yesterday morning notwithstanding the recent accusation of the Eagle publisher, that Eaton purposly kept it back, so that it would not get here until after his paper was out.

On Monday would-be-Clerk of Court Vorse proceeded to Buffalo and after filing his certificate of appointment and bond, demanded of the present incumbent that he forthwith vacate the office. Col. O'Leary thought he would wait awhile and give the Supreme Court a chance to decide whether or not he should vacate. Mr. Vorse came back to Delano and the Col. proceeded to attend to the business of the District Court as usual. Should the case go against Mr. O'Leary, his pay would stop, and as Mr. Vorse would begin to draw the salary he would doubtless be allowed the privilage of assuming the responsibilities of the office. Attorneys Cutting and Tarbox are engineering Mr. O'Leary's case while Senator Culkin will appear for Mr. Vorse. Politics are powerfully precarious now-a days.

DISTRICT COURT.

Jan. 6. Court re-convened after holiday vacation; Judge Robert Jamison presiding.

The Flour City National Bank vs. Julius Stale, verdict of Jury for the bank damage $115.53. Stay of 30 days allowed.

State of Minnesota ys. Con Czock. Deft. pled guilty; by agreement case continued till next term. Czocks bond fixed at $300.

Town of Albion vs. village of Maple Lake, on motion of Plaintiff, case dismissed.

N. H. Knowles vs. Wm. Dedrick; continued till next term.

State of Minnesota vs. Herman Ladda, on motion of County Attorney, nolle prosiqus.

State of Minnesotat vs. Wm. Young, on motion of County Attorney, nolle prosique.

Isaac Knotts vs. Albert Zeidler, Jury found for defendant. Stay of twenty days allowed. C. W. Purple is stenographer for the term. Adam Wood, Owen Groves, James Erickson, and Andrew Anderson, Deputy Sheriffs.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

On Jan. 6, at a special meeting, the bond of C. H. Vorse, appointed Clerk of Court, was read and approved.

Jan. 7. The Board all being present, organized for the year, by electing G A. Kemper, Chairman. Committees were appointed as follows: Roads and bridges, Thomas Hudek, August Hafften and John Buckman. Court House, August Hafften, Charles Bugbee and Thomas Hudek. On Taxes, G. A. Kemper, August Hafften, and F. B. Lamson.

Salaries were fixed for the year: Superintendent of Schools, $10 per district, making $1360.

County Attorney, $1200; Clerk of Register of Deeds, $600; Clerk of Judge of Probate $120; Janitor $33 per month.

Bids of Joseph Enghauser and John Couplin were read; Enghauser's bid was accepted.

The names from which Jurors are to be drawn for next term of Court were selected.

There being but one bid, that of H. S. Saylor, for the County Printing, it was accepted. The bid was as follows.

I will publish in the Howard Lake Herald, the Wright County printing for 1896 as per advertisement at legal rates said matter to be set in nonpariel, brevier or long primer type, 100 copies of the financial statement to be furnished free, and Proceedings of the Board of County Commissioners and Board of Equalization to be published in the Herald, Buffalo Journal, Delano Eagle, Wright County Times and Waverly Tribune and proof copies of the above proceedings will be furnished to all the county papers which will use them. The necessary bond will be submitted in the case that bid is accepted. H. S SAYLOR.

Dr. Niven at Rockford, Jan. 13; Delano, Jan. 14, and 15; Waverly, 16. 3t.

Gathered at the County Seat.

On Wednesday while in Buffalo, we noted that Court and the County Commissioners being in session things were a trifle more lively than usual. Billy Cochrane is about again and holds down the Clerk of Court office, while Col. O'Leary and C. H. Vorse wait for the Supreme Court to decide as to who he shall have for "boss." Numerous Deputy Sheriffs were about the Court House, though the original was not in evidence. The Judge of Probate was listening to a display of forensic pyrotechnics before Judge Jamison, who presided with dignity. Attorneys Culkin, Cutting, Tarbox, Pidgeon and a Minneapolis man were looking after the affairs in the Court Room. Joseph Wendell was about the building but said he was not feeling well but had to work. The term of Court has had three Judges so far, and threatens to be as long and entail on the county as great an expense as has most of its predecessors. And lots of people seem to be getting off without punishment. Either officials should be more careful in commencing suits, or conduct them to a proper termination. This way of hauling up a lot of guilty law breakers and turn-ing them loose, or of preferring serious charges, to injure the reputation of inoffensive citizens of the county, and then, with a shadow on their name, letting them go, to make a long term of Court, and distribute to favored ones honors and plums for political preferment, if such it be, is wrong. If a man is guilty he should be punished. If he is innocent he should not be subjected to a summons before a Court for someones selfish ends. Most of these latter day terms of court are far too long and much too expensive for the actual business done. There seems to be a screw loose somewhere, or several of them.

The County Commissioners and Auditor Lamson were busy at work with a basket of free apples on the table. It didn't take them long to hear Charley Shermerhorn of Monticello, swear the scalp presented was that of a she wolf shot by him, and that he had tried his best to kill all the wolves he had seen; they issued an order for the bounty, $15. The majority of the Board are pretty good looking, but we suspect a couple of them might be bald headed as they did business with their hats on; but that is preferable to the incessant and intolerable smoking indulged in by some of their predecessors. We gladly note the improvement in this latter direction. Mr. Tousley, of Howard, and E. H. Sherwin, of Monticello, were in on business with the Auditor.

Treasurer Mattson is out visiting his constituents and taking their contributions to county expenses, school and other taxes, leaving the office in charge of his able assistant, Esq. Junken.

The American House serves out just as good meals as ever and appears to be well patronized.

Dr. Cody says he feels he is growing old. He is one of the old timers in these big woods. Dr. Shannon is quietly awaiting the arrival of his credentials as Pension Examiner. He is one of the kind diligent in business and will attend to matters with promptness.

The Journal had a small fire in one corner of the building Monday morning, charing the cases and furniture, and destroying three years files of the county papers; caused by a lamp falling to the floor; a narrow escape.

The Gorman brothers appeared good natured. We expect livery business is good as roads are fine, allowing the most profit of any season of the year.

Post Master Nugent was represented at the delivery by his assistant. Dodd Himself being engaged in Agricultural pursuits these fine spring-like days.

Literary News.

No one ever thought of introducing so expensive a feature as lithographic color work in the days when the leading magazines sold for $4.00 a year and 35 cents a copy. But times change and the magazines change with them. It has remained for the Cosmopolitan, sold at one dollar a year, to put in an extensive lithographic plant capable of printing 320,000 pages per day (one color). The January issue presents as a frontispiece a water-color drawing by Eric Pape, illustrating the last story of Robert Louis Stevenson, which has probably never been excelled even in the pages of the finest dollar French periodicals. The cover of The Cosmopolitan is also changed, a drawing of page length by the famous Paris artist Rossi, in lithographic colors on white paper takes the place of the manilla back with its red stripe. Hereafter the cover is to be a fresh surprise each month.

THE COMING MAN.

He only wants some trousers white,
A silken shirt or two,
A pretty girl, a tennis net,
Green fields and skies of blue.

He only wants an evening suit,
Crush hat, topcoat of gray,
A partner fair, whose dainty feet
Can dance till peep of day,

He only wants a suit of tweed
For mountain or the shore,
A hat of straw, some shoes of tan,
A "stick" like those of yore.

He only wants a "cutaway,"
And trousers smooth and fine,
That he may call on that sweet girl
Before he goes to dine.

Ah, me! He needs a yachting suit,
Cadet or navy blue,
And then a costume for the bath
To cleave the waters through.

All these my blithe young graduate,
With "furnishings galore,"
Can pack into a steamer trunk
When collegiate days are o'er,

Once more, before the lid shuts down
And clasps those locks of steel,
His cycling suit, that he may ride
Upon the scorching wheel.

And thus, you see, the truth is told
In this poor halting song:
"Youth wants but little here below,
Nor wants that little long."

Annie Hungerford in Chicago Times Herald

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE for 1896 is at hand; it is a nice one, even for this old and reliable house.

THE Winona Herald comes out with a good write up of the improvements of that city. It claims $1,020,940. were expended in 1895.

J. H. BLOCK has been appointed a Trustee of the State Hospital Board, by Gov. Clough, to succeed John Peterson, of St. Peter, who is ineligible according to the recent Supreme Court decision, being a member of the Legislature.

THE primary department of the Eden Valley public school is taught in the cheese factory. It is to be hoped the little fellows are not kept on whey, but that they may imbibe enough of the milk of human kindness and enterprise to build a school house as soon as they are big enough.

THE indictment for manslaughter of those having charge of the water supply at Duluth, for the death of a boy from Typhoid Fever caused by the leakage of the pipes and the furnishing of foul water, seems to be a step in the right direction. The city officials, committee on water supply, health officer and others should see to their business and have repairs promptly made when necessary. This applies to other places as well as to Duluth.

FROM the Aitkin Republican we clip the following:

The board of county commissioners, although composed of two Republicans and one Democrat, has no use for a Republican newspaper, as was evidenced at their meeting on Tuesday.

The Age got the county printing is the occasion of this outburst. If papers persist in cutting their neighbors and committing suicide themselves by running down the prices, they ought not to kick too hard when the other fellow beats them at their own game.

THE Toledo Blade calls on Governor Bradley to act, in the case of hunting down the mob that riddled with bullets a man and woman who were living without the pale of the law. "Republican Kentuckey should not permit such outrages." The facts seem to be that Republican Kentucky is as powerless as Democratic Kentucky to suppress such things. All states' regardless of politics, should seek to have law and order. In many cases, if the people would be careful who they elect to high offices, their laws would be better enforced.

Water vs. Land Transportation

From the Nicollet County Independent we clip the following extract:

"Here is a comparison that should be studied by the American voters. Wool is shipped from Australia to Boston, including freight, commission and all other charges of handling and transportation, for one cent per pound, while freight charges alone from most of the shipping points west of the Rocky Mountains range from 1.3 to 2.5 cents per pound, but this does not include the cost of getting the wool from the ranches to the railroads or the water shipping points, nor does it include commissions or other charges not included in actual transportation. Our lands especially adapted to the raising of sheep must be idle in order that our market be surrendered to Australia. —St. Paul Dispatch."

If shipments by water can be made so much cheaper than by land, more attention should be paid to the natural water courses of our country. But in this fast age people almost want to take the wool from the sheep one day and wear it themselves the next. They have no time to wait for the slow but cheap shipments by water when they can save so much time by land. For the Australian wool they must wait, and if it is allowed to come in free, as at present, it won't be long before some of our transportation companies will learn that there is some way of getting wool from our western states to market as cheaply as from Australia. And then Ohio can't be carried for the High Protection party every year because they can raise wool and are nearer market than anybody else. As for farmers in Minnesota, they know as well as anyone, they have learned it by years of experience, that they need good woolen clothing and plenty of it for winter, and that when they don't have it they have sickness, with loss of time, and doctor and medicine bills, and have to hire help to take their places. And they know, also, that the Protective tariff on wool is of no benefit to them; that they do not get more for wool here when there is a tariff than when there is none; that wool is higher at this season of the year because men with money have bought up all there is in the country and are doling it out at good prices to the manufacturers.

Let natures great highways for travel and traffic be used to their fullest extent and the inland states can soon compete with foreign countries in furnishing wool and many other products. Wool is not the only thing that is shipped, but stock, coal wheat, flour, feed, cotton goods, and most of the necessaries and luxuries of life have to be shipped some distance; if water is so much cheaper use it, and it won't be long till faster means will become cheaper.

Tournament of Roses.

BY MISS ISA KERR.

PASADENA, CAL.,
January 4th, write it 1896.

MY DEAR PAPA:—

I wish you one and all a happy and prosperous New Year and am going to try and tell you how I spent New years day, which is considered Pasadena's "great" day and is observed by the "Tournament of Roses."

I came over from Los Angeles on Sunday and am taking a brief vacation from the office. Tuesday morning Ethel, Harold and myself drove to Sierra Madra, about six miles, to the foot of the "trail" up the mountain, tied our horse and climbed about a mile up the "trail," gathering mountain holly, mountain sage and ferns, with which we were to "decorate" for the parade. The holly differs somewhat from the holly we get from the South, it grows on small trees, the foliage is not quite so glossy and the berries much heavier, the trees are similar to high bush cranberries and it requires something of a scramble to gather it. The mountain sage is similar to paraire sage brush but it grows in larger bunches and is much lighter in color.

As we climbed the "trail" the views of the valley were fine and I felt as I imagine an exclamation point would feel were it given animation. One moment we could see nothing but mountains, the next, as we rounded a "hill" we could see the whole San Gabriel Valley and, twenty miles away, the surf line of the Pacific. I can't tell you how beautiful it was or how much I enjoyed it; one cannot look upon mountains and ocean, without being filled with great thoughts, for the time at least.

On our return drive we stole some oranges, which is the regulation thing to do out here.

Wednesday morning we were up bright and early to decorate our buggy made wreaths of holly, trimmed all the wheels with holly and pepper sprays, hung a wreath of holly clear around the box, ferns and sage literally covered the seat, dash board, side bars and shafts and our little horse wore a saddle-blanket of ferns and a collar of holly, very proudly. I mail you a photograph with this, which will give you an idea how we looked. The combination of green with the dark red holly berries and light green sage was very pretty. We started for the "parade" about ten, Ethel driving, both feeling very much on a "holiday."

The "Tournament" is rather a "flower festival" and everybody is interested. The streets were crowded, there were 25,000 people along the line of march and seemingly as many more in carriages packed along the side streets and in the parade. I cannot describe floats and carriages so as to give one who had never seen anything of the kind, an adequate idea of how they looked. As we turned down Colorado street, the Nicollet Avenue of Pasadena, I shall never forget the sight which met our eyes. We were at the top of a little hill and could see the floats going up another hill at the end of the street, and all the way along there seemed to be a moving mass of flowers, pampas-plumes, pepper boughs, and ribbons. I wondered how we would get through the numberless carriages and unusual sights and sounds which were not as comprehensible to horses as they were to us. However, I had unlimited faith in the ability of the little lady who was handling the ribbons over our surprised little steed, and the perfect understanding which existed between them, so I had no thought of fear. We drove for four hours and had no accident and heard of none.

In the equestrian division of the parade there were many ladies riding man-fashion and wearing divided skirts, not bloomers. Each school had a "float," and there were six-in-hands, and four-in-hands, the fire department, bicycle division, double carriages, single carriages, pony carts and tandems, and several "burros," all profusely, many very ingeniously decorated.

I wish I could describe it so you could imagine how it all looked The California sun was doing business "at the same old stand," showing no evidence of feeling the "general depression," so frequently referred to in Bradstreet's reviews lately, warm as a late June or early July day in Minnesota, palms, orange trees and hedges green and lovely, everybody out for a good time, dressed as though it was midsummer, mercury about 80 deg. The dust, which is much in evidence here at present, was not quite sprinkled down, but it fell on the just and the unjust alike so no one complained. Altogether it was a time and sight long to be remembered. Hotel Green furnished dinner to 2,000 people and all hotels and restaurants were taxed to the utmost.

After lunch we went to the races on the new bicycle track. They were smooth and interesting, finish close in nearly every case, but no particularly fast time was made. I could hardly realize that we were not celebrating July 4th. I am so accustomed to thinking of cold weather and snow in connection with New Years day.

Our seats faced the mountains and as the sun went down they seemed to be hung with velvet draperies of every shade between deep purple and pale rose color, and we could see the signals from the Mount Lowe Hotel, 3,600 feet above us. We had a late dinner, spent the evening talking it over, retired early well satisfied with the day and our enjoyment of it. I only wish that I could know you would all be here to witness the next "Tournament of Roses."

Yours as ever,
ISABEL.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jany. 10, 1896.

The whip of the Quay-Platt-Reed combine seems to be just as effective among the republicans of the Senate as it was in the House, but it had to be heavily laid upon some of the republican Senators before they would agree to support the tariff bill arranged by Mr Reed and passed by his House, without amendment. They swore through two long caucuses that some McKinley amendments should be attached to the bill or they would not support it, but at the third caucus Boss Quay's wielding of the combine whip was more than they could stand and they agreed to support the bill without amendment, scoring another decisive victory for the Quay-Platt-Reed combine. But this does not make it certain that Mr. Reed's tariff bill will pass the Senate. Some votes will have to be gotten either from the democrats or the populists to pass it, and if it passes President Cleveland will never sign it.

There is a very decided difference of opinion in Washington as to how that call for bids for the purchase of bonds will result, the majority seeming to be on the side of those who think private individuals will not bid, because they havn't the gold.

Senator Gray, of Del., jumped upon the idiotic idea advanced by Lodge, of Mass., and supported by Chandler ("Little Biller"), of N. H., that the editor of the New York World had committed high treason by optaining and publishing the views of prominent Englishmen on the Venezuela matter and the issue of bonds, with the following vigorous language: "Now, in the evening of the nineteenth century, you cannot bark back on the track of the dead centuries and attempt to stifle expression or effort to obtain expression in this country or abroad. In this country and in all civilized countries a just public opinion is the final arbiter of all questions. It is not necessary for me to say, if this suggestion is seriously made, that it is impossible in this day and hour to attempt any inquisitorial interpretation of a statute for the purpose of stifling an expression of public opinion."

There are lots of lawyers in both House and Senate who regard the Supreme Court decision against the constitutionality of the income tax as a mistaken one, but Senator Vest is the first one of them who has openly attacked the decision. In the course of a speech, answering Senator Sherman's recent financial speech, Senator Vest said of it: "In my judgement no judgement has ever in the history of the country been rendered which has done so much to destroy the influence of that high tribunal and excite distrust on the part of the people of this country." He declared that he would not trust himself to say in the Senate what he thought of that decision, but would leave it to members of the court who dissented therefrom, and he read from two of those opinions. Referring to the effect of the decision he said: "It marks a new era, and I greatly mistake if the time does not come when neither soft words nor honeyed praises will prove a sufficient apology."

That "Hog combine" was a fitting name for the gang who secured all the offices of the House was made apparent to all when it attempted to create 48 new offices, in order to provide for that many more of their followers. But the dose was too big, or the members of the Committee on Accounts, which has charge of the House contingent fund from which it was proposed to pay these 48 additional officers, were not "fixed." At any rate to the surprise of the "hog combine," the committee reported that "in view of the low ebb of the contingent fund, and the utter needlessness of most of the places" it could only recommend the appointment of three of the 48 new officials provided for in the resolution. Spirited attacks were made on the "hog combine" by Johnson, of Ind., and Walker, of Mass. the latter declaring that officers of the House were not appointed by a majority of the members, nor by the Speaker, but were parceled out by the combine.

Senator Mills, of Texas, has been "jollying" the republicans unsparingly about that House tariff bill, now in the Senate. He offers his congratulations to the rebublicans of the House for having, after many years abuse of the democratic idea of a tariff for revenue only, passed the only strictly revenue tariff bill that ever went through either branch of Congress. The republicans try to escape the charge of inconsistency by claiming the bill to be an "emergency" measure, but the claim does not work.

If Gov. Morton could have heard the conversation at a conference held at the Washington residence of Senator Quay one night this week it might have been worth good money to him. Those who met Senator Quay were Boss Platt, Joe Manley, J. S. Clarkson and Chauncey I. Filley. The conference lasted nearly all night.

It was really amusing to hear Senator Morrill, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, which has a majority of republicans, disclaiming responsibility in the name of the republican party for the action of the committee in reporting a free coinage bill as a substitute for the House bond bill.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

There is no excitement in this neck of the woods at present. Everything is quiet and lamb like. Most of our news is about war, money and bonds, and who will be the next President of this Corporation Republic,

And from the way it looks now our next President is sure to come from the tribe of Levi, the Rebublican party: for the way it looks on the political map now no other need apply unless there should be a falling away and geeat change of heart.

And when the Democratic party goes out of power one year from next March, we hope they will have a clear conscience if not an empty pocket: for you know a clear conscience and an empty pocket is evidence that they have kept the faith and trusted in Providence.

Farmers are becoming somewhat discouraged for it seems we have no leader. It is eyident our President is not in much sympathy with the farmer, for in his message he said nothing about the agricultural industry, and of all the indusrsies America has, agriculture is the greatest; and yet it is ignored by all the high faluten aristocracy of the country. Should the farmers, stock raisers and all producers withhold their stuff for two weeks they could bring the whole world to them; but this they will never do, for it seems they never can become thoroughly organized as a body.

Our winter weather is all we could desire. Most every day pleasant. If we only had good sleighing it would be better in many respects.

The public installation of officers of Gorden Grange Post 120, G. A. R. and also W. R C, No. 63, on last Saturday enening, at School House Hall, Maple Plain, was quite largely attended, and Steven B Howard, of Minneapolis, gave us quite a good talk.

There are not many sick reports during the last week.

There will be a Prohibition Lecture at the Advent church on next Friday evening, 17th present month, at 7:30 by B. L. Rockwood. All are invited to come out.

The Rockford Magazine Club will give an entertainment at School House Hall, Maple Plain, Saturday evening, January 18, 1896, beginning at 8 P. M. Tickets, 15 cents.

Quite a good many are putting up ice. The crop of ice is very good.

A good many of our farmers are trying the milk and creamery business. They seem to think it will pay better than wheat and it certainly can not give less returns.

George Washington was before the Examining Board in Minneapolis one day last week.

Quite a number of our townspeople still have the southern fever. They seem to be anxious for a warmer climate. JOHN H. MCGARY.

Among Our Exchanges.

Hastings will contest the legality of the last action of the commission in relocating the fourth state insane hospital at Anoka. This war promises to be bloody and much longer in duration than Cleveland's Venezuelan war. If in the end some of the commissioners are not fit subjects for incarceration in the institution they are trying to establish, it will be a wonder.—Moorhead News.

It now transpires that Dairy Commissioner Anderson was not a full-fledged citizen until last Tuesday. It seems a little peculiar that good paying offices should be doled out to people who are not full citizens at least if not nativeborn. Atwater has several Andersons who are both and would not refuse a decent, snug berth of this description, If the governor is in need of them, send us word.—Atwater Republican.

The case of Editor Hoskins for libel against C. D. Wright and the First National bank, of Fergus Falls, was dismissed by Judge Searle yesterday morning at that place, for want of prosecution. The Journal says: "This case of Hoskins against Judge Baxter and the banks and others has cost the taxpayers over $900 at this term of court. He can now bring a new suit and continue his antics. Under our laws there is no end to the number of suits he can bring, and he is not even required to put up a bond to pay the costs.—St. Cloud Times.

IN Pennsylvania there are now no "three days of grace" on notes and bills. Pennsylvania has "fallen from grace."

PREPARATIONS are making for extensive prospecting for oil in ten counties of eastern Kentucky next spring. The indications of the extensions of valuable oil fields in that region are said to be promising.

MARRIAGE licenses were issued in Philadelphia recently to Alexander Lopovska and Martzianna Choplevska, and to Frank Jankowska and Wanda Wadjinski. Surely this ought to have ended the railway strike.

PRESIDENT DOLE wants to annex Hawaii to the United States and Denmark wants to sell the island of St. Thomas and other islands to the United States. We seem to be destined to go into the real estate business.

IT is said that there is no word for weather in the language of the Kanakas; the temperature of the Sandwich islands is so equable and mild that the natives have never had occasion to speak of the weather, or think about it. But what do they do for something to talk about?

IN a biographical sketch, intended to be wholly complimentary, of a banker in a Kansas town, a newspaper says the banker "has forged his way from a clerkship to a position in the firm." Obviously it would be a delicate and difficult task to undertake to explain that the use of the unfortunate figure of speech was well meant.

THE chairman of the finance committee of the Atlanta exposition reports that the big fair cost the city of Atlanta about $200,000 and that it is estimated that the money spent in Atlanta by visitors and brought there on account of the exposition amounts to $5,000,000, while the incidental benefits to the whole cotton region are much greater.

NEW YORK reports the number of deaths in that city during 1895 as 43,419, against 41,175 in 1894. The death-rate was 23.15 against 22.76. There were 11,120 deaths under 1 year of age. The total marriages were 29 612, and the total births 53,731. There is an average of 119 deaths in New York every day, an average of 150 births, and an average of 59 marriages.

FIVE systems of law are in use in Germany; 18,000,000 people live under the Prussian code, 2,500,000 under the Saxon, 7,500,000 under the French code civil, 14,000,000 under the German commercial code, the modernized form of Roman law, and 500,000 under the Scandinavian law. It is proposed to substitute a new code, the draft of which was completed last year, for all the older laws.

AN Ohio judge has given the new woman increased responsibilities. He has decided that wives are legally responsible for the support of their husbands and their families, provided the husbands themselves are unable to furnish the support. The law of Ohio is very similar to that of Illinois, Iowa and California. The case which called out the decision was a suit for a balance of $22 on a tailor bill of venerable date, and the wife, who has real estate valued at $10,000, will have to pay it.

THE new woman has arrived in force in Rockland, Me. The town has a woman justice of the peace, a woman court stenographer, three women who have made an ironclad agreement to wear bloomers—date, however, left blank—and a woman who successfully opposed woman suffrage in a public debate a few evenings ago. The argument of the last woman was that, if a woman is not smart enough to control a man's vote under the present suffrage scheme, she isn't smart enough to have a vote herself.

AN analysis made by the Inter Ocean shows that 1,328 persons died from violent causes in Chicago during the last year. Of this large number 495 were killed willfully by their own hands or by others; they were victims of murder or suicide. Not less than 377 voluntarily rid themselves of this "life's mystery," and risked a premature experience of the great mystery of the other life. One hundred and eighteen were murdered. Twenty of the 118 murderers went wholly untouched by justice. Of the 98 murderers upon whom the police laid hands but one suffered death by hanging.

REPORTS made to the director of the mint indicate that the production of the precious metals in the United States during last year included $52,614,000 worth of gold and 51,000,000 fine ounces of silver. The director thinks it probable that some of the items from the different states have been exaggerated and that when the final figures are made up the production will be found about $5,000,000 worth of gold and 5,000,000 ounces of silver less than the quantities above stated. The figures for 1894 were $39,500,000 in gold and 42,500,000 fine ounces of silver. The ounce of silver is worth about 65 cents.

JOHANNESBURG, the metropolis of the Transvaal, where the Boers and the English are waging war, has come into sudden prominence, but not more suddenly than it has grown into a large town. Eight years ago there was scarcely a house on the town site; now there is a population of 70,000, part of which is "floating," brought there by the development of the gold and diamond fields. The town is filled with Americans. It is estimated that at least 3,000 Americans, prospectors and managers of mining properties, are in the Transvaal, and these generally sympathize with the Boers.

Two sections of a freight collided on a bridge near Kittaning, Pa., the 14th and a span of the bridge gave way throwing an engine, caboose and three oil tanks in the water. THE SULTAN'S DECREE.

Red Cross Society Barred from Aiding Armenians.

Sublime Porte Says It Is Mindful of the True Interests of Its Subjects—Public Men Express Their Indignation.

Washington, Jan. 14.—The Turkish legation gave out Monday afternoon the following:

"The imperial government will not permit any distribution among his subjects, in his own territory, by any foreign society or individuals, however respectable they may be (as, for instance, the Red Cross society), of money collected abroad. Such interference no independent government has ever allowed, especially when the collections are made on the strength of speeches delivered in public meetings by irreconcilable enemies of the Turkish race and religion, and on the basis of false accusations that Turkey repudiates. Besides, the sublime porte is mindful of the true interests of its subjects, and, distinguishing between the real state of things and the calumnies and wild exaggerations of interested or fanatical parties, will, as it has done heretofore, under its own legitimate control alleviate the wants of all Turkish subjects living in certain provinces, irrespective of creed or race."

Miss Barton Talks.

Miss Clara Barton said Monday that the consent of the Turkish government would be necessary before she could undertake the relief of the suffering Armenians, and that should it not be given she would be compelled to remain outside the country. She could hardly believe that Turkey would refuse her admission into Armenia, as one of the objects of the national Red Cross, as stipulated in the treaty signed by Turkey, was to relieve suffering wherever found.

Great Indignation Aroused.

Among the few public men who were on Monday night made aware of the substance of this insolent refusal there is great indignation. It is pointed out that the Red Cross society is known throughout the world for its philanthropic labors and for its ministrations to the sick and distressed. In its work there has never been any taint of politics or agitation. It has adhered closely to the task which it set for itself, and on more than one occasion has elicited the admiration of the world for its thorough organization and effective relief to the suffering. When the Turkish government officially denies this great society the privilege of distributing money in Armenia it necessarily intensifies an indignation already deep and strong throughout the civilized world.

Appalling Statistics.

London, Jan. 13.—A Constantinople correspondent telegraphing under date of Saturday says that more complete tables of the persons killed and property destroyed in the provinces of Harpoot and Diarbekir show that 176 towns and villages, containing 8,050 Armenian houses, were burned. The Armenians in these towns and villages numbered 92,000, and of these 15,845 were killed. This excludes the uncertain reports of killings. M. Cambon, the French ambassador, estimates the total number of Armenians killed in Anatolia at 50,000.

OHIO'S NEW GOVERNOR.

Inauguration at Columbus, O., of Governor-Elect Bushnell.

Columbus, O., Jan. 14.—The city is gay with flags and bunting, marching troops and political clubs with their bands of music, celebrating the inauguration of Gov. Bushnell. The inauguration exercises proper took place in the rotunda of the capitol at noon Monday. At 11:45 a legislative committee arrived at the capitol in carriages with Gov. McKinley and Gov-elect Bushnell. The exercises here were simple and very brief. Prayer was offered by Rev. J. W. Russell, of the Central Christian church. The oath of office was then administered by Judge T. E. Minshall, of the supreme court.

ASA S. BUSHNELL, GOVERNOR OF OHIO.

Gov. McKinley then presented Gov. Bushnell with his commission, and Gov. Bushnell followed with his inaugural address.

A Chicagoan's Crime.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—Police Officer Gibbons, of the North side, received a letter Monday morning from Peter Hougaard, of Englewood, informing him that by the time it was received the writer would be dead. Officer Gibbons at once communicated with the police station at Englewood and an officer was sent to Hougaard's house, where he found the dead bodies of Hougaard, his wife and five children, who had been asphyxiated by gas. Hougaard was a milk dealer, and was believed to be in comfortable circumstances. No motive for the crime has yet been ascertained.

No Race This Year.

FEW SIGNS OF TROUBLE.

Excitement in England Over Transvaal Affairs Dies Away.

London, Jan. 14.—There has been a dearth of news regarding the situation in South Africa and England's relations elsewhere, but it can be said that the outlook in general is better now than it has been for some time past. The excitement has almost completely died away, but the naval preparations of the government are proceeding apace, and so far as is known to the public, have almost been completed. Nothing has yet been learned as to the destination of the flying squadron, although much conjecture is indulged in as to where its field of duty will be. The ebullition of popular feeling against Germany, caused by Emperor William's attitude towards the Transvaal, was altogether too violent to last long, and there are now very few evidences of any great desire to open active hostilities against Germany.

So far as the Transvaal is concerned all serious trouble in that direction is undoubtedly ended. As stated in these dispatches, the rank and file of Dr. Jameson's expedition has started for the Natal boundary, and the release of the officers of the expedition is expected shortly. Every effort will be made to protect the members of the Rand Reform committee, who have been placed under arrest, including the Americans. It is certain that a bitter fight will be made against allowing the Boer government to confiscate their property as punishment for their alleged offense.

Little reliance can be placed in many of the newspaper dispatches published here purporting to explain the attitude of the powers toward Great Britain. The continental nations may not be friendly to this country, but it is thought that any one of them would hesitate for a long while before striking a blow at England.

London, Jan. 14.—It seems pretty well established in the public mind that Emperor William did not mean to threaten war upon England by his message of sympathy to President Kurger, of the Transvaal, and the reports which were circulated a few days ago of a European alliance back of Germany and against England find little further credence. It seems to be accepted that the German emperor simply intended to express his opinion of the Jameson raid in that message and the temporary sentiment of irritation which it caused him.

BUSINESS BACKWARD.

Trade in a State of Hesitation Rather Than of Hopefulness.

New York, Jan. 11.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"The new year begins with such uncertainty that business is somewhat retarded. The proposed sale of bonds offers ground for confidence in the future, but no one is able to determine what its earliest effects may be in the money market, and for the time it is a case of hesitation rather than hopefulness. Speculation in products has not been active. Cotton is not unchanged, although the receipts for the week have not been very large, but some slackening appears in the foreign demand. Wheat is about one cent higher, and corn the same, without distinct reason in either case.

The industrial situation has not materially changed. There is much hesitation in the iron business, with some advance in Bessemer pig because of the expectation that Connellsville coke and lake ore will both be dearer, and yet finished products of iron and steel are on the whole quoted a little lower. Everything turns on the contracts for ore which are still unsettled, but the great excess in production of pig iron over the present demand is no longer denied, and it is expected that quite a number of the furnaces will presently discontinue production.

"In boots and shoes the average of prices is a shade lower. Leather is a little lower, but hides are on the whole about five per cent. stronger at Chicago, with scanty offerings. The demand for boots and shoes falls far behind expectations, and many shops have been closed for a time.

"The volume of domestic trade indicated by payments through the principal clearing-houses shows the usual large increase of 14.6 per cent. over last year, but in comparison with the same week in 1895, shows a decrease of 13.1 per cent. Part of this difference must be attributed to the shrinkage in prices, but there is also without doubt a considerable decrease in the distribution of goods to final consumers.

"Liabilities in failures for the first two days of January amounted to $918,795, of which $240,407 were of manufacturing and $678,388 of trading concerns. Failures for the week have been 421 in the United States, against 429 last year, and 53 in Canada, against 54 last year."

Bradstreet's says:

"General trade has not improved appreciably. Some wholesale houses are sending out travelers, while others have not completed taking account of stock. Mild weather at western points has interfered with business in some instances, and the week continues to present characteristics of a between-seasons period. The impression is general that uncertainty as to financial action by congress and disturbing political conditions have an unfavorable influence on the prospect for new enterprises. Mercantile collections east, west and northwest are complained of, but at the south the comparative ease with which they are made forms a conspicuous exception. Demand for funds at various western centers is the most active for a year. Stocks of wholesalers at many of the larger interior distributing points are low. First advices of salesmen on the road are of moderate demand for goods, improvement showing itself first in dry goods, shoes and clothing."

GONE TO PIECES.

New York "World" Declares the Bond Syndicate Broken.

New York, Jan. 13.—The figures of the New York World show that the Morgan bond syndicate is broken beyond repair. Its calculations show that offers have been made by persons and institutions independent of the syndicate to take $104,000,000 worth of the bonds, or $4,000,000 more than the requisite amount. The conservative Chemical national bank, of this city, was the first to withdraw from the syndicate, and it took out $5,000,000. Next came the New York Life Insurance, withdrawing $10,000,000. Saturday smaller institutions withdrew their syndicate bids. The individual subscribers, according to the newspaper in question, are as follows:

The national banks, $20,000,000.
The state banks and savings banks, $15,000,000.
New York Life Insurance company, $10,000,000.
Chemical and other New York banks, $15,000,000.
German bankers, $10,000,000.
Russell Sage and other independent bankers, $3,000,000.
New York World, $1,000,000.

WHY I AM HAPPY.

"Dear Tom is dead, please come to-night!"
She telegraphed. With keen delight
I read the message.
Roses, for consolation meant,
I sent, but Oh! with what content,
I paid expressage.

Don't think me heartless, till you know
Death has relieved me of a foe.
Tom was my rival.
When he began to pine away
I scarcely was the one to pray
For his survival.

He's hated me since first we met,
He was a most pronounced brunette,
While I am fair.
He was more favored of the two;
Of soft caresses very few
Fell to my share.

But now he's dead, I feel no spite,
I hope his harp is tuned all right,
His robe a fit, his halo bright
With gems galore.
And just this once do I confess
The reason of my happiness—
Because on earth there's one cat less,
In Heaven one more.

CHOLLY'S STORY.

It was too warm an evening, even for a smoking concert, Cholly said, as he came out of his room attired all in white, looking a perfect picture of manly beauty. Cholly was a blonde specimen of the male sex, blue-eyed, golden-haired; a stalwart representative of the Saxon type. He was 27, well placed as regards this world's wealth and position. Life to him—thanks to old Egerton Bailey, his late father—was a pleasant pastime, the world a charmed play place, where girls worshiped him and men voted him a trump. So much for Cholly, debonair, kind-hearted and handsome, who had traveled the world over making friends wherever he went.

Cholly's prediction that it was too warm even for a smoking concert on this particular evening was verified by the slim attendance there on his arrival. Only eight men out of 30 expected found their way to the usual rendezvous. By general agreement the music was banished, coats discarded, negligee attitudes assumed and the eight men amused themselves by relating anecdotes and personal experiences.

"By the way, Cholly," at last a friend said to the blonde Adonis, who, sprawled on a sofa, was listening quietly to the conversation, "you're very silent to-night, you've just arrived from the west, too. Come, haven't you some blood-curdling tale to tell us of western atrocities, cowboys 'breaks' or outrages? These fellows' stories are stale. We require something spicy to stir us up a night like this."

"Well, I did have an adventure, but its recital won't be spicy, Tracy; I don't think it will be the style you care for."

"Out with it! Out with it!" seven voices simultaneously exclaimed. "Is it a Christian Endeavor story, Cholly?" asked Tracy. "You do look awful solemn."

"No, it's a Sunday-school tale," said Andy Vicars, a very young man with a new mustache and a drawl.

"All right," said Cholly, quietly. "If you fellows don't be quiet, I won't tell it."

"Go on, Cholly, don't mind the calves," grunted old Maj. Poole. "Tell us your story, man."

"It will interest you, major; doubtless you remember the Donovans, of Limerick—pretty Kate, they called one of them. I met them in Dublin."

"Do I remember her? May me eys fall out of me head if I ever see her likes again—eyes like violets, hair like ink and a skin like peaches and cream. And a figger! God bless you, boys, she had a figger like a goddess. She could ride cross country like a bird. Never saw such a rider before nor since. But, Cholly, me boy, I thought you were 'gone' in that direction. Oh, the pair you'd have made."

Cholly blushed scarlet, the company exchanged glances. "Seems to me," said Andy Vicars, "that the major's telling this story. Go on, Cholly, hold the platform." So Cholly cleared his throat (as Andy said afterward he seemed mightily upset by the major's remarks), wiped the perspiration from his flushed face, and began:

"You see, fellows, my story will have to consist of two parts, the introduction and the sequel. It begins in Ireland four years ago and ends in Canada four days ago. It was in Dublin that I first met Miss Kate Donovan, of Limerick. She was a stunner, as the major says, the best cross-country rider I ever saw. She was as poor as a church mouse and as proud as Lucifer. She was an orphan, had been brought up by her uncle, old Peter Donovan; he had three daughters of his own, but none of them could hold a candle to Miss Kate herself. From what I saw during the time I was in Dublin, I don't think the trio cared much for pretty Kate; they were jealous of her, and took pains to show it in many petty ways, particularly when Capt. Gordon, who was considered a matrimonial catch, appeared on the scene and devoted himself to Kate."

"Capt. Rupert Gordon, of the 47th?" queried Maj. Poole.

"The very same, a dark beggar, with a bad mouth and lots of money.

"Well, he was the man that set all the Dublin girls wild. They literally lionized him. He was douce enough there. He was asked everywhere, and old Peter Donovan was mad enough when he asked him for his niece, and not for one of his daughters. They said the three girls never spoke to Kate for weeks.

"Poor Kate, she hardly knew what to do; she was very unhappy—she told me all about it one evening at a dance. She had a devil of a life in her uncle's house, and Gordon seemed very fond of her. She didn't know what he really was; neither did I, or I could have warned her. They were married in September; in November Gordon took her to the Riviera after the honeymoon was over; a fellow who met them there told me that Kate—that is, Mrs. Gordon—looked miserably unhappy, and people said Gordon ill-treated her. However that may be, she did not stay with him very long. One day a woman appeared at the hotel where they were staying; she was a gaudily-attired specimen, not overcultured. She registered as Mrs. Capt. Gordon, and forced herself into the Gordon private rooms. Gordon hadn't a word to say; he owned up that he had married her five years before somewhere, where his regiment was stationed; I forget where. There was a terrible scene, which ended by Kate leaving the hotel. No one knew where she went. My friend, an Englishman, who told me just what I have told you, tried to follow her and offered to do what he could for her in a monetary way. He was a gentleman, and meant well by her. She refused all offers of assistance, and disappeared as if the Mediterranean had swallowed her up. He heard of her again at Marseilles; she had been singing in a cafe there; she always had a passable voice, and played the banjo well. Poor Kate, her pride was dragged in the dust, her heart was broken."

Cholly paused to wipe the perspiration from his face and take a few sips from a tumbler beside him. The old major, for a wonder, kept silence, from time to time shaking his head sorrowfully.

"I suppose that is the first part of the story," broke in Andy Vicars. "It is deuced sad; hope the little girl got back to her uncle."

"Uncle!" growled Maj. Poole. "Poor child, he didn't want her. He was a cruel-hearted, mean old scoundrel, was Peter Donovan; he never treated the girl right when he had her."

Cholly nodded his head affirmatively to Maj. Poole's assertion, and continued his story:

"This all happened four years ago; no one heard anything during that time of pretty Kate Donovan, for you see she wasn't Mrs. Gordon, after all. An aunt of hers did have the grace to write to me making inquiries; she had heard that Kate was in the United States, in a place called Pennsylvania, and would I make inquiries, as I lived, no doubt, near there? You know, these old country people, as they call themselves, think that the United States are about as large as an English colony."

"Do I know it?" interrupted the major. "Why, a lady in London once asked me to personally deliver a small parcel of china to her daughter, because I lived in New York, near where her daughter was settled. I took the parcel, thinking to see the address of some street here. Where do you think the fair creature lived?"

"New Jersey?" hazarded Vicars.

"Maine?" queried another.

"No!" roared the major; "Idaho!"

"Guess you didn't accept the commission, major," said Cholly.

"Well, no. I relieved my mind by reciting sundry words not in Webster's dictionary. Go on, my boy. Tell us all you know of pretty Kate Donovan."

"I came through Canada on my way from the west, a few days ago," continued Cholly. "We changed cars at a place not far from Toronto, and had some hours to wait for connection. Strolling around, I came to a place where a circus was in full swing. Double tent, side shows, all complete. Consulting my watch, I found I had time to see the performance. An English steeplechase was advertised as the chief attraction. It had just commenced when I took my seat in the first row close to the ring. I can hardly tell you my feelings when I recognized the first lady rider who entered—it was Kate Donovan."

"Good heavens!" ejaculated the major. "Come to that?"

"Yes, it was Kate. Graceful, lithe, nervy as ever, looking like a queen among those painted judys and rough men."

"How could you sit there and see it?" groaned Maj. Poole.

"I hadn't to sit long. I recognized her instantly—and, poor girl, she saw me."

"Knew you?" gasped the major.

"Yes, she turned pale under the horrible paint and rouge she was daubed with; somehow she seemed to lose her nerve all of a sudden. The horse, a vicious black beast, swerved to one side suddenly—major—fellows, I cannot tell it. It was too horrible."

"Kate Donovan to lose her nerve on horseback? I cannot credit it," said the major, in an awed tone.

"I was in the ring and by her side in a moment," Cholly continued, not noticing the major's interruption. "She knew me, poor girl, when her eyes opened for the first time. She died with her hands tightly clasped in mine."

"Did she sa-ay anything?" asked Andy Vicars; "did she tell you anything?"

"If she did, you're not the one I'd repeat it to," said Cholly, fiercely. "The last words of a poor dying girl are hardly club talk, not if I know it."

So saying, Cholly seized his coat and strode angrily from the room.

The other men looked at each other significantly.

"He's hit hard," said the major; "poor fellow. If you had seen Kate you'd not blame him. I always thought he liked her."

And Cholly, as he strode along the street homeward, cursed his own folly in telling the story of pretty Kate to such an audience. "As if they cared," he muttered. They were a set of hard-hearted, cold, cynical men, and he, Cholly, was a fool for telling the story. Somehow, he had never realized before that he had cherished an ideal for the past four years, and that ideal was the woman who but a few days before had died in his arms. Tell that idiot Vicars what she said? Cholly smiled grimly as the thought struck him, for only he knew what those last words had been. They echoed in his ears even now in the din and noise of the New York evening.

"Cholly—dear—dear—Cholly."

If she had only said them four years ago, he thought miserably, as he shoved the key into the latch of his home door. —Vanity.

Not to Be Acquired.

A well-known bishop who takes a prominent interest in everything affecting the working classes, wishing to judge for himself what a journey in a workman's carriage was like, took a ticket and joined the miscellaneous crowd which fills these trains on the Great Eastern railway. After a most undignified struggle for a seat he found himself jammed in between a navvy, smoking a strong, black pipe, on his right, and an artist in house painting, smelling strongly of his craft and carefully balancing a can of green paint, on his left hand. In addition to apprehensions for the safe balance of this can and the very unpleasant odors arising the good bishop was very much shocked by the bad language which garnished the conversation of his neighbors. After a particularly strong expression from the navvy the bishop, touching him gently, inquired: "My good man, please tell me where you learn the language you have just made use of?" The navvy replied, with a suspicion of pride in his tone: "Learn it, guv'nor! You can't learn it. It's a gift. That's wot it is!"—San Francisco Post.

Fort Ridgeley.

The Fort Ridgeley monument commission has encountered great difficulty in collecting the names of the defenders of the fort during the siege of 1862, to be inscribed on the monument. These names have been collected through the most reliable sources available, but the committee deems it prudent to publish them in the leading newspapers in order that they may receive the criticism of the public. It invites any suggestions regarding the published lists, as to the accuracy of spelling, additions or omissions of names, or any other matter that may aid in the historical accuracy of the record. Address all communication to Charles E. Flandrau, chairman of the Fort Ridgeley monument committee, New York Life building, St. Paul, Minn.

Killed.

With the expressed desire for death fresh on his lips, Charles Summers, an aged citizen with a checkered career, was crushed beneath the wheels of an electric car at about the center of the steel arch bridge in Minneapolis. He was crossing the structure afoot, and by some means got between the rails when run down. When removed from beneath the car he was quite dead.

The fatality occurred on Sunday, shortly after 6 o'clock, at a time when few pedestrians were near the place. In fact, the motorman on the ill-fated car was the only witness of the accident. As was subsequently learned, Summers had been drinking.

Sad Death.

Sybyl Day, the 2-year-old daughter of Frank Day, of 2027 Emerson avenue north, Minneapolis, died under sad circumstances. The little one had been eating candy and accidentally choked upon a piece which was too large for its throat. The child stumbled and fell forward upon the floor while the candy was in its mouth, and despite the efforts of its mother, the little one slowly choked to death.

A POPULAR MODISTE.

She and Her Aged Parents Attacked By a Dread Disease.

The Account of Their Suffering—Three Remarkable Cures.

From the Northwestern Farmer, St. Paul, Minn

A few days ago a reporter called upon a lady living at 661 Hague Avenue, St. Paul Minn., to learn something about a remarkable cure that she was said to have experienced a few years ago. The result of the interview was a story of suffering and almost hopeless prostration, followed by rapid, complete restoration to health, that made an interesting bit of personal history the truth of which was beyond question. The lady was very reluctant to give out the facts, but finally consented.

The lady was Mrs. Eleanor M. Chapron, proprietress of a dressmaking establishment at 661 Hague Avenue, that is patronized by the wealthiest and most fashionable ladies of St. Anthony Hill—St. Paul's finest resident district. So busy a woman could not well be expected to give time to an interview; so aside from a few generalities, the conversation was short and to the point. It was about to this effect:

"What was your trouble?"

"Muscular rheumatism."

"How long did you suffer from it?"

"Several weeks."

"Did you try any other remedy?"

"Yes, I consulted a well-known physician of this city, who gave me a prescription, but it did not seem to help me."

"Would you tell us your symptoms and other particulars, as to your experience with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People?"

"Certainly. I was taken with pain in my arms and limbs so that I could not sit down or stand up with comfort. It would attack me in the chest, side and in my stomach, until I was sure I could not live. I have never suffered so much before or since. My system was completely racked with pain. As I said before I applied to a well-known physician of St. Paul, but what he gave me appeared to do me no good. About this time I read in some paper the account of an old soldier having been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It gave his address, the number of his regiment and everything about him; but as he was some distance away, I did not stop to write, but bought a box, and it gave me almost immediate relief."

"How many boxes of these pills did you take before you felt cured?"

"A box and a half."

"Did that completely restore your health?"

"Yes, indeed; and I have not been troubled since."

"How long ago was that?"

"Just three years and a half."

"Do you know of any other cases or cures with these pills?"

"Yes. I have recommended them to a good many people who were cured."

"Name one."

The names of several others were learned who had cause to feel grateful to the discoverer of this famous remedy. One had partial paralysis, another St. Vitus' dance, others sciatica, neuralgia, nervous headache, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, after effects of grippe, and forms of weakness in persons of both sexes.

A call was made next day upon the parents of Mrs. Chapron, of Rich Valley, a small station sixteen miles south of St. Paul, on the Chicago and Great Western Railway. Mr. and Mrs. Mark Hole were found to be pleasantly situated on a fine farm of their own a mile east of the station and about four miles east of the Mississippi River. The locality is well named, for a prettier farming country never smiled under a noonday sun. A long, low range of green hills, crowned with young timber, stretches away from the white farm house toward the river and forms a contrasting background for a row of wheat stacks—the whole making a picture to delight the eye.

But even here that dread disease, rheumatism, had found victims, and had well nigh destroyed the happiness of two aged respected citizens. Mr. Hole is eighty-three years of age, and his wife is but four years his junior. They were in the garden gathering cabbages when the writer approached and made known the object of his visit. The old gentleman at once straightened himself and exclaimed in a cheery voice, "Those Pink Pills are a great institution!" "Yes, indeed, they've done great things for us both," added his wife with equal good nature, as she invited the interviewer into the house. There a bit of their life's history was learned.

Natives of England, Mr. and Mrs. Hole came over to this country in 1840, settling at first in New York State. Thirty years ago they moved to Minnesota, and have been fairly successful at farming. Fifteen children in all were born to them, most of whom are living. Coming of healthy parents, they enjoyed almost entire immunity from disease of any description until four years ago, when Mr. Hole was attacked by severe rheumatic pains and sciatica. Having noticed an article telling of the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in a Montreal paper, which they read regularly, a neighbor going to St. Paul was asked to secure a box of them. The effect astonished the old folks. In a very short time Mr. Hole resumed his work about the farm, and has been particularly free from rheumatic pains ever since. He now considers himself completely cured. Other remedies that were tried previously afforded only temporary relief—and not always that.

When, several months later, Mrs. Hole was taken down with rheumatism, it needed no argument to induce her to secure a liberal supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In spite of the fact that she was strongly urged to try other medicine, her faith in the pills, established by the experience of her husband, remained unshaken. It was but a few days until all pain had disappeared, and Mrs. Hole was well again and able to attend to her household duties. "I carry a box of them around with me all the time," said the genial old lady, producing the package. "Not for the world would I be without them. I don't need them very often, but I want to be prepared."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hole seem to feel a deep sense of gratitude toward the manufacturer of this great medicine, and their cheerful response to questions put to them showed plainly that they wanted to tell the world of all the priceless benefit they had received.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after affect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Fur Collars.

Fashion has of late evinced an unusual and unexpected fidelity to the forms and colors with which we have long been intimate; for instance, the full sleeves, the gored skirt, the capes, both long and short, and among minor modes we see that in place of the huge white sailor collars worn last summer fashion now affects collars of fur made exactly on the same lines. Square-cut collars are common on both coats and capes, and associated with them is the "storm" collar to be turned up as a protection against wind and rain, and allowed to fall when not on duty. A collar of this sort, if well stiffened, and of course well shaped, gives a very smart appearance to the garment it finishes, and the quantity of handsome fur required for it is less than might be supposed. Here again is an opportunity for utilizing remnants of fur and turning them to excellent account.—N. Y. Post.

WATER THAT EXPLODED.

A Bartender's Experience Under Fire of a Fusillade of Seltzer.

"Do you know," said Billy Clark, of the Grand hotel, to a Cincinnati Times-Star reporter, as a big seltzer bottle fizzed and two or three men on the outside elevated a foot each on the railing and looked on, "that these seltzer water bottles will explode easily?" And the three men each put a foot down on the floor and moved slightly away. "Sometimes just the temperature of the hand will do it, the warm hand, placed against it while bringing it from a cold room, or sometimes while lifting it one will strike it against the counter and it will explode and the metal top will be driven with great force by the gas. One time, while at the Gibson, I refused to give a man a drink. He took it very much to heart and went away vowing he would get even with me. I had turned about as he went out and had my back to him. Suddenly there came a sound like a pistol shot. I tried to turn around and couldn't, and I was sure the man had carried his threat into effect and had shot me. Directly following that explosion came another and another, and there was a rapid succession of explosions. Then I knew the man had opened a regular fusillade on me, and yet I was riveted to the spot. I could not stir. I thought I had been paralyzed by a bullet. Come to find out, one of these seltzer water bottles in the far end of the counter had exploded and the concussion had started the others, until all had exploded that were on that shelf. And the man had gone away and I never saw him again. But I never will forget my experience of that night, when I was sure I had been shot."

ONE ON HAWKSHAW.

He Raided a Den of Licensed Housebreakers and Robbers.

One of the detectives connected with the bureau at the city hall went into a barber shop the other evening and sat in one of the chairs to be shaved, says the Philadelphia Record. While the barber was making ready to shave him he started one of his characteristic conversations. Receiving short answers to every question that he put to the detective, however, the tonsorial artist brought the tete-a-tete to a close and silence reigned supreme.

The local Hawkshaw was in half a doze while the barber was busily engaged in applying a lather on his face, when suddenly the sound of a hammer striking against some metallic substance was heard emanating from the rear of the barber shop. Then voices were heard in the following dialogue:

"That was a good job that we done out at Germantown last week, Pete." "Yes, that was the neatest piece of work we done for some time; there was so little trouble with it." The detective at once opened his eyes and became interested. The first voice continued:

"It brought us in $325 and we had better—"

His conversation at this stage was interrupted by knocks on the door and hearing the detective's voice calling out: "Leave me in or I'll break down the door," one of the men in the back room threw the door open. The Hawkshaw, expecting to find a den of counterfeiters or burglars, rushed through the door and fell into a plumber's shop, where two of the employes were working.

Sarsaparilla Sense.

Any sarsaparilla is sarsaparilla. True. So any tea is tea. So any flour is flour. But grades differ. You want the best. It's so with sarsaparilla. There are grades. You want the best. If you understood sarsaparilla as well as you do tea and flour it would be easy to determine. But you don't. How should you?

When you are going to buy a commodity whose value you don't know, you pick out an old established house to trade with, and trust their experience and reputation. Do so when buying sarsaparilla.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla has been on the market fifty years. Your grandfather used Ayer's. It is a reputable medicine. There are many sarsaparillas. But only one Ayer's. IT CURES.

DELANO DIARY

—Rev. Tabor Davies gave his illustrated lecture on India at the Presbyterian church last evening. It is spoken of as being highly interesting.

—If Agent Tatro, John Day Smith or some other member of the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Society would accompany their fellow townsmen who buy cattle, to some of the country fairs, they would soon find business enough to last them for a few days.

—Men who will tie so many cattle behind a wagon that some are crowded out of the road on to icy places and slip down, and who go at it and whip them unmercifully for falling, and repeat the same performance time and again before getting out of town, deserve a little looking after.

—A creamery separator man visited this section of country the other day. He tried his machine at the residence of one of our most thrifty dairymen, but did not succeed in inducing him to invest at once. The farmer thinks his old churn gets out just about as much butter as the new invention and costs less.

—A Farmers Institute will be held at Buffalo, on Friday and Saturday, Jany. 31 and Feb. 1. Farmers in attendance on the first forenoon session can have a present of a book of 350 pages. Turn out and see what these theoretical farmers can teach practical farmers any way. You may get some pointers.

—William Stanley says he raised from one and a quarter acres enough sweet corn fodder to feed his ten cows until this week; if he had another acre, which he will next year, he would have had enough for the entire winter. He says it is the best feed he has tried, and produces the most butter. His hay is good but as soon as the cows were fed with it he found a wonderful shrinking in the amount of butter made.

—As A. W. Wittman entered his drug store one morning last week, he was surprized to find a number of fancy bottles and other articles scattered over the floor. He thought burglars had been in during his absence. But on investigating he found that a heavy picture with glass and frame had loosened from its moorings and fallen against the show case, jarring what was on top to the floor. Al drew a long breath and felt thankful that instead of being where that picture would have struck him he was asleep at home.

—Our school board might learn a profitable lesson from the recent indictment, for manslaughter, for the death of a boy by typhoid fever at Duluth, of those having charge of the water system. If our school house should happen to burn and kill or injure any one, for want of a chance to get out, there being but one door, there would be plenty of people to testify that it was highly ansafe, and some of the board might be brought to horse sense at least. Put on those fire escapes, gentlemen, they won't cost much and might be the means of saving life.

The county will pay this year legal rates for its advertising and it will amount to several hundred dollars. It should not do so. There is a fair profit in it at much less than full legal rates, but when a newspaper will bid for commissioners proceedings at ½ a cent a folio, it could be only a question of time when this result would come. Every man is fairly entitled to fair compensation for his time and labor and he should be satisfied with that. Owing to the foolish competition amongst the papers of the county, the public printing has been done, during the last several years, at less than fair paying rates, and at less than cost, and no paper has received a solitary word of commendation from anybody for so doing, and no paper has deserved any commendation. This extreme of low rates has led to the other extreme of high rates. Perhaps the business will be fairly adjusted after awhile.—Buffalo Journal.

Board adjourned to Feby. 10, 1896.

The five papers, so many of them as we have seen this week, have published the Commissioners Proceedings in full. They claim they have done so before. Then why did the Herald know they would continue to do so?

It seems strange that so many similar accidents should occur as did in one week in January. A lamp in the Merchants Hotel at Monticello, one in the Journal office, at Buffalo, and still another in the Post Office at Howard Lake, fell, each nearly burning the building in which it was. And a heavy picture in Wittman's drug store in Delano, also fell. Who can explain? Is there some strange power attacking the fastenings; or is the center of gravity growing stronger?

Literary News.

No one ever thought of introducing so expensive a feature as lithographic color work in the days when the leading magazines sold for $4.00 a year and 35 cents a copy. But times change and the magazines change with them. It has remained for the Cosmopolitan, sold at one dollar a year, to put in an extensive lithographic plant capable of printing 320,000 pages per day (one color). The January issue presents as a frontispiece a water-color drawing by Eric Pape, illustrating the last story of Robert Louis Stevenson, which has probably never been excelled even in the pages of the finest dollar French periodicals. The cover of The Cosmopolitan is also changed, a drawing of page length by the famous Paris artist Rossi, in lithographic colors on white paper takes the place of the manilla back with its red stripe. Hereafter the cover is to be a fresh surprise each month.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS. Square Type.

The thumb is an unfailing index of one's character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness, closely allied to the Spatulated Type, in that both are lovers of adventure, fun and freedom of ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman. Demorest's Family Magazine supplies pages especially for such people, a large volume of new literature every month in a small space, or 1/12 the interest of the whole month's work for a year. Every page is bright and breezy. The Conical Type has a love of refinement, culture, and a love of nature, in its every action. A lover of this type of thinking people will greatly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find more pleasure in the magnificent colored picture of roses, 10½ x 24½ inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpre, the most celebrated flower painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1896. The cost of this one work of art would be $20.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides it is a companion oil or water-color picture to be published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so beautifully and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Pilgrim Type is the thumb of the thinker and investigator, who will be interested in the great events in Demorest's Magazine, one of the three most which cover the entire field of the fact, fancy, fad, fun or fashion of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription. It will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion, personal beauty and family and domestic matters will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb which it leans in its small size, slenderness, soft tufts, and smooth, rounded tips, those traits which belong essentially to the other sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy, free, and it will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put it in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of a whole family.

THE St. Louis National Republican Convention to be held in June is to have for Sergeant-at-arms, Tim Byrnes of Minneapolis.

WHEN the new census returns are completed it seems Mankato will raise liquor license to $1,000. 30 saloon keepers have been granted a hearing to take out new license at $500 before their old license runs out. They will loose $8.000 but save $15,000. if they succeed in their efforts.

THE St. Paul winter carnival, is on, in all its glory, this week. It seems as the committees could not have struck a more favorable time for holding it The ice is at its best; sleighing, fine; and the weather all that could be asked for, by lovers of out door sports. Rex Borealis, alias Judge Flandrau, is said to make a model ruler for the fun.

THE St. Paul Globe is investigating the charges that wheat raisers are being imposed upon by wheat buyers If you know of any such cases send an account to the Globe and aid in having the evils corrected. As long as you keep still and bear it things are not liable to change for the better. Write your pieces and aid in reforming what needs reforming.

DR SMITH, though, he did not have time to visit Delano and some of the other proposed sites for the Fourth Hospital for Insane, is getting about as much free advertising as any man on the board. It seems he was in some kind of a deal with Chaska to have the chronic cases located there, while the acute cases would go to the Midway District, to supply material for the Medical schools. If the worthy Dr. is so anxious to supply material for scientific investigation he should first will his own carcass into the hands of scientists. "Charity begins at home."

The Globes Sound Money!

The St. Paul Globe says: "A bank note is simply the paper representative of the credit of the banker. There is no reason why any man of means and ability to pay his paper on demand should not make his promisory demand notes and loan them to those who want and can use them. If others relying on their solvency, are willing to take them in exchange for what they have, why not?"

This smacks some of the old clown's idea of finances, when he said "My note is good, everybodys got it." If the Globe is not up to snuff in finances better than that let the financial editor take a trip to the country and get a list of subscribers taking notes instead of cash and see how far he would travel. We would advise the editor, to bring with him a return ticket, or cash enough to buy one in case he be smitten with a desire to see the Saintly City once more.

Everybody has everybody else's note all they want it, in this section of the country. Whats wanted is cash to pay them with. In the language of the Globe: "These facts are matters of such common knowledge that it is only some exceptional and peculiar mental formation that renders it possible for an editor to make such statements as those quoted, admitting, of course, his honesty."

Ensilage for Cattle.

Now that our farmer neighbors are turning their attention to dairying quite extensively, and as one of the principle expenses connected with the business is the procuring and saving of feed for the cows, the following clipping from last week's St. Peter Herald, concerning the silo of James H. Doty, one of Nicollet County's most prosperous farmers and stockraisers, and a former schoolmate of ye editor, will be of interest to many of our readers.

"Mr. Doty is a practical stockman and devotes much time to improved methods of raising and feeding his herds. His latest innovation in good things is a silo that he has built adjoining and connected with his large barn and which he will build larger next year for more silo room. What is a silo? It is a place where ensilage or green fodder is stored after being chopped up by any kind of feed cutter. This ensilage business has been practiced in the eastern states since 1875 and has steadily increased on account of the growing scarcity of hay crops. Ensilage may be made from millet, hungarian, alfalfa, corn or red clover and must be cut when the grain is in the milk late in Aug. or early in Sept. before the frost comes. Mr. Doty's silo room is 20 by 24 and in it he has about ten feet high of ensilage or green corn chopped up in pieces from one half to an inch long. This was put in the silo in layers, each of which was thoroughly tramped down and sprinkled with salt, using about a bushel of salt to twelve tons of fodder, or ensilage. After the silo was filled with ensilage, straw from three to six inches thick was spread over the pile and a portable roof dropped down on it; on this roof, or cover rather, was placed a weight, using broken stone. barrels of sand, or bags of grain, anything that has sufficient weight to cause a pressure of from 75 to 250 lbs. to the square foot. In this condition then, from early Sept. till about four weeks ago this ensilage lay untouched and air tight, to prevent moulding, and then it was begun to be used for fodder by getting at it from a door in the side of the silo and a hay knife is used for getting it from the pile. Now this ensilage is slightly fermented and aciderated and is greatly relished by his cattle and hogs who eat it up remarkably clean. Mr. Doty's silo is constructed of two thicknesses of both boards and tar paper and has a cement floor; it must be air tight and, if so, there will be no danger whatever of freezing as the green fodder is heating all of the time and excepting two or three inches on top there is no sign of mold in the entire pile. In this condition it will keep for years. Two great reasons ought to prompt farmers to go into the ensilage business: one is, the great ease and convenience of handling the fodder in feeding and the second is its economy as a fodder. Besides it takes so little room for storage. In Mr. Doty's small silo he has 16 acres of corn, stalk, blade and ear all chopped up together and now he uses this and oat straw exclusively for his cattle, giving them hay but twice a week. His herd of thirty cattle look better today on less feed than they have ever looked before with hay wasted and tramped under foot. His cattle look as though they were ready to go to market for beef."

Honor Among Rogues.

From the Prison Mirror we clip the following:

All burglars worthy of the name will condema the unprofessional conduct of the St. Louis burglar who recently robbed a fellow craftsman.

Everybody applauds the sentiment. And yet among men in the various walks of life how often it is disrdgarded. Nearly every day we hear of this or that individual or clique of men, in the professions, trades, or among laborers, robbing their fellow craftsmen of their positions by underbidding, or by misrepresenting, or in some other way depriving them of their just deserts. Robbing a fellow craftsman does look hard.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

Pasadena as a Residence

HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

In the population of Southern California the American predomidates and is of similar characteristics to that of Minnesota, except in foreign element, the Scandinavian is not so well represented as in Minnesota. The French, German, British and other nationalities have their representatives here. A considerable portion of the native population is of Mexican or Spanish origin, whose ancestors settled in California while it was still under Spanish and Mexican rule; and they fill a place in the history of California in the past and present centuries, similar to that of the French Voyagers and Canadian French people in that of Minnesota, in making explorations and locating missionary establishments of the Roman Catholic faith amongst the Indians and beginnings of Spanish and Mexican settlements and giving names not only to their missions and land claims (ranches) but to mountains, streams and other interesting objects, which are perpetuated in the recently established cities, towns and counties under the American rule.

While the Spanish names and their rendering of Indian names still exist the population has become thoroughly American as a rule. There are however some localities, as in most of the western states, where some of the foreign characteristics still exist to some extent, yet these are fast yielding to the Americanizing process.

The city of Los Angeles is a place similar in many features to our Twin Cities, of Minnesota: It has a moral, intellectual and progressive population. All religious denominations are represented by large and fair sized congregations and mostly by handsome and ample church edifices; education by a good system of public schools and other educational institutions in charge of competent persons as teachers and superintendents. The city government and municipal affairs are conducted similarly and with about the same degree of success in preserving order as in our Twin Cities. The sale of intoxicating liquors are regulated by a license law. Street disturbances and broils are seldom seen, but, nevertheless such breaches of the peace are frequent, in unsavory quarters which exist in the city.

The frequent peals of cathedral and church bells and the marching and music of the Salvation Army has a tendency to impress a stranger as to a strong religious sentiment existing in the city, but for all of these worthy efforts crime and misery exists to a considerable degree. The population of the city is estimated at about 100,000.

Pasadena is a city with a population estimated at from 10,000 to 13,000 which is made up of very good people, who have found the location and climate conducive to health and comfort, and it is sought more as a place of residence than for business and manufacturing purposes. The city is also found suitable for educational purposes, being not only healthy but comparatively free from vice, and well governed. Street disturbances and drunkenness are seldom seen. The sale of intoxicating liquors are forbidden by law. Hotel bars and saloons are conspicuous by their absence, and even druggists and others found selling intoxicating drinks secretly, are promptly brought before court and punished in such a manner as to deter the offender from repeating the offence.

The weather has been much pleasanter since Christmas than previously Some days were as warm as summer, the temperature being as high as 80 at times, but mostly ranging from 55 to 70 as the highest and during the nights ranging from 32 to 48, accompanied at times by slight frosts The first rainfall for 1896 occurred January 16 Up to date the rainfall in Southern California has been short.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jany. 17, 1896.

"Hurrah for the winner." That's what all good democrats are shouting today whether they are members of the National Committee or just plain, everyday democrats. This is only another illustration proving that "nothing succeeds like success." Yesterday when the Democratic National Committee met to decide upon the time and place for holding the next National Convention, its members, while practically unanimous as to the time for holding the convention, were divided as to which of the competing cities should be given the honor of entertaining the convention. Today, after a contest, which although spirited was goodnatured from start to finish, they are all shouting, "Hurrah! for the winner." Let every democrat hope that the same spirit will animate the delegates to the convention and that when the nomination is made every democrat, north, south, east and west, will shout "hurrah for the winner," and then take off his coat and go to work to make him a winner.

If the members of the National Committee reflect the opinions of the democrats of the States they represent, the old democratic party isn't ready to pass in its checks just yet. A more cocky set of men never assembled in Washington. They believe to a man that the democratic party has a chance to retrieve its fortunes and elect the next President, and that all that is needed is to put up a candidate who will unite the party and bring out the voters who have for one cause or another become disgusted and refused to vote And they believe further that this can be done. It all depends on the rank and file—the plain, everyday democrats. There are enough of them to carry this country. That has been repeatedly proven during the last twelve years, and can be easily proven again, but only by united action. Let every democrat appoint himself a committee of one on the good of the party, and there will be—there can be no doubt of the result. If the republicans elect the next President it will be solely the fault of men who believe in democratic principles but do not live up to them.

Dr. Patten, president of Princeton College, was recently in Washington, for the special purpose of inviting President and Mrs. Cleveland to attend the celebration of the 150th anniversary of that institution. No official announcement has been made but there is reason to believe that the invitation was accepted.

Commissioner Lochren's report of the condition of business in the Pension Bureau is an effectual answer to the slanderous slurs upon the administration of that office, which are constantly made in certain quarters. It shows that on Dec. 1, the business of the office was practically up to date. Since then the calls of Congressmen, often nearly 1,000 a day, and largely unnecessary, have resulted in throwing the business behind. Of the interior workings of the office the report says: "I am satisfied that the officers and clerks are bringing every effort to bear upon the proper and prompt adjudication of all the several classes of claims now pending. Cases that are ready for adjudication are promptly disposed of, and apparent delays are usually the result of negligence or inability on the part of claimants or their attorneys to supply necessary evidence, after being notified, often repeatedly, of the necessity for furnishing such evidence.

Senator Mills, of Texas, made a speech this week on his resolution, containing what he believes should be declared to the world as the financial policy of the U. S. This resolution contains seven distinct declarations, which may be summarized thusly: 1st, against retirement of outstanding legal tender notes; 2nd, in favor of the coinage of the silver bullion in the Treasury; 3rd, in favor of the issue of emergency legal tender notes in case of deficency in the revenues; 4th, against the issue of interest bearing bonds; 5th, in favor of paying government obligations in both gold and silver; 6th, repudiating the theory that a public debt is a public blessing; 7th, urging the maintenance of a sinking fund for the rapid extinguishment of the national debt.

Secretary Morton this week told a joint meeting of the House and Senate committees on Agriculture that his action in refusing to spend the money appropriated for the purchase of seeds for free distribution was, in a measure due to abuses, such as Congressmen selling their entire quota of seeds for a pittance. The department, he said, had in several instances bought from outside dealers Congressmen's entire quota of seeds which had cost the government about $300 for each quota, for $75 each. He told the committees very plainly that he didn't believe the good accomplished by free seed distribution amounted to even a small fraction of what it had cost.

The action of the British government in affording the same protection to Americans residing in the Transvaal republic, that it does to its own subjects, has been extremely well received in Washington and has done much toward restoring a friendly feeling towards the English.

Mr. Reed is allowing his House to indulge in some pension talk this week, on the regular pension appropriation bill, and the Senate is discussing the free coinage substitute for the House bond bill.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

The world still moves and why should not the people? Is it not about time that the Christian nations of the world should call a halt on those Turks in their blood thirsty raid upon the Armenians. According to all civil rules of warfare we think those Turks have gone far enough.

That board of commissioners consisting of five members appointed by the President of the United States to establish the boundary line between Venezuela and British Guiana with elaborate head quarters at Washington, with a salary of $2500 00 each, and rooms nicely furnished, may be equivalent to the outlay; but, in the minds of many, it looks something like a prodigal waste. Have they any established point to start from; or a terminus? If so, all they need is a compass and a boy with a hatchet to blaze the line.

Everything in this country done by the officials in authority must be at great expense, and with pomp and parade. It is all right to stand by the Monroe Doctrine. But, sometimes, what is meat for one is poison for another. Foreign syndicates are allowed to come over here and buy up thousands upon thousands of acres of our public domain, forming land monopoly all over this country; and actually crowding out natural born citizens who are willing and anxious to secure homes for themselves and families. Would not the Monroe Doctrine chink in here. Sometimes men will fairly tear their shirt collar over a thing that seems to them to be a very great offense; and at other times you can slap them in the face with a rag saturated with Limburger cheese and they tak no offense at it. But, Mr. Editor, the air seems to be impregnated with the confusions of war, and we believe there will be none able to lead us out of this dilemma; unless it be a Moses or a Joshua.

Minneapolis Mentionings.

The following items from our neighboring city and which will interest some of our readers, have been sent us for publication:

A pleasant surprise was given in honor of Miss Martha Kubon, Saturday evening, Jany 11th, at the residence of her parents 419 Adams St. N. E Minneapolis. There were about 18 couples present. The evening was pleasantly spent in dancing, playing cinch and other games. The party retired at an early hour, (about 5 o'clock).

A grand prize masquerade ball was given by the Sons of Herman, Lodge No. 31, at the East Side Turners, Cor. 6th Ave. and Marshal St. N E. Miss Emma Kubon was very attractive and was the "Belle of the evening." She represented a Christmas tree and got first prize, which was $5.00.

A Center Shot.

It is no longer tolerable for convivial souls to drink to excess. It's not fashionable. It's not good form nor Christian charity to pity a victim of the cup nowadays. Such a one is no longer a "bright fellow enslaved by drink," but a blooming chump—an unpardonable ass. He is not pitied any more. He is despised. Drunkenness isn't popular even with drunkards. Possibly the engines of intelligence have carried us to this conclusion.—Winona Republican.

WAR is an expensive game for any nation to play. In the last two centuries it has cost England more than $5,000,000,000 to prosecute the various wars in which she has been engaged, and the national debt of $3,300,000,000 is a daily reminder to the people of past extravagance in order to gratify the desire of conquest. The Proceedings of the First Session.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Senator Mills' speech on finance, with frequent direct criticisms of the president and secretary of the treasury, was the main feature of yesterday's session of the senate. Senator Peffer followed with a speech against bonds and in favor of silver coinage. Another day was consumed by the house in oratory upon the pension appropriation bill, in the course of which the policy of the present administration towards the veterans was scored by both republicans and democrats and defended by two or three democrats.

Washington, Jan. 17.—In the senate yesterday the silver bill was further discussed. The Monroe doctrine also received attention in a resolution by Senator Sewell (N. J.) declaring the limitations of the doctrine and stating that President Cleveland's attitude was an extension of the doctrine beyond its original scope. A resolution was adopted requesting the state department for further information on Turkish-Armenian affairs. Senator Hale (Me.) spoke in favor of a Pacific cable connecting the United States and Hawaii and expressed the opinion that the annexation of the Hawaiian islands to the United States was certain to be accomplished at an early day. A bill was introduced declaring bicycles baggage for purposes of interstate commerce and requiring all railways to carry them as baggage. The free home bill, which is practically a revival of the homestead law, was favorably reported. Adjourned to the 20th.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Two opposing phases of the Monroe doctrine were present in the senate yesterday—one by Senator Davis (Minn.), from the committee on foreign relations, favoring a strong reaffirmation of the doctrine, and another from Senator Sewell (N. J.), urging that the doctrine had been carried so far beyond its scope as to threaten dangerous consequences. In the house the military academy appropriation bill ($449,547) was passed. A bill was introduced to make Lincoln's birthday, February 12, a legal holiday. Resolutions were offered for the recognition of belligerent rights of the Cubans, and to revive the grade of lieutenant general of the army for the benefit of Gen. Miles.

Ambassador Bayard Tells the House About His Speeches.

State Department Has Taken No Action Concerning Them—Correspondence with Secretary Olney Transmitted to Congress.

Washington, Jan. 21.—The president's reply to the house resolution calling for the correspondence in the state department relative to the speeches delivered at Edinburgh, Scotland, and Boston, England, by Ambassador Bayard, was sent to the house with other papers, and the president says:

"In response to that part of said resolution which requests information as to the action taken by the president concerning the speeches therein referred to, I reply that no action has been taken by the president, except such as is indicated in the report and the correspondence herewith submitted." The secretary of state's report, after citing the resolution, simply presents the correspondence with Mr. Bayard on the subject, and says that aside from these communications no action has been taken by the department. The first letter is from Mr. Bayard to Secretary Olney, dated London, December 12, in which he says he observes from the newspapers in England the action of the house of representatives looking to his impeachment, and incloses a printed copy of the Edinburgh address. Mr. Bayard adds:

Ambassador Bayard Explains.

"In the absence of precise information of the text of the resolution, said to have been adopted by the house and not proposing to anticipate the action of either or both houses of congress—yet, observing that, in the course of the discussion, reference was made to the diplomatic officers of the United States—I respectfully advert to article seven and its subsections, in order that your attention may be drawn to the fact that the address in question was delivered before an institution purely literary and scientific in its character, and wholly unconnected with political parties—which has honored two of my official predecessors with similar invitations which in both cases had been accepted; subjects political in their nature ("democracy" and "the law of the land") having been respectively selected and treated with distinguished ability.

"No political canvass was pending or approaching in this country when my address was made—and no interference or anticipation in local or party political concerns in this country was therefore possible.

"The address consisted of my personal opinions upon governmental institutions in general—the moral forces and tendencies which underlie them, and the governmental policies which assist in the conservation of the freedom of the individual as an essential integer of human progress—and of the permanence of civilization.

"The judgments so delivered were formed by me after careful deliberation, and, in their presentation, sundry historical facts and arguments tending to sustain them were advanced.

"When the congress shall have concluded its action on the subject it is possible that I may desire to submit a further statement—but, meanwhile, I consider it proper to place before you the address itself in full, and the facts connected with its delivery.

Spoke Without Premeditation and Notes.

"Sundry discrepancies," Mr. Bayard writes, "are obvious in these the two reports made—and they are such as are usually incidental under similar circumstances—but as to the remarks attributed to me—I spoke without premeditation, without notes, unaware of a reporter's presence, and have no means except recollection (now somewhat vague) to enable me to correct either report. Therefore, I shall not essay it, although it is obvious the reporters failed to catch my words (sometimes in Latin) and confused them."

"But both reports are sufficiently full and accurate to describe the purpose of my visit and general nature and intent of my remarks.

"I also enclose herewith two additional copies of the address I made before the Philosophical institution, of Edinburgh, on November 7 last.

Asks Fair Treatment.

"If it is desired to gather the actual purport and meaning of my statement, it would appear to be necessary that phrases should not be separated from the context, but that all the parts should be considered in their relation to each other, and as the honorable house of representatives have in the grave exercise of their public duty instituted inquiry into what has been said and done by me on the occasion referred to, including the circumstances attendant, it may not be unreasonable for me to express the hope that in simple justice a full publication of the remarks undergoing criticism may accompany the expression of any judgment they may arrive at in the premises."

GOES TO CHICAGO.

Democratic National Convention Meets in the Lake City July 7.

Washington, Jan. 17.—The democraic national convention will be held at Chicago on July 7. Such was the decision reached on the 29th ballot by the national committee Thursday, after a spirited contest, in which Chicago won by a bare majority, with St. Louis only two votes behind. It was practically a fight between the free silver forces on one hand and the hard money men on the other. The vote which Chicago received was, as Mr. Smalley, of Vermont, expressed it, "a natural one," inasmuch as it was cast by the states lying within the group known as the middle-west and the east. St. Louis' vote might also be called equally natural, since it came mainly from the southwest and the west.

Spain's Big Job.

Havana, Jan. 18.—The war is costing Spain $6,000,000 a month for the maintenance of the army alone. From the outbreak, February 24, 1895, until January 1, 1896, the cost amounted to $85,000,000, according to figures published by La Discussion, here. The loss, owing to the burning of crops, towns and destruction of railroad property cannot be calculated until the smoke clears away. The Cubans, without recognition as belligerents, are a long way from obtaining freedom for Cuba, but Spain, on the other hand, seems to be a long way from crushing out the trouble.

Worse Than Reported.

Boston, Jan. 20.—In a letter just received from Rev. H. N. Barnum, D. D., of Harpoot, eastern Turkey, where the property of the American board was burned, he says that reports have been secured from 176 villages in the vicinity of Harpoot. Those villages contained 15,400 houses belonging to Christians. Of those 7,054 have been burned and 15,845 persons have been reported killed. Dr. Barnum adds: "The reality, I fear, will prove to be much greater."

Venezuela Boycotts England.

Caracas, Venezuela, Jan. 21.—The press and people of Venezuela have declared commercial war against England. The newspapers publish daily this notice in display type: "To the People: Whoever buys English products increases the power of Great Britain." For two months from January 15 the press will give daily the names of Venezuelan and foreign merchants dealing in any manner with England or her colonies.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OLD.

Anniversary Celebration of the Founding of the German Empire.

Berlin, Jan. 20.—Saturday the 25th anniversary of the proclamation of the German empire was observed as an absolute holiday in Berlin and other German cities. Services were held in all the churches and synagogues in the city, and the public buildings and private houses were decorated with flags, the effect of which, however, was greatly marred by the drizzling rain and fog which prevailed. Besides the imperial ceremonies in the white hall of the Schloss, there were many feasts and ceremonies, public and private, throughout the city.

A special edition of the Reichsanzeiger, which was issued for the purpose, publishes a decree granting amnesty to civilian prisoners equally with military offenders who are undergoing sentences requiring the payment of less than 150 marks fine, or six weeks' imprisonment. The decree also pardons many persons who are undergoing punishment for lese majeste.

A new order has been created in honor of the occasion, th decoration consisting of a gold portrait of the emperor's grandfather, William I., with the inscription: "In memory of William the Great." The decoration is to be worn upon a neck chain. The first recipients of the order were the emperor, the empress, ex-Empress Frederick, the grand duchess of Daden, the king of Saxony, Countess of Waldersee, Prince Bismarck, Dr. Miquel, minister of finance, and Freiherr von Berlepsch, minister of commerce.

The emperor has bestowed the order of the Black Eagle upon former ministers Camphausen and Delbouck.

The emperor, speaking from the throne in the white hall, discoursed at length, expressing his heartfelt thanks for the great benefits which the past quarter of a century had conferred upon the empire, recalling memories of the period which called the empire into existence, and vowing to continue the work which his grandfather, Emperor William I., had begun. His majesty especially mentioned the merits of Prince Bismarck in connection with the creation of the empire, declaring that his regard could not be too great. He promised to work unceasingly to complete the internal institutions of the empire, and to strengthen the bonds which united the German races. Germany, he said, instead of being in danger from other states, will continue, in the future as in the past, a strong pillar of peace.

The emperor, after concluding his remarks in the white hall, swore a solemn oath over a banner 200 years old, to guard the empire safely at home and abroad, upon the principle of one empire, one people, one God.

The anniversary was celebrated by decrees published at the instance of the secretaries of culture and worship in Prussia, Saxony, Bavaria, Wurtemburg, Baden, Hesse and the other German states, and all the schools in the empire suitably observed the day by applauding patriotic addresses delivered by the principals and teachers and by recitation and singing. In Berlin and all the other large cities the municipalities and voluntary citizens' committees had made preparations for the day. Stores were closed and business was suspended from noon.

ENGLAND'S FLYING SQUADRON.

Some Say Its Destination Is Bermuda, Others Say It Isn't.

New York, Jan. 20.—A special from Boston to the World says:

"If the British flying squadron should come over to American waters it would not astonish me," said Rear Admiral Belknap, retired, at his home in Beacon street. "I wrote to Admiral Bunce at Hampton roads three days ago that it would not surprise me in the least if the flying squadron should be first heard from at La Guayra. From the moment it was announced that the squadron was to be commissioned I made up my mind that its destination was American waters. I came to that conclusion because matters had quieted down in the Transvaal, and the excitement over Emperor William's telegram to President Krueger had subsided. The reported activity at St. Lucia and Halifax, on this side of the Atlantic, and at the British dock yard at Esquimault, at the entrance of the straits of Juan de Fuca, in the Pacific, emphatically confirms such a conclusion.

"While some of our people are arguing over the meaning and intent of the Monroe doctrine and apologizing for everything England does, of whatever character, in any part of the globe, the British government, in my judgment, is quietly but determinedly preparing to take what she claims as belonging to her in Venezuela. In my opinion, if that flying squadron does appear in American waters, under existing conditions, it can only be construed as a menace to the United States."

London, Jan. 20.—The admiralty department gives out the information that the destination of the flying squadron of British war ships now off Spithead has not yet been determined upon even by the admiralty and that, certainly, the war ships are not going to Bermuda or anywhere in American waters at present.

London, Jan. 21.—A representative of the press has ascertained upon absolutely trustworthy authority that the chief commanding officer of the new flying squadron of British warships has been supplied with special charts of North American waters, the West Indies seas and the Mediterranean. The informant of the press has seen the charts.

In Sympathy with the Cause.

Washington, Jan. 21.—The senate subcommittee on foreign relations, charged with the investigation of the Cuban situation, of which Senators Sherman, Morgan and Lodge are the members, on Monday morning discussed the matter referred to them for an hour and a half. It can be said that these three senators are a unit in their opinion as to what, under certain conditions, should be done. They are each in favor of the recognition of the insurgents as belligerents, but they have been unable to convince themselves that the time has come for such a resolution or that the insurgents have accomplished that which will justify the United States in taking such steps.

Bond Syndicate Dissolved.

New York, Jan. 16.—The members of the government bond syndicate received in their mails Wednesday morning a circular letter from J. P. Morgan & Co. releasing them from their commitments to furnish their pro rata share of $100,000,000 in gold to the government, and a second $100,000,000 if desirable, taking their pay therefor in four per cent. bonds. The circular sets forth that this action seems desirable in view of the terms of the treasury circular, offering bonds to the public. The text of the circular is quite lengthy. It contains a detailed statement of every phase of the syndicate's connection with the proposed bond issue and offer of gold to the government.

THE DAVIS RESOLUTION.

Senate Committee Divided on the Meaning of the Monroe Doctrine.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Senator Davis (rep., Minn.), of the committee on foreign relations, reported Monday preamble and resolution on the Monroe doctrine, as follows:

Resolved, by the senate, the house of representatives concurring, that,

Whereas, President Monroe, in his message to congress on December 2, Anno Domini 1823, deemed it proper to assert as a principle, in which the rights and interests of the United States are involved, that the American continents, by the free and independent condition which they have assumed and maintained, were thenceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European power,

And whereas, President Monroe further declared in that message that the United States would consider any attempt by the allied powers of Europe to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety; that with the existing colonies and dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and should not interfere; but that with the governments who have declared their independence and maintained it, and whose independence we have on great consideration and just principles acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them, or controlling in any other manner their destiny, by any European power, in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition towards the United States, and further reiterated in that message that it is impossible that the allied powers should extend their political system to any portion of either continent without endangering our peace and happiness,

And, whereas, the doctrine and policy so proclaimed by President Monroe have since been repeatedly asserted by the United States, by executive declaration upon occasions and exigencies similar to the particular occasion and exigency which caused them to be first announced, and have been ever since their promulgation and now are the rightful policy of the United States,

Therefore be it resolved, That the United States of America reaffirms and confirms the doctrine and principles promulgated by President Monroe in his message of December 2, 1823, and declares that it will assert and maintain the doctrine and those principles and will regard any infringement thereof and particularly any attempt by any European power to take or acquire any new or additional territory on the American continent, or any island adjacent thereto, or any right or sovereignty or dominion in the same, in any case or instance as to which, the United States shall deem such attempt to be dangerous to its peace, or safety, or by or through force, purchase, cession, occupation, pledge, colonization, protectorate, or by control of the easement in any canal or any other means of transit across the American isthmus, whether under unfounded pretension or right in cases of alleged boundary disputes, or under any other unfounded disposition toward the United States, and as an interposition which it would be impossible, in any form, for the United States to regard with indifference.

The concurrent resolution was placed on the calendar, Senator Gray (dem., Del.), a member of the committee on foreign relations, stating that the report was not an unanimous one.

WEYLER SUCCEEDS CAMPOS.

He Is Expected to Adopt Severe Measures Toward Insurgents.

Havana, Jan. 20.—The civil governor of the province of Havana, through his secretary, Senor Francisco Calvo Munez, and the chief of the treasury department, Senor Miguel Cabezes, admitted late Saturday afternoon that they have received cable messages from Madrid announcing that a successor to Marshal Martinez de Campos will be appointed in the person of Gen. Valeriano Weyler, and that they are to expect his arrival shortly at Havana to assume the duties of governor general of Cuba and general in chief of the Spanish forces in the Island of Cuba.

Gen. Campos on Saturday bade farewell to the acting captain general, Gen. Marin, and to the chief officers of the soldiers, volunteers and firemen.

The Cubans regret the departure of Campos. His campaign was most humane. He would not confiscate property and granted amnesty upon the surrender of the rebels. He treated suspects leniently, especially Americans. The retirement of Campos is the result of agitation among the merchants of the produce exchange. The Cubans say the removal of Campos, Spain's ablest general, is a victory, and will convince the world that a genuine revolution is in progress. They hope it will aid in obtaining recognition for the belligerents at Washington.

Madrid, Jan. 20.—The consensus of opinion here is that the superseding of Gen. Martinez Campos in command of the Spanish forces in Cuba, will greatly improve the situation there. The military journals censure Gen. Martinez Campos and declare that his splitting up his 100,000 followers into small sections to protect rural property has been the chief cause of the extension of the Cuban revolt.

Madrid, Jan. 21.—The conservative organs at Havana protest against the assertion of Marshal Campos that he is the victim of political intrigue. They insist that his recall is due to his failure as a general and not to political pressure.

Reenforcements of 16 battalions of troops, under Gens. Barges and Ahumada, will be sent to Cuba shortly.

Five Children Drowned.

Ottawa, O., Jan. 21.—Almost the entire population of Cuba, Putnam county, was engaged Monday dragging Blanchard river for the bodies of five children, a girl and four boys, drowned Sunday afternoon. Three children of John Shuman and two children of George Formas were playing on the ice when it broke and four of the children disappeared. The eldest, a boy of 16, attempted to rescue the girl and was drowned also.

Funeral of Hon. Frank Lawler.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—The funeral of Hon. Frank Lawler Monday morning was accompanied by the largest popular and official demonstration of a civic character since the funeral of Carter Harrison. Thousands came to the humble family home and to the church on foot and in carriages, at least 20,000 people assembling on the streets. In the funeral cortege were 800 carriages, six being loaded with floral offerings.

Family in Prison.

Sioux City, Ia., Jan. 21.—District Judge Ladd on Monday sentenced Alfred, Jacob and L. H. Graham, Jr., and their mother, Mary E. Graham, to 18 months each in the penitentiary for the robbery of freight cars. The family will be greeted on its arrival at the penitentiary by L. H. Graham, Sr., and his son Joseph, who are already there for burglary. The other son, James, is at the state industrial school.

Will Convene at Milwaukee.

Washington, Jan. 21.—H. H. Rand, of Wisconsin, a member of the executive committee of the National League of Republican Clubs, has received a letter from Secretary Dowling authorizing the holding of the next convention of the league at Milwaukee, August 25, 26 and 27.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE OLD BELL COW.

When I was but a boy I used so happily to roam
Through every nook and corner of the dear old country home.
At dewy morn to pasture I would drive the cows, and when
The sun was fading in the west I drove them home again.
There was one among their number I remember very well,
It seems but yesterday I saw the cow that wore the bell.
She wasn't any prettier nor of a better breed,
But all the others followed her wherever she would lead;
And in my youthful mind I used to wonder why and how
It was that all the cattle tagged the old bell cow.

Strange years of shadow and of shine have passed away since then,
And now I mingle daily with the busy hosts of men,
And still I muse as earnestly as what I used to do,
For men, I find, are likewise quite peculiar creatures, too.
And some have natures made of gold, without a speck or flaw,
While some are only gilded forms all padded out with straw.
And while the modest, worthy man the world may never heed;
The counterfeit, who loudly brags, steps in and takes the lead,
The one who "toots his horn" is sure to get the crowd, and now
I know why all the cattle tagged the old bell cow.

STEMBLE'S INVESTMENT.

BY CHARLES DUDLEY RHODES.

The town marshal, ex-officio editor of the Lariat Exponent, afterwards declared that his bad luck came that night with the rain. It first came leaking through the roof about midnight, and, finding a convenient crease in his blankets, trickled slowly downward, until it awoke him with a start. Being a man of few words, he simply gave a grunt of disgust, leaned over to a corner of the diminutive room, seized an umbrella, opened it, thrust it accurately under the leak, and calmly fell asleep.

In the morning things were in even a worse state. The bed was a miniature island, the type-cases were half filled with water, and the press, a foot-power affair, stood cheerlessly in a damp corner as if waiting to be resuscitated from its all-night exposure. Even then, Hank made no remark—his first act after sitting up in his blankets being to pull forth slowly a huge plug of tobacco from his hip-pocket, take a generous chew, and then, as if fortified against all manner of disagreeable things, to spring up and begin putting things to rights.

There was a knock at the door.

"Come," he shouted, gruffly; and there appeared to view a little old gentleman whose black frock-coat, white collar—an unusual luxury in Lariat—and air of quiet dignity accorded well with his gray hair and mustache.

"Pardon me," he said, with a slight air of diffidence, "but is this the editor of the Exponent?"

Hank nodded.

"I am Col. Stemble," the little old fellow continued, affably, "and I am up here on special business for the Black Butte Cattle company. Now, to come to the point, I am very anxious to have a special edition of your paper published to-day."

Hank kicked an empty tin can under the press, and looked hard at his boots. People were wont to say that he was a cautious man.

"It will pay," the cattle man continued; "and this will give you some idea of my wishes." He handed the editor some pencil notes and a new greenback.

"Get the paper out by three o'clock at the latest, and above all things make it interesting."

"I'll do it," Hank replied, with customary brevity; and then, with renewed energy, he resumed the renovation of the little one-story shanty which served as editorial office, press-room and home.

The old gentleman smiled to himself as he trudged away—such a paternal, benevolent smile as to seem almost out of place in such an unconventional wicked little frontier town as Lariat. As far as the eye could reach were to be seen the temporary structures of canvas and tarred paper which were the homes of the inhabitants. Up and down the railroad the first-comers had pitched their tents, and as the town grew rough streets had been formed, ranging back to the line of low hills at the east. Lariat enjoyed the distinction of being the extreme end of the new railroad which was rapidly pushing its way through Wyoming towards the great northwest. Crouch's, down the road, had until recently enjoyed that honor. But one fine morning after the first train had pushed on to the present site of Lariat, the inhabitants of the older town had emigrated in a body, and Crouch's was no more.

True to the editor's promise, the Exponent appeared at the time named, but not until Hank O'Doughall, a man in whose veins ran a strain of thrifty Scotch blood, had engaged in several mysterious transactions with certain property owners of Lariat, in exchange for some ready money that the editor had been hoarding up for many a day, the latter became the owner of a considerable strip of land along the railroad—an acquisition afterwards explained by the following announcement which appeared in the Exponent:

"We take pleasure in announcing the arrival of Col. C. H. Stemble, agent for, and a prominent stock-holder in, the Black Butte Cattle company. This English syndicate, having been struck with the advantageous location of Lariat, is contemplating the erection of enormous stock yards in our city, for the shipment of cattle from the Powder river valley. It is needless to comment upon the great influence that this deal will have upon Lariat, the Star city of northwest Wyoming, as the improvements will amount to at least $40,000," etc.

It was all very quickly and amicably arranged. That evening the colonel held an enthusiastic reception at the Alagazan, the leading hotel, where there were none so confident of the future of Lariat, so jovial, and withal so lavish with his money, as he. Incidentally, it may be said that the bar of the Alagazan did a big business, and that the landed proprietors of Lariat, Hank McDougall especially, awakened to the fact that they had a good thing.

The next morning the colonel, notebook in hand, and accompanied by the leading citizens of the town, inspected property available for the uses of the Black Butte Cattle company. In the afternoon—for the agent's time was limited—the purchasing began. The courteous old gentleman who had entertained them so hospitably the night before did not haggle over prices. He paid cash for his new acquisitions in crisp, new $500 notes—a proceeding which, to make change, unfortunately, drained the town in a short time of all its smaller denominations.

By evening the English syndicate had acquired a choice tract of land lying on both sides of the railroad, in the heart of Lariat, for which it had paid out some $25,000. McDougall, editor and town marshal, had made some thousands by the deal, and had he been a ready speaker would probably have said: "These Englishmen are the biggest suckers I ever saw." But, as it was, he contented himself with the simple words: "Beats all!"

It wanted but a few minutes of train-time, next day, when the colonel, carrying his compact little valise, his face beaming with happy good nature, sauntered leisurely down to where the big engine was puffing and blowing, preparatory to its long trip down the road.

"I must leave just at this time," he said, "to transact some very important business in Cheyenne. But I'll be back in a week or ten days, and begin work immediately." And he treated the little crowd about the train to cigars.

The whistle tooted a warning note, the bell rang and the colonel cordially shook hands all around. Stepping on the rear platform of the train, he turned about once more and waved his good-byes to persons in the distance. Just at the moment that the wheels began to turn, Hank McDougall, his marshal's star gleaming on his vest—he wore no coat—came running down Wyoming avenue from the post office, a yellow paper in his hand, which he waved dramatically over his head.

"Stop that train!" yelled the town marshal. But the conductor and engineer did not hear, and the train moved on.

"Jump, you scoundrel, jump!" again yelled Hank, at the same time drawing his gun. The colonel's only answer was a polite wave of the hand. Then Hank took a snap-shot at the fast departing train, and—would you believe it?—that little old man whipped out two pistols from somewhere, quick as a wink, and for a few moments the way the bullets whistled about the heads of the crowd along the track was something wonderful. And as the train grew smaller and smaller in its straightaway course over the prairie, the last act of the lone passenger on the rear platform was to wave a white handkerchief towards the little city of Lariat and disappear within the car.

The town marshal replaced his gun in his hip-pocket and turned sadly away. Deaf to repeated inquiries as to the meaning of it all, he disappeared within the editorial sanctum; for in the midst of all excitement he still remembered that, ex-officio, he was an editor, and—he was both a thrifty and a cautious man.

An hour later another edition of the Exponent appeared, double-leaded, as if in mourning, and the copies sold for a dollar apiece. The editorial was brief and to the point:

"From a telegram received only too late by our town marshal, because of the necessity of forwarding it by mail from Crouch's, it appears that our late distinguished visitor, Stemble, was none other than the well-known desperado and confidence man Ike Rogers, lately a fugitive from the Black Hills. It is painful to be forced to state that the greenbacks which Rogers so generously distributed while in Lariat are clever counterfeits, in exchange for which he carried away thousands of dollars of our citizens' earnings.

"The editor of the Exponent bids farewell to his many friends, and announces his intenton of pulling up stakes and moving immediately to the Big Horn country."—Lippincott's Magazine.

BRITISH FORTS ON THE YUKON.

England Preparing to Hold Disputed Territory in the Pacific Northwest.

A party of miners from the headwaters of the Yukon have arrived on the schooner Mary Buhne from Oonalaska, and report that the Canadian government is establishing well-equipped fortifications on commanding bluffs overlooking the strategic points on Forty-Mile creek and elsewhere along the supposed boundary line. A large company of Canadian military police are busily engaged in exploring the country for mountain passes both in Alaskan and Canadian territory.

A loop of Forty-Mile creek runs into British territory, and to reach the most valuable mines it is necessary for American miners to pass through a small portion of foreign territory. The river is very narrow, and the police have erected on towering cliffs fortresses which completely guard the travel on the river. At several other points breastworks, substantially built of stone, have been erected, and on the whole the actions of the police would indicate that preparations are being made to accommodate large squads of troops at various points along the boundary, and particularly in the vicinity of the placer miles.

However, the police are very kind to the American miners, rendering them every assistance possible and in many ways bestowing small favors and endeavoring to allay suspicion or unpleasant inquiries as to the objects of such warlike preparations. Small detachments in citizens' clothes have visited all the important mining camps, reconnoitering the surrounding country. What their object was they do state.

Thomas Buckman, a Yukon miner, who has been on Forty-Mile creek for three or four years, speaking of the military posts erected by the Canadian police, said: "All their fortifications are built of heavy stone, through which are port holes commanding the paths and rivers. A few men properly armed could withstand a large force of soldiers. The police themselves are noncommunicative, and the commandant says the forts are to shelter the provincial police. Some of the very richest placer mines of the Yukon region are under the immediate command of these forts, of which ten have been erected this year."—San Francisco Chronicle.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Collapsed.

The large elevator of the Minnesota Linseed Oil Company, on Tenth avenue south, between Washington avenue and the Milwaukee tracks Minneapolis, collapsed and its store of 80,000 bushels of flax seed poured out of the wrecked bins in a glistening stream and spread over the ground.

It was the Tenth avenue side of the building that gave way. A few seconds before the collapse an employe who was inside the building heard a sound which startled him, and made his escape through a window upon a shed roof, thence dropping to the ground just in time to avoid being caught in the wreck.

No cause is known for the collapse The building was a wooden structure made after the pattern of the ordinary grain elevator and it is thought that one of the iron rods running throgh the building as a brace must have rent apart by some extra strain throwing an added load upon the wall which gave way.

Minnesota Coal.

It has leaked out through prominent persons connected with Washington that the Great Northern railroad company has recently located 5,000 acres of unsurveyed land near the Nett Lake Indian reservation, presumably for coal. The lands were entered under an act of congress passed in 1885, and this is the first entry made in Minnesota under United States provisions. For several years past outside parties have been quietly at work on the Little Fork river, which flows by the reservation, sinking for coal, but with what results none have been able to discover. Specimens of excellent coal have been exhibited from time to time, but the men have been reticent as to the locality from whence they came. Parties connected with the railroad have been watching the explorations closely, and in his speech at the immigration convention in St. Paul last fall President James J. Hill made the assertion that coal had been found in Minnesota.

State Board of Health.

The Minnesota state board of health held its annual meeting at the capital, there being present Dr. Franklin Staples, of Winona, the president; Secretary Hewitt, of Minneapolis; Drs. Millard and Hutchinson, of St. Paul; Drs. Bracken and Westbrook, of Minneapolis; Dr. Mayo, of Rochester, and Dr. Wissen, of Albert Lea. Secretary Hewitt submitted an exhaustive report showing that there are in Minnesota 1,698 boards of health, organized and cooperating with the state board, distributed as follows: Cities, 36; villages and boroughs, 295; townships, 1,367; leaving only 27 localities, mostly small village organizations, without active boards of health.

Another Annual.

Annual No. 8 has been under the direction of the Minnesota Farmer's Institute. It is edited by O. C. Gregg, superintendent of the Minnesota Farmers' Institutes. A chapter has been devoted to the dairy, to the horse, to beef, to swine, sheep, poultry, bees, horticulture, institute cooking departments and to a number of miscellaneous subjects. Each department is prepared by an expert connected with the institute work, the idea being to make the annual of practical benefit to the farmers of the state. An edition of 25,000 copies has been issued and the book contains 400 pages.

Lost.

By a failure on the part of the secretary of the interior to carry out the provisions of an act passed by the last congress, the Pipestone Indian reservation of Minnesota, and the valuable quarries located thereon is forfeited to the Yankton Sioux Indians, and the United States not only loses the land, but is out a large amount expended for the erection and maintenance of the Indian school now located on the reservation.

A New Town.

A new town has been created on the shores of Leech lake, Minnesota, and it will soon have a charter to officially recognize its existence. It is called Lawrence. and the surveyors have just completed the skeleton of its anatomy. It is situated on the west shore of the lake at the present terminus of the Brainerd and Northern railroad, an institution owned entirely by Minneapolis lumbermen.

John Sully, a young farm hand, who has worked for a farmer in the Waumandee valley, and has lived in the vicinity of Winona for the past 18 months, left his employer with wages amounting to $175 in his pocket, to walk to the house of his father, several miles away. In a lonely part of the road he met two strangers, who held him up and took all his money and other valuables.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Raspberry Creams.—Flavor a little fondant, with raspberry extract, form in balls, cubes or oblongs, and dip in cream colored a delicate pink. Vanilla creams are made by simple flavoring a piece of fondant with vanilla; form in balls and dip in white, pink or yellow.—Orange Judd Farmer.

—Stuffed Fillet of Mutton.—For this the thick end of a well-hung leg of mutton will be required. The bone must be removed, the cavity filled with good forcemeat which has a little onion in it. The fillet should be filled neatly, well skewed, and bound with tape into shape. Roast it thoroughly, and serve with red currant jelly.—Liverpool Mercury.

—Dainty little "egg cosies" made of cream white moire are decorated by waved lines and zigzags couched in gold thread. A slender gold cord is couched to the bottom edge and passed up and over the curved top; reaching the apex of the cosey, it is caught up in three loops for a handle. The cosey is lined with silk and stuffed with down.

—Leg of Mutton Stuffed.—Have a leg of mutton boned, and fill the cavity with a force meat made of four ounces of fine minced suet, two of ham, and six of bread crumbs. Season with thyme, marjoram, basil, chopped parsley, onion, salt, pepper and nutmeg. Bind with two well-beaten eggs. Sew up the opening and bake, basting frequently.—N. Y. Ledger.

—Quick Biscuits. — Here is Mrs. Rorer's recipe for quick biscuits, which she brushes over the top with milk before putting them into the oven: Rub into one quart of flour, one ounce butter, and add two teaspoons baking powder and sufficient milk, about one and one-half cup to make a dough. Knead lightly and roll out. Cut, place in greased pans and then bake in a quick oven 15 minutes. —Home.

—Apple Dumpling. — Make a rich crust, as for shortcake. Roll into round pieces about five inches in diameter. Pare and slice tart apples, place a small handful in the center of each piece of crust; add sugar, cinnamon and a lump of butter to each; bring the edges together and compress. Place in a pan, sprinkle with flour, sugar and cinnamon. Add boiling water to nearly cover all. Bake till brown. Serve with liquid sauce or sugar and cream. —Housekeeper.

—Tutti Frutti Candy. — Into soft pink fondant colored with cochineal put candied cherries and lay into a buttered bread pan, pressing it flat on the top; make a second layer of fondant colored green (spinach leaves may be used), into which pistachio nuts have been put; color a third layer yellow (saffron will do this) into which put citron or walnuts. Let the whole get very cold. Cut in slices with chopping knife or large carving knife.—Prairie Farmer.

HOW HE WON.

The Stroke of Genius That Gave a Well-Known Reading Clerk His Place.

One of the interesting incidents at the opening session of a new congress is the selection of the reading clerk of the house. The reading clerk is appointed by the clerk of the house, but candidates for the place must take part in a competitive "speaking contest" before the house. John A. Reeve, who was reading clerk during Harrison's administration, was a politician from Cairo, Ill., and one of the best-known characters in Washington at the time. Reeves tells this story:

"I didn't suppose I had any show for the place when it came to the test," said he, "for most of the candidates were college men, and some were elocutionists, while the only elocution I had ever practiced was calling hogs in southern Illinois, though I had been able to get up in a political meeting and make the fellows on the back seats hear me; so I thought I would go into the contest anyhow, and do my best in my own way. But you ought to have heard those elocutionists; the way they rolled their r's and hissed their s's, and said 'ah' and 'l-l' was a caution! Some of them didn't talk like human beings, and others had voices so rich and melodious you couldn't hear them 40 feet away.

"By the time my turn came I had sized up the hall and knew just about where to throw my voice, and I determined to make myself heard if I did nothing else. Each candidate had received a copy of the house bill to read. I noticed that the other fellows started out this way: 'Uh bill,' and so on. Now, 'uh' is a sound that won't carry, and you can't attract the attention of the house by grunting 'Uh!' So when I started I sang out in a loud, clear voice that took them off their feet: 'A-a-a-a-a bill!'—long 'a.' They weren't used to that, and wondered what had broken loose, but it seemed to catch them. I saw I was on the right track, so I went on singing her out clear as a bell, and when I got warmed up I felt as good as I ever did in the hottest speech of a campaign.

"The thing they gave me to read was a terror. It had words in it as long as a dictionary, but I hurried up and slid through them, and was doing pretty well, when I looked down the page and saw a lot of Spanish proper names. Now, I didn't know Spanish from Apache, but I was going about a hundred words a minute, so without stopping I gave them two verses of a little German poem I had learned when a boy, and hang me if a man in that hall seemed to know the difference, except Congressman Niedringhaus, of St. Louis. You ought to have seen him laugh when he heard his native tongue worked off on the house of representatives for Spanish.

"Yes, I got the place, and it was the long 'a' and German poetry that saved me."—N. Y. Sun.

One on the Barber.

The old gentleman with the bland and child-like smile read with apparent relish the beautiful soap-painted sign on the mirror which wished everybody the compliments of the season.

The barber glanced at him interestedly.

"Your hair dyed, sir?"

The child-like smile reached out and covered new territory on the old gentleman's face.

"Yes—it died some time ago."

Contrary to all established precedents the barber allowed his customer to get out of the chair without any reference to the political situation.—N. Y. World.

HURRAH FOR PENNSYLVANIA.

The farmers of Pennsylvania are to be congratulated. M. M. Luther, East Troy, Pa., grew over 200 bushels Salzer's Silver Mine Oats on one measured acre. Think of it! Now there are thirty thousand farmers going to try and beat Mr. Luther and win $200 in gold! and they'll do it. Will you?

Then there is Silver King Barley, cropped on poor soil 116 bus. per acre in 1895. Isn't that wonderful—and corn 230 bus. and potatoes and grasses and clovers, fodder plants, etc., etc. Freight is cheap to all points.

IF YOU WILL CUT THIS OUT AND SEND it with 10c postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will receive their mammoth catalogue and ten packages grains and grasses, including above oats, free. (K.)

If you have borrowed from health to satisfy the demands of business, if your blood is not getting that constant supply of fat from your food it should have, you must pay back from somewhere, and the somewhere will be from the fat stored up in the body.

Time Table.

Going West,	Going East.
10:47, a. m.	8:57, a. m.
7:40 p. m.	4:53, p. m.

DELANO DIARY

—It is said that had there been a cake offered at the K. P. dance Dr. C. B. Ames would surely have taken it.

—The morning passenger from the west was a few minutes late Wednesday. Another wreck is reported near Grove City.

—The I. O. G. T. received three applications for membership at their meeting Saturday evening. This looks encouraging.

—Since last weeks snow, sleighing has been fine, and wood, hay and other commodities have been moved with greater ease than before.

—A sleigh load, 16 young folks, drove to church at Rockford last Sunday evening. They had a good time but were a little late for services.

—Read B F. Christlieb's California article, and if you have not already done so, hunt up last week's GAZETTE and read the "Tournament of Roses."

—Delano still needs that pork packing house. Many loads of fine hogs and other products of the farm that could be worked up here, are driven to Minneapolis.

—The K P. dance in the City Hall, Wednesday night and supper at Meister's Hotel are highly spoken of by all participants. We understand there was 88 tickets sold.

—Len Briley's little girl, of Lake Sarah, fell and fractured the largest bone of her right arm Tuesday. She was brought to Delano for surgical assistance in the evening.

—Every farmer will do well to read our extract from the St. Peter Herald, on ensilage. It can be run on a smaller scale, and yet be profitable, where land is scarce and feed costly.

—Our sister villages Watertown and Waverly are having their usual winter enjoyment, literary societies. Their halls are said to be packed and the fun and instruction are dealt out in chunks.

—Quite a number of our citizens have been having the prevailing epidemic during the past week. Headache seems to be the leading symptom in most cases. Some have been quite sick.

—Delano Lodge, No. 350, I. O. G. T. expect to hold an open meeting at the M. E. church on Saturday evening at 7:30 Grand Secretary E. H. Godfrey, of Minneapolis, is to be present. All are invited.

—On Monday several of our business houses commenced putting up ice for next summers use. The crop is a fine one and since the snow sleighing is good, and a nicer time for the business could not have been selected.

—The 12th of February, Lincoln's birthday, having been set apart as a holiday, deserves some recognition at the hands of our citizens. An entertainment in the hall with short addresses, patriotic songs, etc., would be appropriate. Lets have it.

—Feb. 22nd is less than a mouth away and our officers and committee of arrangments and programme, for observing the birthday of the Father of our Country, should bestir themselves and try to set things moving in time to have as grand and good a time as has the Society on the three gatherings of the kind already had.

—In commenting on our article on the liability for damage of the school board for having but one door to a six room school house, in case of fire, the Howard Lake Herald says: "A law should be passed obliging public buildings to have more than one exit." Correct, brother Saylor. Our City Hall would be a terrible fire-trap in case of fire when crowded.

—The Sons of the Revolution sent out some offers of prizes for the best essay on the Declaration of Independence. The mail fell into the hands of our enterprising Board of Education, and we hear that a copy of the Declaration of Independence finally reached the school house, without explanation or offer. This matter should be looked into. Our boys and girls are entitled to a privilage to write essays on this important part of our country's history. Perhaps if there was a single member of the Board of Education with a boy of his own to enter the contest we would hear more about it. Wake up, Board! Wake up!

—But a few more weeks and the village election will occur, in the natural order of things. If the Triumvirate sees fit perhaps they may declare it entirely unnecessary to have an election. From their past action, or inaction, in neglecting to fill the vacancies occuring on their board, and in other important places, it looks as if they would like to do so. Since the village has become a drawer of water for Jim Hill for a term of years, and made other arrangements for the future; even to levying a $300. tax on the people, in order to be felt, there is no telling but they may surrender all power into the hands of a single individual, a Little King, some fellow who wants the job, and save the trouble of an election.

LATER.—We learn that John Coolen has been elected councilman.

County Cullings.

The Supreme Court will decide next Tuesday as to who is Clerk of Court, Vorse or O'Leary.

It is rumored that Mr. Lamson is likely to take charge of the Republican party in Wright county, Mr. Culkin stepping out of the chairmanship.

Anoka has filed an answer in the injunction suit brought by Hastings for stopping them from getting the Hospital for Insane. Delano may get it yet.

In commenting on last years county printing the Journal says the money should have been kept in the county, and speaks of A PRESENT SYNDICATE! Do tell! Let us know about it! A Live Syndicate, right at home.

The Eagle announces that John Nugent will retire from the chairmanship of Wright County Democratic Committee, and run for Sheriff. It is awful strange how the Eagle knows John's mind so far in advance of everybody else. Is she a mind reader?

Friend Saylor shows some marks of improvement in his paper. He now has an occasional short poem. This week he had one from the Journal on John Alley and another on the "Bicycle Girl." Keep up your courage, brother, you are coming out of the kinks.

The Montrose school is getting up an entertainment under the direction of Prof. Pryor. The proceeds go to buy a school library. The cause is a good one and "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" will, doubtless, be enjoyed by the different audiences met throughout the towns visited.

Last Friday John C. O'Leary filed an answer in the Supreme Court to the application of the Attorney General for a writ of quo warranto, to oust him from the office of Clerk of Court. O'Leary claims that a law passed in 1895 fixes the time for electing his successor as the general election in 1896. The case was set for hearing on Tuesday, Jany. 28.

It does beat all how little members of a combine have to say about the combine when they are members themselves; for instance, how mum the Herald-Tribune-Eagle Times-Journal is concerning the County printing this year. It appears, on the face of things that there was an understanding to divide the spoils; that the stalwarts couldn't capture it alone, so the mugwumps and the turncoats had to be taken in to make the deal go. The pure and undefiled Hersld fathered the bid and promised to print some of the work in the other four papers. Of course the Herald editor could not have made the bid without having an understanding beforehand, with the papers in which he offered to publish some of the work, as he might be obliged to pay each paper the full price for which he was to publish in his own and four others, Why don't each one of the combine tell their readers all about the "job."

The BUFFALO GAZETTE $1.00 year

Literary News.

No one ever thought of introducing so expensive a feature as lithographic color work in the days when the leading magazines sold for $4.00 a year and 35 cents a copy. But times change and the magazines change with them. It has remained for the Cosmopolitan, sold at one dollar a year, to put in an extensive lithographic plant capable of printing 320,000 pages per day (one color). The January issue presents as a frontispiece a water-color drawing by Eric Pape, illustrating the last story of Robert Louis Stevenson, which has probably never been excelled even in the pages of the finest dollar French periodicals. The cover of The Cosmopolitan is also changed, a drawing of page length by the famous Paris artist Rossi, in lithographic colors on white paper takes the place of the manilla back with its red stripe. Hereafter the cover is to be a fresh surprise each month.

Among Our Exchanges.

The Wright county printers have "got together" on the county printing and the result is that they get full legal rates for all of it. Very sensible proceedings.—Star-News,

Those who predicted that the Republican Congress would increase the chances for the election of a Democratic president have good reasons for congratulating themselves.—St. Cloud Times.

After some consideartion we fail to observe the point to be made by the retirement of the greenbacks by the government. If it is the contraction of the currency, it certainly is uncalled for. -Atwater Republican.

While in Minneapolis last Tuesday we found evidence that the Republican newspapers in that city do not fairly represent the sentiment of their party in Minneapolis regarding Gov. Clough. The newspapers there are making a desperate fight against him, but the labor element there appears to be very strongly in his favor. The opposition to him seems to be principally among the silk sock element. It looks as if the lumbermen and the labor element would come out ahead in the fight. --Brainerd Journal.

Diphtheria at Faribault.

Special to the Dispatch.

FARIBAULT, Jan. 20.—There are a number of diphtheria cases in this city. Grace, only daughter of C. D. McKellip, associate editor of the Republican, died last night after a short illness of the dreaded disease.

Woman's Column.

BY WRIGHT COUNTY W. C. T. U.

Editorially the Union Signal has this to say of the drunkard:

"A significant change in public sentiment is that which proposes to deal with the drunkard as one who commits a crime against society The studies of Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson and other famous experts have proved that alcoholism is a disease, while the studies of religious and ethical experts have proved it a crime against both natural and spiritual laws. Now comes the statesman and his position is that the drunkard is an enemy of society and an unmitigated nuisance and danger in the home. He, therefore, proposes that the state shall found industrial homes, in which drunkards shall be confined by order of the court."

"England has already gone a long way toward securing such a law. It has passed the House of Commons and the next Parliament will undoubtedly place the subject before its members."

"The Austrian government is about to introduce a bill which proposes to treat the drunkard as a person mentally incapable and likely to inflict injury upon the community, not only by actual violence but by example, and to provide for him a term of detention which is to be two years with power to extend or diminish the time according to results. For ourselves we believe in the "Do Everything Policy" for the drunkard. We favor the Keeley Cure, the Christian home for inebriate men (that of Dr. Thompson in Chicago being an excellent example), the gospel meeting, the temperance pledge. All of these are helps that should be gratefu ly recognized by those who are trying to deliver men from bondage. We hold as we have always held to the gospel cure as the only complete deliverance, and we believe this view to be founded on a philosophical basis, which has perhaps never been better expressed than by Dr. Horace Bushnell in the well known phrase:"

"'The expulsive power of a new affection.' For when the love of God dwells at the center of a man's being, it works out through all his senses, habits and manner of life, uplifting, purifying and cleansing all."

"But we confidently believe that a house of detention where men might 'sober up' would help them to perceive more clearly the infinite power of a Christian life take them out of bondage. We also believe that to arrest the drunkard, no matter what his social position, and to place him in custody, would greatly deter the ignorant and thoughtless from looking lightly upon such a brutalized condition, and would thus be of incalculable service in stamping the drunkard with the displeasure of the community in which he moves."

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied to the Spatulated Type, the thumb of which is one of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such people, a whole volume of new home, condensed in a small space, or that record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will give rare pleasure in the magnificent oil portrait of roses, 18½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated living flower painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1896. The cost of this superb work of art was $10,000; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and observer of life's, who will be deeply interested in these developed numbers in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire and vast scientific field, including every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription. It will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Fanning Type of Thumb which is fairly in the small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong especially to the other sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy—free, and it will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put it in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of whole family.

HIDDEN INFLUENCES.

You hadn't ought to blame a man for things
he hasn't done,
For works he hasn't written, or for fights he hasn't won;
The waters may look placid on the surface all around,
And yet there may be undertow a keeping of him down.

Since the days of Eve and Adam, when the fight of life began
It ain't been safe, my brethren, for to lightly
judge a man;
He may be trying faithful fer to make his life a go,
And yet his legs git tangled in the treacherous
undertow.

He may not lack in learnin' an' he may not want fer coin,
He may be always workin' with the patientest of pains;
And yet go unrewarded, an', my friends, how can we know,
What heights he might a' climbed up to but for the undertow.

You've heard the Yankee story of a hen's nest with a hole,
And how the hen kep' layin' eggs with all her
might and soul,
Yet never got a settin', nor a single egg I trow,
That hen was simply kickin' 'gin a hidden
undertow

There's holes in lots of hen's nests, and you've got to peep below,
To see the eggs a-rolling where they hadn't ought to go;
Don't blame a man for failin' to achieve a laurel crown,
until you're sure the undertow ain't draggin' of him down.

THE Minnesota Horticulturist for September has come to our table. It is issued monthly by A. W. Latham, Secretary of the State Horticultural Society. It is well gotten up in a neat and attractive form and deserves a place among the reading material of fruit raisers throughout the State.

THE 41st regular session of the Fifth District Lodge I. O. G. T. will be held at Brownton, on Friday and Saturday. Feb. 28 and 29. Subordinate Lodges are entitled to one delegate at large and one for every ten members or major fraction thereof. Free entertainment is to be furnished all delegates and visitors.

PRESIDENTIAL possibilities are beginning to be picked out by various democrats as the time draws near for nominating. Roger Q. Mills, of Texas, has lately made himself many friends by the bold stand for sound Democratic principles, taken by him in a recent speech. He would doubtless find a good following in the south and west. Henry Watterson has several times been mentioned as a possible candidate. His well known tariff views would help him. People would look for no backward step on this issue, with Henri at the helm. Not so much is heard of a New York man, as formerly. It is about time for the good of the party, that as good a man can be found for president, in some other than the Empire state. Then William Morrison, of Illinois, has been mentioned, and D. W. Voorhees, of Indiana. There seems to be an abundance of material in United States, from which to choose.

What we want is a man that is in sympathy with the people, and has the backbone to stand by his convictions.

Republicans have talked of Reed and McKinley, and Harrison and Allison, so long and so loud that it is doubtful if either receives a nomination. Then there is Cushman K. Davis and others who would willingly accept the honors if thrust upon them.

Of course the Democrats have not done all they voted to do on the tariff question, but the present bill is far better for poor people than was its predecessor, the McKinley bill; though the similarity is so great that Republicans claim it is hard to see the difference.

Coin of the Constitution.

The Constitution of the United States provides, among other things that "The Congress shall have power to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign Coin, and fix the Standard of Weights and measures."

"To Provide for the Punishment of Counterfeiting the Securities and current Coin of the United States."

It don't seem by these sentences that Congress is expected to ask other nations what kind of money we shall have; but to use its best judgement to coin money and to regulate the value of foreign coin as will best serve the people's interests in this country. Webster defines coin, "to make of a definite fineness and convert into coins, as a mass of metal; to mint; to manufacture; as, to coin silver dollars; to coin a medal."

The Issues of the Campaign.

Not for a long time has there such doubt existed in the minds of people of this country as to where they are at, as at the present time. People and politicians are at sea. No body seems sure as to what is best to do. Republicans and Democrats, alike, are for bimetallism. And many prominent men of both parties are forninst it. Some want free silver some don't; but you can't tell by that to what party he belongs. It looks now as if there would be a bicephalus issue. As if the Democrats might declare for free trade, and as kind of a tail to the kite, a gold standard; while the Republicans put up McKinley and make believe protection is the issue and declare for silver money along with the gold. Then if you don't like one combination, you can take the other. In case this arrangement is made, we predict that unless a great amount of electioneering is done, the third and fourth parties will get together on a free trade platform with a bimetallic base and make the grandest run of all, and sweep the country like a cyclone.

This dilly dally, wishy washy way of going at things is quite tiresome to the average voter. He now wants some principles, and some men that will support principles through thick and thin, and then will he go in to win. Now is the time to make known what you want, and you, each of you, have as good a right to be heard as has your neighbor. Don't be afraid to speak your mind and then if you are a democrat, and for the coin of the constitution, and for free trade, free speech, free schools, and just and equal rights to all and ssecial legislation for none, don't be afraid to say so.

Diphtheria.

From many places in our State come reports of sporadic cases of what seems to be our most fatal desease for a part of each year, Diphtheria. Some cases are appearing right here at home and it stands everybody in hand to be on their guard and comply with the law in the matter, and do what they can to prevent its spread. If a child complains of headache, is feverish, has sore throat, however slight, it is better to put them in a room by themselves where they can be comfortable, so far as temperature and fresh air are concerned. Keep all the rest of the family away from them. An upper room is safest for this purpose. Don't allow all the neighbors to come in and bring their children to get the desease and spread it broadcast over the country.

If the little patient will drink milk give it all it wants, in any form it prefers. If it don't call for it give it it a few spoonsfull every hour regularly as you would medicines. Keep the up from the start. Examine the throat for white membrane and if you intend to have a doctor get him early enough to have all the chance there is to do good. Some throats require swabbing and local treatment, carefully done, others do not need it. No attention or reliance should be placed in remedies advised by eyebody that comes along. Only a well directed line of treatment can be of much avail. And where the desease is firmly established even this often fails.

More can be done in the line of saving your family by keeping them entirely away from infected persons and places. People should not crowd to meetings, dances, or church where the air is foul with many breaths, some loaded with Diphtheria germs, but should keep at home in pure air and wait until the sickness has disappeared and houses been thoroughly fumigated before venturing out.

Teachers should carefully look their scholars over every morning and noon and any that are not feeling entirely well should be more carefully inspected and if the least doubt exists that diphtheria may be the ailment, sent home until he recovers. No one who is living in an infected house should be allowed in school.

Remembering the fearful fatality of the epedemics of the past few years our people can not fail to think of these thing. And if they are careful in the outset may suppress the terrible malady, in our midst, at once, and prevent its further spread. And save the lives of their own little ones. Let every one be careful.

If any of your neighbors are quarantined see that they are provided with plenty of good wholesome food, ready cooked, and you will benefit them more than by going into their houses to run risks.

Letters From Alaska.

Last weeks Brainard Journal contains a couple of letters from Juneau, Alaska, written by Messrs Seelye, who had, when the letters were written, been at Juneau two days and five days, respectively. We note several points of interest to our readers. Juneau contains about 2,000 people; is 800 miles from railroad; has electric lights, city water and sewers. Merchandise of various kinds bring about the same prices as they do in Minnesota; labor is higher, shave 25 cts., bath 50 cts., beer 15 cts., whiskey 50 cts. for two or 30 cts. for one glass. Gambling is indulged in, people take the law in their owe hands and honesty is the rule. It is a great country for fur, but the most money in this business is in the interior. Mining will surely pay.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jany. 21, 1896.

It remained for Senator Wolcott to strike the first discordant note heard in Congress in connection with President Cleveland's Monroe doctrine message, and the appointment of the Venezuelan Boundary Commission, which he declared to be a menace rather than a guarantee of peace. That Mr. Wolcott is a brilliant orator is conceded by all, but that he is too shallow ever to become a statesman was well known before he delivered that speech attacking Secretary Olney, President Cleveland and the Monroe doctrine. Oratory is a gift, while statesmanship can only be acquired by deep study and long experience, with more than the average allowance of brains to start with. Had Senator Wolcott confined his remarks to opposing the Monroe doctrine resolution this week reported to the Senate by the committee on Foreign Relations, he would have been in good company, as many of the strongest friends of the Monroe doctrine consider that resolution ill-timed and badly worded, but when he tried to jump upon the administration for its action in patriotically upholding the Monroe doctrine, and upon the doctrine itself, he found himself alone.

Although there are lots of strong silver men among the democratic members of the House and Senate, with the exception of Representative Bell, of Colo., who is more of a populist than a democrat, not one of them took part in the silver conference held in Washington this week, for the purpose of making arrangements for holding a national silver convention to nominate a Presidential ticket. All of the silver democrats were invited to participate in this conference, but regarding it as merely a tail to the populist kite, they declined doing so. In fact nearly all the members of Congress, even the populists, seem to have turned the cold shoulder to the silver conference, which was composed of nearly the same men who at the last silver conference nominated Sibley, of Pa., for President.

Col. J. C. Clarke, of Ala., president of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, is expressing some very robust political opinions around Washington just now. For instance, he says: "The only chance the democracy has to win is to put forth a plank in the National platform declaring for silver in unmistakable terms. No straddles or equivocal language will be accepted by the people. They have been fed on that sort of stuff long enough. There are 157 electoral votes in the Southern States that can be carried on a straight silver platform—one that says what it means and means what it says—but they cannot be had for a gold standard candidate on a single standard platform. The people are hungry for a real live issue and they ought to have the chance to be recorded on that one. If the democrats throw away this opportunity another such may not come for many years."

Tim Cambell, who for a considerable period represented one of the New York city districts in the House, and who, when he failed to secure the Tammany nomination, ran as an independent democrat and was defeated by Henry Miner, the Tammany candidate, has been turned down by one of the Home Election Committees. He contested Miner's seat, but the committee decided against him. Tim says he'll try again. Personally Tim is very popular in Washington. He originated the expression, "Whats the Constitution between friends," which was jocularly quoted by Senator Hill the other day.

The departure of Miss Clara Barton, president of the Red Cross Society, for Armenia, and the reporting of a resolution expressing sympathy for the Armenians and calling upon the European powers to give the protection guaranteed them by treaty, to the Senate, brought that matter quite prominently to the front this week. Although Secretary Olney does not believe that the Sultan of Turkey will allow Miss Barton to enter Armenia for the purpose of distributing money contributed by our people for the destitute Armenians, after his recent order against it, he has instructed Mr. Terrell, our minister to Turkey, to aid Miss Barton in every way that he can.

Secretary Olney has furnished Congress with all the information in his possession concerning the Cuban revolution. The hot heads in Congress are still advocating immediate recognition of Cuban belligerancy, but the conservatives who counsel moderation for a while longer, are still holding back.

Speech making is the principal industry of the Senate just now, while the House is railroading appropriation bills, so as to be ready for an early adjournment.

BULKY.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

Weather too warm, we have an uncomforfable feeling.

The sleighing has been quite good on all the country roads, but two or three days like to day would spoil our sleighing, had rather see more snow than to loose what we know have.

Just now there seems to be quite a good deal of sickness.

Andrew Brown is on the sick list. Dr. Tibbits, of Wayzata, was called.

O. Styner is getting quite a good deal of sawing to do.

The social given by the W. R. C. at school house hall, Maple Plain on last Saturday evening was a success financialy and otherwise.

Cows and hogs seem to be in good demand. No doubt the creamery business has had something to do in creating a ready market for those two domestic animals.

Business at the Lyndale creamery is quite stirring and they seem to be doing fine work. They also have two stores there which are doing a fair business considering these hard times.

Our genial friend J. C. Johnson, who is one of the Lyndale merchants, and also Postmaster under this Democratic administration says his business is quite good, considering all things.

Knute come out in a speech and declairs himself a gold bug and I suppose he expects his state (Minnesota) to follow him and declare for a single gold standard too. Suppose that old John Sherman, the Senate's ring master has converted him to idolatry and he too will worship the same God (gold) as the rest of the single standard men. If there is a man in Congress who is there for no other purpose than to work for the good of his country and the whole people at large we would like to look at him, for in these later days he must be quite a curiosity.

The way things have been going on in Congress for the last twenty years might as well turn it into a house of lords, crown the last President (Grover) king, for it seems that the people have no rights which they are bound to respect. To hear some of those fellows in Congress talk about money and finance is enough to make the average man feel ashamed, knowing he is of the same species. Mr. Editor, money is one of the elements that keep alive a nation, it is same as blood to the body, and why everybody does not know that a single gold standard is antagonistic to the interest of this country (except the rich) is more than a mystery to me. Should we have a gold standard it would only be a question of time when it would accomplish its own destruction.

We, the people of this country have been and are today being made fools of by those fellows who have got into office, not because they are loaded down with brains, but on account of a little money, cheek, and shrewdness.

Now Mr. Knute if you ever expect to join in the chorus with the Angel Gabriel you want to put your mouth to the silver trumpet.

EUROPEAN LETTER.

(From Our Special Correspondent.)

NAPLES, Italy, Jan'y 10, 1896.

We have returned soaked and disappointed from Vesuvius. Our clothes and our tempers have been ruined; Cook, the excursion fiend, has fallen, in our estimation, and Vesuvius is simply beneath our notice. We went to the crater in a rain that was sufficient to have put out the volcano. We have jolted miles in a springless wagon, we have ridden springless donkeys waded in ashes up to our ankles, and all this in the interest of pleasure.

We left Naples about nine o'clock in the morning under the supervision of Cook and in one of Cook's wagons. The morning was not altogether promising but "hope springs eternal" and we thought the day would probably be clear—Naples was just beginning to really wake up for the day, for the dolce far niente of the people begins by laying in bed in the morning. At last we reached the open country and while the clouds gathered overhead our spirits were kept up by a band of strolling musicians who walked along by the carriage and sang "Santa Lucia" and other delightful Italian songs, varying them occasionally with "Daisy Bell" in honor of our nationality and seeming disappointed when we failed to look appreciative. We stopped at a little mountain inn where our honest driver who probably shared profits with the proprietor, told us we could get the best wine in all Italy. At the next stop we left the carriage and mounted donkeys, to cross the lava fields. At this moment nature's feelings overcame her and as if in anticipation of the fate that awaited us, began to weep. Everyone commented gleefully on the fact and we mounted the diabolical beasts, as premier Oliver said when the French started to Berlin with "light beards." When we reached that spot on our return we had seen Vesuvius but a strange silence had fallen on all the party, and those who found voice at all hinted it in declaring that hence forth their mission would be to dissuade others from the ascent of the volcano. An incompatibility had sprung up between all the members of the company and eyes that looked love at the beginning of the trip were now singularly inexpressive behind straightened bangs, and under dripoling hats.

Probably the donkeys were no worse than other donkeys, but the road they had to travel was but a rough path and it seemed to me that any self-respecting donkey would not have taken advantage of so many rocks in the road for purpose of stumbling as these innocent looking animals did. The saddles were not fastened securely, and the guides, one of whom accompanied each rider and shout-dreadful threats to the donkeys were expected to hold the saddle on. When the donkey fell down, the saddle slipped forward and cuffed the animal on the head. When he went up a hill it settled insecurely on his tail and finally when the guide had grown tired of holding it on, it tumbled off altogether.

The rain at last began to pour and the wind rushed violently down the mountain. It was impossible to hold umbrellas, and cold, wet, and disheartened, the party reached the station of the funiculaire road that leads up the steep yielding ashy cone to within a few hundred yards of the crater of the volcano.

The only fire in the restaurant was in the kitchen, and the head-waiter, who speakes five languages and probably gets $25 a month, invited us to warm ourselves, an invitation we gladly accepted. When the world had assumed a brighter hue through the medium of an omelette and and steak we started up the mountain again. The road is almost perpendicular and one feels much more as if the ascent were being made in an elevator than on a rail track. It is called a funiculaire, but is really a cable with double tracks and the cars are balanced so they pass each other midway of the distance. On either side are the great fields of lava and ashes, the former of course, now cooled and in the most fantastic shapes, in which, as in clouds, one sees most clearly what his fancy suggests. Perhaps it was the influence of the donkey ride and the weather but it seemed to me Dore's illustrations of Dante's "Inferno" might have been photographs of these formations.

At the top of the funiculaire we were met by a new relay of guides who took off their big coats and wrapped them about the drenched women in the party. Chairs carried by four men were to be had for those unable to walk to the crater. A guide went ahead of each of us and throwing a strap over his shoulder told us to hold it tight and lean back. Ones sympathy for the guide prevents him leaning back very far at first, but later sympathy is lost in fatigue and one resigns himself to being pulled bodily up the hill through the deep ashes. The crater was pointed out to us and we were warned not to go too close, but we saw nothing but a place a little more foggy than the dense mist covering the mountain, we saw the running lava which looked temptingly warm, and the sulphur which was a bright yellow and smelled like a match factory. Descending the hill again to the funiculaire, the ladies hung limply on the arms of the guides and regardless of best shoes, and silk underskirts suffered themselves to be dragged through the fine grey ashes, too weary and wet to protest.

At the lower station a stop of several hours was made in anticipation of a clearing up of the weather, a hope that proved to be vain however. During this time the registry album a large blank book in which tourists may find a place to receive their feelings, furnished us diversion. We were called upon to be proud of our erudite countrymen and women when we found these inscriptions after the big, black U. S. A.—"It must be seen to be appreciated. Grand beyond all description. I imagined it a furnace fanned by a hot and raging goddess to avenge her wrath." Another had written: "We should have had it for Chicago" and still another of a less practical nature summed up the description of it in three words: "Grand, gloomy and peculiar" A man who had a day like ours for the ascent had written:

"The day is dark, and cold and dreary
The rain and mists are never weary
It is too windy, chill and damp
For ought but to snuffle, cuss and stamp."

It is a sad fact that the new woman is not taking a hilarious interest in leap year.

Just one-half the members of the present congress are college graduates. Time will tell whether they are better public servants than the other half.

A good football team, a rowing crew and a college yell seem to be the leading things, says the Chicago Inter Ocean, of too many modern universities.

Truly, we do not half appreciate the good things in this life. When a man is in the midst of a sound and dreamless sleep he has no idea of what a good time he is having.

During the year 1895 53 railroads were sold in foreclosure, aggregating 13,129 miles of lines and representing a total bonded debt and stock of $775,776,000, and receivers were appointed for 31 roads.

The present year of grace, 1896, enjoys the distinction of being the last leap year of the 19th century. The year 1900, which ends the century, is not a leap year, and consequently February will not have the 29th day until 1904.

The Cora Belle Fellows fiasco is a lesson to white girls that it is unwise to marry Indians with the idea of reforming them. Cora married Sam Campbell, an uncouth red man. The latter deserted his wife for a squaw and has just been sentenced to jail for theft.

Andrew Carnegie has announced that he will give $50,000 a year for the embellishment of the museums and the art gallery in Pittsburgh bearing his name. The only proviso that he attaches to the gift is that two or more pictures by American artists be purchased each year.

Library student in Paris now wear "muzzles" when persuing the old books in the national library—"not because there is fear they will bite the old volumes, but to prevent the inhalation of the book microbes into their lungs." The germ theory is responsible for many curious things, and this is one of them.

The Chinese speak of the Yellow river as the "Sorrow of China," and no wonder. It is estimated that its floods in the present century have cost that country 11,000,000 of lives. During the past 100 years the river has changed its course 22 times, and now flows into the sea through a mouth 300 miles distant from that of a century ago.

There is nothing in the history of the nations of the earth to compare with the development of the United States during the last 100 years. At the present time the aggregate wealth of this country surpasses that of any country on the globe. According to the census of 1890 the entire wealth of the United States was computed at $66,336,000,000.

Taking accurate photographs of the bones of the human body through the flesh and even through wooden screens is among the marvels of modern science. Prof. Roentgen, of Wurzburg university, has succeeded in securing several remarkable negatives. One instance is that of a man's ankle, wherein a bullet was imbedded. The photograph shows the bullet as it is lodged in the ankle, thus revealing what heretofore could only be learned by probing and the use of the surgeon's knife.

The expert electrician who was charged with investigation of the plan for the electric propulsion of canal boats in New York and to watch the experiments with the towing system has made his report. In summing up his work he says that "the electric towing system appears to present so many meritorious features that I have no hesitation in indorsing it as the system deserving preference over any other hitherto experimented upon."

The amount of energy developed by the lightning stroke has been investigated in Germany. It was observed that a lightning discharge struck a wooden post of a house at Klausthal and fused two nails each about three-eighths of an inch in thickness. Then experiments showed that the same work required a current of 200 amperes and 20,000 volts to do it in a second of time, this representing about 7,000 horse-power. If the duration of the lightning stroke be taken as one-tenth of a second its energy must be estimated to be 70,000-horse power.

Nikola Tesla, a New York electrician, has invented an apparatus with which he says it is possible to cure any organic disease, including consumption. Hereafter, nobody need die, except as the result of old age or accident, for the invention of Mr. Tesla will be within the reach of everybody, inasmuch as the inventor will, he says, present the world with the fruit of his labors. The cures will be effected by means of a thorough shaking up of the human system. Mr. Tesla calls the treatment a system of mechanical vibrations, and his apparatus he calls an oscillator.

From statistics gathered by Henry Garnett, of the United States geological survey, it appears that the negro population of the United States has succeeded better in agriculture than in any other calling. He finds that of 4,767,179 farms in this country 549,642 are occupied by negroes, and of this latter number 120,738 are owned by the occupants. The male negroes engaged in agriculture number 1,329,584, of whom 510,619 are independent farmers. Mr. Garnett expresses the belief that there is little prospect of the race ever becoming an important factor in manufacture, transportation or commerce.

The rich gold discoveries of Forty-Mile creek in Alaska belong to the United States, and not to Great Britain. The 141st meridian of longitude has been actually determined by an employe of the British government and properly marked at certain places. Gen. Duffield, the chief of the coast survey, says it shows that but 16 miles of the creek as the bird flies and 23 miles as the water flows is in British territory, and that in this portion no gold has been discovered. The remaining portion of the creek and that in which gold has been discovered is in Alaska, and belongs to the United States.

Gov. Thurston, of New Mexico, announced the 28th that he was powerless to stop prize fighting in that territory, as there was no law making it a felony and no money to pay for calling out militia.

While Mrs. Jane Houston, of Wellfleet, Neb., was attending a revival meeting the evening of the 28th, thieves entered her residence and stole diamonds valued at $50,000.

The Western Passenger association the 28th refused to extend the time limit on tickets to the G. A. R. encampment at St. Paul.

Express Agent Krout, at Colorado Springs, Colo., was arrested the 28th on the charge of being implicated in the theft of $30,000 from the Wells-Fargo Co. some months ago.

The effort to move the steamship St. Paul the 28th was unavailing.

IN DEADLY COMBAT.

A Battle at Jefferson, Ia., Results in Two Deaths.

Two Men and a Woman Also Are Injured—Details of the Struggle—A Sixteen-Year-Old Boy Saves His Father's Life.

Jefferson, Ia., Jan. 28.—As a result of a desperate fight at an early hour Monday morning two men are dead, two men desperately wounded and a young woman seriously injured. The killed are: John Brown, Jr., and John Fleck. The injured are John Brown, Sr., George Fleck and Mary Brown.

As John Brown, a respected and peaceable farmer, was at home about nine o'clock there was a knock at the door. Supposing a neighbor had come to spend an hour he opened the door, only to look into the muzzle of a double-barreled shotgun leveled by his neighbor, John Fleck.

Quick as a flash he knocked aside the weapon and jumped upon his assailant. The gun fell without having been discharged and the two men grappled and went down. At this juncture George, the 17-year-old son of John Fleck, who had accompanied his father upon his murderous errand, appeared upon the scene. George carried a six-shooter in each hand, and was no sooner in the house than he began firing.

Brown was shot in the cheek and Fleck received a bullet through the hand. Scarcely had the echo of the shots died away before John, Jr., the eldest son of Mr. Brown, entered the house, and young Fleck began pumping lead into him. One bullet took effect in the breast just above the heart and another carried away a big chunk of skin from the forehead. Young Brown afterwards died.

At this moment Jim, the youngest Brown boy, a lad of 16 years, attracted by the firing, entered the room and at once realizing the situation grabbed a stick of stove-wood and knocked the revolver from Fleck's hands. John Brown, Jr., although desperately wounded, reached for one of the revolvers and shot George Fleck in the back just as he started to run. Jim followed and caught him, clubbing him until he was insensible.

A Frightful Struggle.

Meanwhile the fearful struggle between the old men continued, and Jim returned to the house just in time to save his father from being choked to death. He dealt Fleck a blow on the head rendering him insensible, and then turned his attention to his injured brother. As soon as the elder Brown recovered sufficiently to take a hand, he seized a bottle containing powder that had fallen from Fleck's overcoat pocket and smashed it over the latter's head. Then seizing the jagged bottle he punched and gouged at the latter's face and head until it was literally a mass of pulp.

Within a few moments the neighbors attracted by the shots came to the scene. They found the old man Fleck lying in the middle of the room, his head on a pillow and his feet and arms chained with a logchain. He was unconscious and a frightful sight. Mary Brown, the daughter, who had been milking at the time the affray commenced, was found in the cowyard, where she had been knocked over with a milking stool by one of the Flecks before they came to the house.

The Flecks will be placed in jail to await the action of the grand jury. The younger Brown boy, Jim, who played the most important part in the bloody melee and saved his father's life, was not injured. The motive for the conspiracy is not well known. The Flecks bear a hard name, and it is asserted the neighbors, among them the Browns, have accused them of chicken stealing.

Two Dead.

The evident purpose of John Fleck and his son was to murder the entire Brown family. John Brown, Jr., and the elder Fleck both died Monday night. The elder Brown and George Fleck, although badly used up, will recover, and Mary Brown's injuries were not serious.

THE SUFFRAGISTS.

Woman's Convention at Washington Reelects Old Officers.

Washington, Jan. 28.—The woman suffragists reelected the following officers for the ensuing year: Honorary president, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, New York city; president, Susan B. Anthony, Rochester, N. Y.; vice president at large, Rev. Anna H. Shaw, Philadelphia; corresponding secretary, Rachel Foster Avery, Philadelphia; recording secretary, Alice Stone Blackwell, Boston, Mass.; treasurer, Harriet Taylor Upton, Warren, O.; chairman committee on organization, Carrie Chapman Catt, New York city. As under the constitution auditors of the national association must be changed every year, Miss Loury Clay, of Kentucky, and Miss Sarah Cooper, of San Francisco, were elected to those positions.

Monday's sessions were devoted to reports of various committees and memorial addresses. During the afternoon the members, upon the invitation of Mrs. John R. McLean, attended a reception, where they were presented to Mrs. Julia Dent Grant. At night the new star to the woman suffrage flag, the state of Utah, was the most important feature, and a cordial welcome was extended the senators and representatives in congress from that state.

Cleveland to Venezuela.

Caracas, Venezuela, Jan. 27.—Gen. George Uzlar has arrived from the United States and has delivered to President Crespo a message from President Cleveland, asking the people of Venezuela to refrain from violence during the present crisis. A Paris cable reports that the American commission has invited England and Venezuela to participate in the boundary inquiry. In an interview Dr. Rojas, the minister of foreign affairs, authorized the statement that Venezuela will gladly assist the commission and will place at its disposal the official records.

Crofton Asked to Resign.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—Col. R. E. A. Crofton, commanding the post at Fort Sheridan, received an autograph letter from Secretary of War Lamont asking him to resign on account of the numerous scandals connected with the post and stating that he had conferred with President Cleveland, who would be very much gratified if he would resign. Col. Crofton refused to resign stating that his relative, Mr. Dupont, of Delaware, claims an election to the senate and that he counts on his influence to retain him in the service.

PASSED BY THE HOUSE.

Senate Resolution Relating to the Armenian Outrages Goes Through.

Washington, Jan. 28.—In the house the concurrent resolution relating to Armenian outrages, agreed to by the senate, was received. Mr. Hepburn (rep., Ia.) offered an amendment instructing the president to give the Turkish minister his passports and end all diplomatic relations with Turkey. This called forth a rebuke from Mr. Hitt (rep., Ill.) chairman of the committee on foreign affairs, who scored Mr. Hepburn for his extraordinary proposal to sever diplomatic relations with a friendly foreign power. In reply Mr. Hepburn said: "We want no relations with that murderer." The amendment was rejected—121 to 19.

The measure was discussed for four hours. Various amendments were offered on the ground that the resolution did not go far enough, but they were all rejected. Those arguing in favor of the resolution were Messrs. Quigg (rep., N. Y.), McCreary (dem., Ky.), Hitt (rep., Ill.), Morse (rep., Mass.), Smith (rep., Mich.), Mahany (rep., N. Y.), Brumm (rep., Pa.), Sperry (rep., Conn.), and Howe (rep., N. Y.). Messrs. Turner (dem., Ga.), Grosvenor (rep., O.), Walsh (dem., N. Y.), Adams (rep., Pa.), Johnson (rep., Cal.), and Bailey (dem., Tex.) argued against it.

At the close of the debate the resolution was adopted by a vote of 143 to 26.

It declares it to be an imperative duty in the interest of humanity to express the earnest hope that the European concert brought about by the Berlin treaty may be speedily given its just effect in such decisive measures as shall stay the hand of fanaticism and lawless violence and as shall secure to the unoffending Christians of the Turkish empire all the rights belonging to them as men and Christians and as beneficiaries of the explicit provisions of that treaty; requests the president to communicate these resolutions to the five signatory powers thereof; and declares that congress will support the president in the most vigorous action he may take for the protection and security of American citizens in Turkey and to obtain redress for injuries committed upon the persons and property of such citizens.

LAYS IT TO THE SENATE.

Dun Says It Injures Business by Doing Nothing.

New York, Jan. 25.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"The week has been marked by an improvement apparent rather than real. Prices of some products have risen, but only because supplies are believed to be smaller than was expected. Prices of pig iron and billets have risen, but ecause coke and ore have been made dearer and not because of any better demand for finished products. Money has been easy, but only because more has been borrowed from Europe at a time when the actual balance of trade takes money hence to Europe. The senate still injures business by doing nothing, and the treasury cannot expect to gain in gold as yet, but loses less than was expected. It is generally assumed that the new loan will be placed without difficulty. Business at the mills does not revive. Payments through clearing houses for the week are 6.5 per cent larger than last year, but 29.3 per cent less than in 1893, being less satisfactory than for a long time.

"A deluge of foreign reports favorable to wheat speculation found ready answer in an advance of over five cents here in spite of western receipts, 50 per cent larger than last year. Atlantic exports for the week were also much larger than last year, for the first time in several months, but for the crop year to date, all exports have been about 11,600,000 bushels smaller than last year. The market has the idea that foreign demands hereafter must be much greater because of deficient supplies elsewhere, but no one expects that the increase will be at all commensurate with the enormous increase of western receipts. Corn advanced because wheat advanced, receipts and exports continuing as before.

"Failures for 15 days of January have shown liabilities amounting to $12 538,617 against $7,501,209 in 17 days of last year and $13,658,999 in 18 days of 1894. The failures for the week have been 373 in the United States, against 363 last year, and 61 in Canada, against 59 last year."

Bradstreet's says:

"An analysis of special telegrams to Bradstreet's from the more important business centers throughout the country shows considerable regularity in trade, the most favorable feature being the tendency of staple prices to advance.

"At such centers as Chicago and St Louis reports are made that interior merchants have been disappointed in the season's business, and are buying somewhat more sparingly than expected, although many jobbers at those cities report that travelers for clothing, dry goods, shoe and hardware houses are taking fair orders for spring delivery."

MANY MINERS ENTOMBED.

Fifty-Four Dead Bodies Said to Have Been Recovered.

Cardiff, Wales, Jan. 28.—The residents of the town and vicinity of Tylorstown, which is situated near here, were terrified by a terrific reverberation Monday. The concussion was caused by an explosion in a neighboring colliery, with disastrous consequences to life and property. The latest report places the number of dead at 54, though it is feared that the further exploration of the wrecked mine will develop the bodies of more. Reports of the number of killed have been confusing, and there is doubt as to the number of men in the mine at the time of the catastrophe. The first reports gave the number of miners in the shaft at 54, but some of them escaped to the surface, bringing the body of one comrade with them.

The pit was found to have caught fire, and the hindrance that this caused to the work of the rescue parties added to the excitement and tension of feeling. It was only through braving the utmost peril that the living were able to prosecute their quest for the dead.

To Celebrate Washington's Birthday.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—In order to bring about a more general observance of Washington's birthday the Union League club announces that, in cooperation with the express companies, it will furnish the words and music of "America," "Hail Columbia," "Red White and Blue" and "Star Spangled Banner" free to any organized celebration of the day anywhere in the United States. A free distribution of the songs for celebrations in Chicago has been conducted for a number of years by the club, and it is proposed to make this general.

Convention for Silver.

Washington, Jan. 24.—The silver conference Thursday decided to put a national ticket in the held for the approaching presidential campaign. The conference agreed to a declaration of principles and calls upon others irrespective of previous party affiliations who are willing to support these principles and the nominees of the silver party to organize in the usual manner for that purpose. The national convention of the silver men is to be held at St. Louis July 22, the same day as the meeting of the populist national convention.

DIDN'T SEE HER MAMMA THERE.

And So the Little Girl Did Not Think She Saw the Real Heaven.

She was such a wee mite of a little girl that it's a wonder she wasn't crushed in the great crowd that thronged one of the big Chestnut street dry goods emporiums. But she kept a tight clutch on a lady's hand, says the Philadelphia Record, and was happy in the delight of seeing all the wonderful Christmas things. Her companion was dressed in deep mourning, having evidently lost a near relative. At one end of the store was a pretty scene representing the flight of angels, the angels being wax figures suspended in midair. The little girl gazed in wonder at the sight, and her big brown eyes opened to their fullest extent. Some strange thought seemed to take possession of her childish mind, and she scanned each angel face closely. Her little heart was evidently troubled, and her lips quivered as she looked up into the lady's face and asked: "Auntie, is that really Heaven up there?" "No, darling, it's only make-believe," softly replied the lady. The little one's face brightened up, and with a beautiful smile and a little sigh she murmured: "I didn't think it was real Heaven, because I don't see mamma there."

FADS OF FAMOUS MEN.

Mental Eccentricities of People Who Have Earned Wide Celebrity.

Genius is spontaneous, fluctuating and wholly inexplicable, but with all of its bewildering mysticism and intervals of childish weakness the world pays lasting tribute to its strange phenomena, and would at any moment gladly possess itself of it, says Sunny South. Genius, in which we find the fiery threads of passion woven, is almost always attended by mental eccentricities or physical impotency. Julius Caesar was an epileptic, whereas Dr. Johnson exhibited a senseless habit in not being able to pass a certain post without first touching it with his hands, and should he pass it by without conferring this mark of distinction he would retrace his steps as soon as the slight occurred to him and lay his hands upon it. It is said his head could not rest easy until this childish performance had been gone through with, yet we profess wonder at a poor, ignorant negro who draws a cross mark in the "big road" and spits in it before daring to turn back. Napoleon's hobby was counting the blinds in the windows as he passed through the streets and adding up the numbers.

HURRAH FOR PENNSYLVANIA.

The farmers of Pennsylvania are to be congratulated. M. M. Luther, East Troy, Pa., grew over 200 bushels Salzer's Silver Mine Oats on one measured acre. Think of it! Now there are thirty thousand farmers going to try and beat Mr. Luther and win $200 in gold! and they'll do it. Will you?

Then there is Silver King Barley, cropped on poor soil 116 bus. per acre in 1895. Isn't that wonderful—and corn 230 bus. and potatoes and grasses and clovers, fodder plants, etc., etc. Freight is cheap to all points.

If you will cut this out and send it with 10c postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will receive their mammoth catalogue and ten packages grains and grasses, including above oats, free. (K.)

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. "TOP AND BOTTOM."

There are people imbued with a certain love of adventure, and there are other people abnormally curious. I belong to the latter class, and my curiosity often gets the better of me.

My friend Wilson, who is a member of the secret service on the police force, the night before had been relating to me some rather interesting reminiscences of his experience with a certain element of society known to us as "confidence men," and he was inconsiderate enough to arouse my curiosity.

"Curio," he said (that is my nickname among the boys), "your desire to investigate all phases of humanity may lead you into trouble one of these days, but if you have a mind to try the experiment and will follow my instructions I think I can provide you with enough amusement to-morrow to last you for several weeks."

I couldn't stand the pressure and jumped at the chance.

"You have all the natural requirements," said Wilson. "You look very green and unsophisticated, and you will at once become an object of interest to the confidence 'steerer.' The part you will play is a simple one. All you have got to do is to make the opportunity and the 'steerer' will do the rest. Remember one thing—under no circumstances bet or loan mone to anyone you chance to meet."

Then Wilson gave me my lesson. A suitable wardrobe was arranged for me to impersonate a green country youth, and bright and early the next morning I alighted from a train at the Northwestern depot. I was looking for a confidence man, and though Wilson assured me I would not meet with any serious injury or serious trouble so long as I kept my eyes open, still I must confess I felt a certain sense of nervous uncertainty which in a timid man might be attributed to fear.

My instructions were limited. When I reached the depot in the garb of a country youth, all that was required was to conduct myself as a stranger naturally would; stand around the waiting-room for a few moments, and if no one approached me to go to the street and gaze up and down as if uncertain which way to proceed.

I first waited in the depot until the passengers had all left, but as no one approached me I decided to try the street. Here I met with no danger signals other than a lot of cab drivers, who tried to persuade me they knew more of my business than I did myself, and insisted that I wanted to take a ride. But I was looking for a confidence man, and I gave these fellows to understand that I was a very positive-minded country boy.

Yesterday it was rather cool in the morning and after standing around for ten or fifteen minutes and not seeing anyone that could possibly be taken for a confidence man I concluded Wilson had been playing a practical joke on me or else there were none of the boys out. Therefore I started to walk north on Wells street, thinking I would take a roundabout way to my room on Dearborn avenue, get some new pointers from Wilson, and try my luck the next day.

Between Erie and Huron streets on Wells there is a small dry goods store with rather an odd display in the window, and as I came along there were several people standing in front inspecting the wares. As I always want to see everything that anybody else considers worth looking at I stopped also. Among the spectators was a man who looked to me to be a Swedish emigrant, and as his curiosity was apparently as abnormal as mine we were both standing there when the rest had gone.

As I was about to move on the Swedish emigrant turned to me and in broken English said:

"Meester, yo can tell me var Ay fint State street?"

It would have been just as easy for me to tell the truth, and there was no apparent reason why I should do otherwise, but it was my mission that morning to appear in the light of a stranger, so I answered that I was a stranger in the city myself and could not tell him where to find State street. There seems to be an affinity of soul between strangers in a strange land, and the Swede warmed towards me. Ordinarily the Swedish emigrant is not my choice of companion, but I had been disappointed in my morning escapade, and when he asked me which way I came from and where I was going I allowed myself to gradually drift into conversation. I informed him I had just come in from Dakota, where I had been working on a farm, and was on my way to my home in Ohio.

"Det so? Ay ben yust from Noo York, var Ay ben vid mae uncle six mont since Ay come from Ole Country. Ay go now to Meenesota to vork. Yo know det place?"

No, I did not know much about Minnesota, only having passed through the state on my way to Dakota.

The conversation drifted from one thing to another as we walked along Wells street, until, passing by one of those institutions calculated to cheer the inner man, my new acquaintance asked me to have something warm. I am not a drinking man, but the weather was cool, and I decided a stimulant would not be bad, so I accepted his invitation.

As we were about to order something a well-dressed, genteel-looking man came in and spoke to us.

"Going to have a drink?"

I answered that we were.

"Well, I thought I'd have something myself. Won't you join me?"

"Ve can't do det," said the Swede.

"Why not?"

"Vel, dar ben two of us und yust but von of yo; yo drink vid us."

"No, but I'll shake you the dice to see who pays the bill."

The Swede consented, but said he only knew how to shake one kind of dice. He explained his way of shaking, and the slick-looking man agreed that it would save time, so we proceeded.

One of the party was to turn the dice box, containing three dice, upside down, and we were all to make a guess at the number the tops and bottoms of the three dice added together would make, and the one farthest from the mark was to pay for the drinks. Our slick friend guessed 17. I guessed 23, and the Swede 20. We turned the box over, counted the tops and bottoms, added them together, and found the number to be 21.

The new gentleman became interested and wanted to try it again, but the Swede said I had paid for one drink and he would pay for the next. No, the stranger wouldn't have that, so my Swedish friend said he would play if we would allow him to pay for the drinks in case he failed to call the exact number. We both demurred, but the Swede insisted and chose 21. Sure enough, that was the number again. The slick-looking friend became more interested at this, and volunteered that the Swede could not do it again, and that he would bet any amount of money that he couldn't. I said nothing, and the Swede said he never gambled, but was sure he could guess the correct number.

Our friend excused himself for a moment to run across to the drug store, but asked us to wait for him. Now this fellow looked to me thoroughly like a sharper, and when the Swede explained the dice trick to me during his absence I could scarcely contain myself.

"Ay don't vanten vin his money from him," said the Swede, "but I can do det ever time. Ay learn det in Noo York. Har been de vay to doot."

You see one side of the dice added to the one just opposite will always make seven, and the three added together will always make 21. Much as I have shaken dice this never occurred to me.

When our friend returned and offered to wager $20 that the Swede could not guess the number again I was forced to turn my head to conceal my laughter. The Swede said he was sure he could, and did not want to win the man's money, whereupon the stranger became a trifle sarcastic and made a few remarks about people's nerve that were decidedly distasteful to me. That Swede called me to one side and asked my advice. Now I may be wrong, but I have no sympathy with what are known as "fresh" people. The Swede had only $10, and I just made up my mind that we would let the slick man lose his entire $20, so I gave him $10 more.

It was decided to let the bartender count the dice, to make sure of no mistake. Poor fellow, I really began to feel sorry for the man of polish, and half made up my mind to return my ten dollars of the winnings, accompanied with a little good advice not to go and do it again.

The Swede turned the dice box upside down and guessed 21; the bartender lifted it off, displaying a four, one and six on the top side, making a total of 11. The dice were turned over, and —you have probably at some time had that peculiar feeling, wondering how it happened—there was a three, five and one, making nine. The total, you see, was 20. No one said anything for a moment, and the bartender quietly gave the slick-looking man the money. He courteously bought the cigars, and bid us good morning.

The poor Swede, his heart was broken. He had lost all the money he had in the world and had a long journey before him. He said he had a railroad ticket, but not even money to provide himself with a meal. Although he caused me to lose ten dollars, I really felt sorry for him and gave him another dollar to get something to eat. That seemed to cheer him up a little. He gave me his name and the place where he was going to work, saying he would send me the money, and I then bade him bood-by.

Last night Wilson called to see me.

"Well, Curio, how did the experiment work? Did you succeed in being buncoed?"

"Not much. I never even saw a confidence man. Guess you were trying to play a practical joke on me."

"No, I was not. Did you follow my instructions?"

"To the letter."

"That's strange. You must try it again. So your venture was fruitless?"

"Well, no, it was not altogether fruitless. A rather peculiar circumstance happened," and I explained all that had taken place from the time I left the depot. When I had finished Wilson looked at me in blank amazement for a moment and then lapsed into a convulsive fit of laughter.

Now I don't like being ridiculed and never did, and as I could not see where the joke came in insisted upon an explanation.

"Curio, my boy," said Wilson, "you are an object of pity." That made me mad, but I kept quiet. "How it is possible for a man of your apparent intelligence to know so little I can't conceive."

I muttered something about people who were not fond of my style not being compelled to cultivate me, but Wilson only laughed.

"I suppose you have been wondering ever since how it happened."

To be perfectly honest I had, but I wouldn't tell him so.

"You see, Curio, you ran up against the little game known to confidence men as 'T and B' (top and bottom). You are not the first victim. Your Swedish friend is one of the best-known confidence 'steerers' in Chicago, and the slick man is his confederate. And now, dear boy, the next time you go out looking for confidence men leave your money at home."

"That sounds well, but you haven't told me yet how it happened."

"Well, you see, while you were turned away trying to conceal your laughter from the slick man your Swedish friend was substituting dice made to order, on which the top and bottom added together will not make seven."

Perhaps Wilson was right, but to-morrow I'm going to see if I can't find a confidence man that I'll recognize as soon as I meet him.—Chicago Tribune.

The Fork in Europe.

The year 1895 was the 900th anniversary of the first appearance of the fork in western Europe. In 995 a son of Venetian Doge Pietro Orseolo married the Byzantine Princess Argila, who at the wedding breakfast brought out a silver fork and gold spoon. She was copied by the great Venetian families, though the church opposed the fashion as an insult to providence. It took 360 years for the fork to reach Florence. In 1379 it is found in France, but it was not until 1608 that "the traveler Corgate brought it direct from Venice to England."—National Zeitung.

—An assembly of the states or a court of justice shows nothing so serious and grave as a table of gamesters playing very high; a melancholy solicitude clouds their looks; envy and rancor agitate their minds while the meeting lasts, without regard to friendship alliances, birth or distinctions.—Bruyere.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS.

The Winter Carnival.

The winter carnival was opened at St. Paul in a blaze of glory. Not even on the occasion of the big parade during the state fair last fall was there such a throng of people on the streets along the line of march. In places it was almost impossible for the police to make room for the parade to pass, and at the fort there was also an immense crowd. The various clubs assembled in the vicinity of the Metropolitan Hotel, were the elaborate chariots were in waiting for Borealis Rex and his Lord High Chancellor, and for the Fire King, while a magnificent gray charger was held in readiness for the carnival queen. As Borealis Rex and his Lord High Chancellor took their seats in the chariot an immense shout went up from the great concourse of there assembled. "Long live Borealis Rex," yelled the crowd. The chariot was white, representing the snow and ice so abundant in his dominion. In front was a huge white bear, and perched on each side of the chariot was the body guard clothed in bear skins. The chariot was drawn by six white horses.

Great Northern Will Appeal.

The officers of the local land office at St. Cloud have been notified that the Great Northern Railway Company intends to appeal from the decision of the commissioner of the general land office in holding for cancelation what is known as list No. 10, in Traverse county. In this list the lands selected are for losses in the main line primary limits, but were not selected tract for tract.

It has caused some surprise that the company has not filed a rearranged list, and during the recent rush for claims at the local office all the lands embraced in these tracts were filed upon. If the secretrry of the interior should reverse the commissioner it would end the hopes of those who have been making filings. The ruling of the commissioner is regarded as rather a technical one and it is thought that the probabilities are that the company will ultimately win.

The G. A. R. Encampment

Unless the Western Passenger Agents' Association makes satisfactory rates, Commander-in-Chief Walker, of the G. A. R., stated that the next encampment will be held in some other city than St. Paul. The passenger association has agreed to make a rate of one cent a mile within a radius of 250 miles of St. Paul, the reduced rates to begin two days before the encampment begins and end the days the encampment ends. Gen Walker said: "I have demanded an extension of the time and unless it is granted the encampment shall not be held in St. Paul. I have received applications from three cities that want the encampment.

Fish Houses Destroyed.

Game Warden Fredenberg destroyed eleven fish houses on Lake Osakis that had been erected by parties there on the strength of permits to spear certain fish through the ice that had been issued by S. F. Fullerton, state executive agent of the fish commission. Nothing was said in the permits regarding the use of fish houses, but as a matter of fact fish cannot be speared through the the ice without them. No arrests were made. The fish speared on Lake Osakis have been taken for family use and in no instance for commercial purposes.

Officers Elected.

At the annual meeting of the Northwestern Curling association held at Duluth the following officers were elected: President, Judge H. W. Cory, St. Paul; first vice president, Q. S. Chandler, Waupaca; second vice president, A. J. Turner, Portage, Wis., secretary-treasurer, E. P. Towne, Duluth. It was decided to hold the next bonspeil at Portage. It was also decided that it would be best to have the grand international event played in two sections.

Peculiar Swindling.

The Northwestern Hide and Fur Company, of Minneapolis, have been defrauded in a peculiar manner. In a shipment of supposed hids was found strips of hide inclosed with firewood, cattle bones, hoofs, stones and old iron. The stuff was shipped from Fisher, Minn., and the company will run the unscrupulous individual to earth and punish him if possible.

News in Brief.

Complaint was made to Labor Commissioner Powers concerning the street cars at Winona. A state law was passed by the legislature of 1893 providing for the vestibuling of all street cars operated in Minnesota. The law has not been obeyed.

Judge Baxter at St. Cloud, sentenced Mrs. Sarah Williams to one year at Stillwater. She was found guilty of trying to burn the Park Hotsl.

Mike Gallagher, a farmer lining near Hamilton, 18 miles from St. Paul, while driving out Snelling avenue was struck by an electric car. His wagon was smashed, and he was thrown on his head, receiving probably fatal injuries. His skull was fractured. He was taken to the city hospital.

The dead body of Ben Johnson, a woodsman, was found hanging in the hall of a cheap boarding house at Duluth.

A son of Andrew Erickson, living near Jasper, who was shot five times by burglars, is alive and may get well, although one shot went through a lung.

The body of Miss Lottie Lamb was found on the side of the hill under the high bridge in St. Paul. It was evidently a case of suicide and she had jumped off the bridge, a distance of 150 feet.

Wm. Jones stole a cloak in Moorhead, sold it in Fargo for $3, went back to Moorhead for a good time, got arrested, and is now in jail awaiting the action of the grand jury.

The grand jury of Benton county has found indictments against ex-School Treasurer George Crook, of Glenderado, and J. A. Burton, of Watab. One is alleged to have embezzled $106 and the other $190.

The name of the postoffice at Humboldt, Marshall county, has been changed to New Folden, and Dyre B. Bakke commissioned postmpster. A. A. Trovaten was commissioned postmaster at Kent.

The prison population now numbers 455, the largest number since the board of managers began granting paroles to first termers. Many prisoners are in jails throughout the state awaiting sentence, and it is expected that the number of inmates will reach 500 before spring.

Seven letter carriers have been added to the St. Paul postoffice force.

A NEW SCHEME.

Leading Senators Discuss a Novel Financial Proposition.

Washington, Jan. 28.—During the session of the senate Monday there were numerous conferences between silver and anti-silver democrats and republicans and democrats. There was every evidence of a desire to get together on the financial question. Should there be any compromise, it can only come after the silver men have put the senate on record by a yea and nay vote on the free silver substitute now under debate. The compromise can only be effected in the conference committee.

As a means for arriving at some solution of the problem, through the instrumentality of that committee, the situation is being canvassed in the senate. The proposition discussed Monday came from one of the most prominent silver democrats in the senate, and its character, unfolded by the author himself to prominent republican senators, is such as has occasioned considerable surprise among those who have been taken into the conference.

This proposition contemplates the retirement of the greenbacks and the treasury notes by the issuance of $500,000,000 of gold bonds, a declaration that all outstanding bonds of the government shall be paid in gold regardless of the language used, and the opening of the United States mints to the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

This scheme, which apparently gives the gold men all they ask and the silver men all they have been demanding, is meeting with opposition, especially among the ranks of the sound money men on the democratic side of the chamber and the silver republicans. Of course, it is a tentative proposition, as are many others that are being broached. The belief is strong, however, that no common ground can be reached whereon the contending elements can stand. The proposition outlined above comes from a senator of such prominence, however, that is is commanding much attention.

HEART FAILURE.

It Carries Away Our Ambassador to Germany.

Berlin, Jan. 27.—Hon. Theodore Runyon, United States ambassador to Germany, expired suddenly and unexpectedly at one o'clock this morning of heart failure. Mr. Runyon had been in somewhat feeble health for some time past, but no immediately fatal results were anticipated.

[Hon. Theodore Runyon was born at Sommerville, N. J., October 25, 1822. He graduated from Yale college in 1842, and in 1844 was admitted to the bar. In 1853 he was made city attorney and in 1856 city counselof of Newark, N. J., a position retained until 1864, when he became mayor of the city. He was appointed in 1856 a commissioner to revise and codify the militia laws of New Jersey, and in 1857 was made brigadier general and subsequently major general of the New Jersey national guard.

At the outbreak of the civil war he was placed in command of the New Jersey brigade of volunteers. In 1865 he was democratic candidate for governor of his state, but was not elected. From 1873 to 1887 he was chancellor of New Jersey. In March, 1893, he was appointed by President Cleveland American minister to Germany and shortly afterwards was made ambassador. The degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him by Yale, Rutgers and Wesleyan colleges].

A NOVEL PLAN.

Letters to Be Collected at Houses of the Writers.

Washington, Jan. 24. — Postmaster General Wilson has issued a general order providing that in all cities and towns having free delivery postal service the postal service system be extended to include house-to-house collections. For the convenience of the department, however, the introduction of boxes in the houses until further orders will be confined to the following 25 places:

Portland, Me.; St. Albans, Vt.; Boston, Mass.; Buffalo and Syracuse, N. Y.; East Orange, N. J.; Springfield, Mass.; Allegheny, Pa.; Wheeling, W. Va.; Atlanta, Ga.; Charleston, W. Va.; Cleveland, O.; Detroit, Mich.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Joliet, Ill.; Minneapolis, Minn.; New Orleans, La.; Richmond, Va.; St. Louis, Mo.; St. Paul, Minn.; San Francisco, Cal.; Springfield, Ill.; Tacoma, Wash.; Toledo, O., and Vicksburg, Miss.

The action taken is the result of practical tests made in St. Louis and Washington. These were regarded as satisfactory, and probably the time saved to carriers, no longer compelled to wait answers to bells, may be utilized in further extending the boundaries of routes in rapidly growing communities. Householders in these cities will be required for their own convenience and at their own expense to supply a suitable box of a kind already approved by the apartment.

DEMOCRATIC CALL.

Summons to Elect Delegates to the National Convention.

Philadelphia, Jan. 25. — National Chairman Harrity on Friday afternoon issued the official call for the democratic national convention. It reads as follows:

Philadelphia, Jan. 24, 1896.—The democratic national committee having met in the city of Washington, D. C., January 16 1896, has appointed Tuesday, July 7, 1896, at 12 o'clock noon, and chosen the city of Chicago, Ill., as the place for holding the democratic national convention.

"Each state is entitled to a representation therein equal to double the number of its senators and representatives in the congress of the United States, each territory and the District of Columbia shall have two delegates.

"All democratic conservative citizens of the United States, irrespective of past political associations and differences, who can unite with us in the effort for pure, economical and constitutional government are cordially invited to join us in sending delegates to the convention.

"W. F. HARRITY, Chairman.
"S. P. SHEERIN, Secretary."

May Aid Armenians.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Secretary Olney has received from Mr. Terrell, the United States minister at Constantinople, a cablegram saying that while the porte refused permission to the Red Cross, or to members of the Red Cross, as such, to distribute relief in Armenia, and thereby declined to officially recognize that society, it will permit any persons whom Mr. Terrell names and approves to distribute relief in the interior of Turkey, provided the Turkish authorities are kept informed of what they are doing.

THE PACE THAT KILLS.

Fast Work and Fast Eating Make Three Score Years and Ten a Ripe Old Age These Days.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

The American people live too fast, eat too fast and drink too fast. This has brought upon many of us a train of nervous and stomach orders that are very difficult to manage. Investigation and chemical analysis to discover such compounds as will help those suffering from such ills has resulted in the discovery of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which has taken very high rank as a specific remedy.

H. P. Owens, a traveling man thirty years of age, who is well-known in this community and generally liked because he is a bright, energetic young fellow, resides with his mother at 335 Central Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio. He has been a victim of dyspepsia which took the form of continuous constipation, and, strangely enough, his mother suffered from the same trouble. Mr. Owens testified to the merits of Pink Pills, in a most enthusiastic way, and said to the Enquirer reporter:

"I am glad to say anything I can for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, because they did me great good and other people ought to know of their virtues as a medicine in stomach troubles. It was some time ago when I felt a heavy feeling in my stomach and I grew very constipated. I did not consult a doctor, but having heard of the Pink Pills I bought a box of them. In two or three days the heavy feeling in my stomach disappeared and my bowels were regular. I did not have to use more than a box of them before I was well. Since that time I have occasionally been troubled with constipation and I never get worried because I know just what to do. Mother was also troubled with indigestion and the Pink Pills did the same for her they did for me—cured her, didn't they, mother?"

When appealed to Mrs. Owens answered: "That is right. I found that it was a great medicine, so easy to take and so quick and lasting in its results."

Mr. Owens continued: "I believe that these pills are also good for nervousness. When I had my stomach troubles I was also quite nervous and that disappeared with the dyspepsia. The Pink Pills were all that were claimed for them. You can make any use of this testimonial that you see fit."

H. P. Owens has occupied several positions of trust in this city. He was for a time an employe of the Commercial-Gazette. He will go on the road in a few days for a prominent business house here. Mrs. Owens is quite as enthusiastic as her son about the Pink Pills and her host of lady friends can verify her good opinion of this wonderful remedy if they feel disposed to do so at any time. Where the testimony is so general and unanimous as to the excellencies of Pink Pills as the Enquirer has found it to be there is certainly good reason to believe all the good things said—about the safe and simple remedy.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., at 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

A Canal Choked Up

Is practically useless. The human organism is provided with a canal which sometimes becomes choked up, namely, the bowels, through which much of the effete and waste matter of the system escapes. When they are obstructed—constipated, in other words—Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will relieve them effectually, but without pain, and institute a regular habit of body. This medicine also remedies malarial, bilious, dyspeptic, rheumatic, nervous and kidney trouble, and strengthens the entire system.

Bubbles or Medals.

"Best sarsaparillas." When you think of it how contradictory that term is. For there can be only one best in anything—one best sarsaparilla, as there is one highest mountain, one longest river, one deepest ocean. And that best sarsaparilla is——? .... There's the rub! You can measure mountain height and ocean depth, but how test sarsaparilla? You could, if you were chemists. But then, do you need to test it? The World's Fair Committee tested it,—and thoroughly. They went behind the label on the bottle. What did this sarsaparilla test result in? Every make of sarsaparilla shut out of the Fair, except Ayer's. So it was that Ayer's was the only sarsaparilla admitted to the World's Fair. The committee found it the best. They had no room for anything that was not the best. And as the best, Ayer's Sarsaparilla received the medal and awards due its merits. Remember the word "best" is a bubble any breath can blow; but there are pins to prick such bubbles. Those others are blowing more "best sarsaparilla" bubbles since the World's Fair pricked the old ones. True, but Ayer's Sarsaparilla has the medal. The pin that scratches the medal proves it gold. The pin that pricks the bubble proves it wind. We point to medals, not bubbles, when we say: The best sarsaparilla is Ayer's.

—Sore throat from tonsillitis quinsy, on up to diphtheria are prevalent this soft weather.

—At a special meeting held Wednesday the Village Council unanimously elected Dr. Catlin Health Officer.

—Mrs Helen Bain has leased her farm to Joseph Leudasher. Joe is getting to be quite a prominent agriculturalist.

—Prof. Freeman has stowed away his bicycle till next spring. He now makes the trip to and from his school on foot in good time.

—Read the call by President Lindsley for a meeting of the Washington's Birthday Association, to arrange for the annual meeting.

—C. G. Roosen has had a well made on his residence property. At 107 feet he expects to have enough aqua pura to supply him for years to come.

—The hum of the saw mill on the west side near the bridge, is a familiar sound to old Delanoites and gives a business air to things in that quarter.

—White's hill has been in fine condition the past ten days and as the weather was pleasant those who like "sliding down hill" have had the finest of fun.

—Operator Burkhardt and family have moved into the Gus Anderson house on Franklin Ave. Joe hustles about town with numerous bundles as if he had always been at it.

—Clark Sturman is putting in a well for W. H. Freeman. This will have a tendency to prevent future droughts from ruining the strawberry and other crops of Delano's boss gardener.

—Everybody should aid the Board of Health to the best of their ability in suppress the outbreak of Diphtheria before it spreads Notify the Health Officer of all suspected ar real cases.

—The old town pump is growing more and more in favor every day. Never in its history has it furnished drinks for so many animals as it has this winter, and yet in the fall it was ordered pulled up and the well filled up. What a foolish piece of business was that as quite patent to the dullest eyes now.

—A good story is given of the effect of rapid speaking or slow hearing and of a quick retort. A young lady attempted to introduce her lady friend to the minister and it appeared to him, she said: "Mr. Davies, must decay." He promptly said: "Oh no! I hope not. I am in good health." It turned out "Miss DeKay" was meant.

—Frank Warner is hauling wood for Mr. Gould to the power house. He says Mr. G. has ten men at work chopping and sawing cord wood. He pays 65 and 80 cts. per cord, and they have a good cook and get board for $3. per week on the ground. They have already eaten a bushel and a half of beans besides numerous pickles and other delicacies.

—Each year the farmers in this vicinity are making more and more use of fertilizers for their farms. Piles of manure that formerly blocked alleys and had to be removed, in the spring, are no longer seen, but as fast as a load can be had it is appropriated by the most alert agriculturist in the neighborhood. This has been a good winter for hauling manure.

—That dread desease, Diphtheria, has once more made its appearance in our midst. Little Tottie McEachran died on Wednesday evening from its effects. As it was the first case of the season in our vicinity many of the neighbors were in helping to alleviate the little sufferer from what they supposed an attack of croup, and it will almost be miraculous if more cases are not met with in the near future. In cases where children are sick only those who have no families at home, or who will remain till the end of the case, or who will be extremely cautious about carrying it in their clothing, should go near the premises.

—It is about time our Republican newspaper neighbors would get off their usual lingo about eggs, and the benefit derived from the tariff. But then eggs have been at a good price for some time, but now that the Republicans appear bound to get control of the Legislative branch of out government, and the weather being unusually fine, the manufactories are starting up earlier than usual and owing to an over supply down goes the price. Why don't congress hurry up and restore the McKinley law if it thinks that will help prices on eggs? Perhaps as soon as the St. Louis convention convenes, the customary eggnogs may lesson the stock on hand and help prices.

"A Bright Lad That Was".

A teacher told the pupils to make up a sentence or "story" from the suggestive words "boys," "bees," "bear." Quick as a flash up came one hand, "I have it." "What is it, Tommy?" inquired the teacher. "Boys bees bare when they go in swimming," was the astonishing reply! A better sentence would have been—"BOYS will be interested in BEES and other insects, BEARS and other animals as well as birds, flowers etc., as described in THE OBSERVER, Portland, Conn. —Eph Ball and others are at work trying to get a road laid from Maxfield's house east, to the county line, near Ball's house. It is claimed this will be much the shortest route from Delano to Minneapolis, being almost a straight line all the way.

—The sociable to be given by the Cecilian Club will take place Tuesday evening, February 4th in the City Hall. Lunch served at eight, after which the audience will be entertained with singing, speaking and other amusements, by members of the club. Music furnished by the orchestra. All are cordially invited to attend.

—If anyone else but the Railroad would blockade the streets the City Council would, doubtless, be heard from; but they not only occupy Second Street with the depot building, but they leave freight cars on the side tracks blockading the crossings so that those using that thoroughfare must needs go around through the snow, or as one of the school ma'ams, in a hurry to catch the morning train to the city, lately did, go kind of on all fours under the train. We would think the company's own interests would demand better treatment of their customers.

"The Pleasures of Outdoor Life."

Young people as well as old will be interested in the attractive pages of outdoor life which, strange to say is unnoticed by the greater part of mankind. 18-4t

Be Conscientious.

REV. PHOEBE A. HANFORD SAYS THAT CONSCIENTIOUSNESS IS A WOMANS MOST IMPORTANT POSSESSION.

As far as woman's sphere is concerned I believe that she should do that thing in life which she can do best. Any God-given talent should be cultivated and made the most of; and in addition to this she should get as much general knowledge and culture as she can. It will help her in many ways; it will help her husband and children if she is fortunate enough to have them. But more important than talent and education is conscientiousness. If a person; man or woman, is without it, knowledge is a weapon for evil in his or her hands. I do not believe in giving those in whose character there is basic weakness the advantages of learning, for they only misuse these advantages. Woman's influence is very great in the world, and it is absolutely essential to the welfare of society that she should have conscience, a high ideal of right, and an earnest desire to live up to it. Let a woman fail in this, and she fails in nearly everything worthy of her womanhood; let her have a clear conception of right and wrong, and the moral strength to live accordingly, and she is almost certain to possess all the good and estimable qualities of a woman.—From "The Education of Our Girls," in Demorest's Magazine for February.

"Pleasures of Life."

Live while you live. Get all legitimate pleasures you can. This is a beautiful world. Don't miss a large part of its pleasure by going through life blindfolded, as many people do. The outdoor world, is poetic, pleasing, instructive. There's a wealth of pleasure in roaming over the hill across the fields or through the woods. All nature is in harmony of music to the attentive ear. Birds, plants, flowers, ferns, mosses, insects, the beauty of minerals, yes even the stars above are strains in this harmony. "Keep Your Eyes Open."

"Having eyes, see not." That's the trouble with lots of people, who never see the wonders of their own dooryard or farm, the roadside by which they drive, the fields and woods through which they walk, or the ponds where they catch anything from frogs to black bass. Of many of these usually unseen "wonders and beauties of Nature" you can read in THE OBSERVER, Portland, Conn. This very interesting illustrated magazine is of interest to all students and lovers of Nature. It assists parents in providing home interests for their children, and leads the "children of a larger growth," to be more interested in home.

Do you enjoy roaming over hills and fields or through the woods; are you interested in birds, flowers, insects, rocks, etc., then send ten cents for sample copy of THE OBSERVER (an illustrated monthly magazine), Portland, Conn. Subscription $1,00 a year. Give it a fair trial as to its merits. 18-4t

Among Our Exchanges.

The agents on the Great Northern who have been lax in conforming to the regulation concerning the purchase of regulation caps and badges have been requested to pay attention to the matter promptly, says the Crookston Times. It is said that Fegan of Grand Forks was one of the prompt ones to buy a new piece of head gear, and it is intimated that he has paid for his rashness with several frosted ears. —St. Cloud Times.

Silver League.

ANNANDALE, Minn. Jan 29, 1896.

EDITOR OF BUFFALO GAZETTE: In answer to a letter of mine written to Hon. Chas. E. Vanderbergh making inquiry as to blanks to start a Silver league at Annandale, Minn., I received the following reply from the Judge:

MINNEAPOLIS, January 28th 1896.

A. G. SEXTON Esq. My Dear Sir: If you will write to H. D. Stocker, Century Building Minneapolis, I think he will give you the form adopted by the Silver men here. It is very brief and simple. THE PRESSURE OF THE TIMES, IF CONTINUED, MUST COMPEL ACTION BY THE PEOPLE. C. E. VANDERBERGH.

SHALL WE NOT ACT NOW.

Respectfully,

ALLEN G. SEXTON.

Woman's Column.

BY WRIGHT COUNTY W. C. T. U.

The Olathe, Kan., Weekly Herald having published an article on the liquor question with the heading, Whiskey and Democracy, John P. St. John makes the following statement which is valuable for its statistics as well as for some information concerning the condition of the states mentioned:

EDITOR HERALD: Under the above heading you copy from the Louisiana Press the following statement:

"REPUBLICAN STATES.

Iowa	1 saloon to every 425 people.
Kansas	1 saloon to every 823 people.
Vermont	1 saloon to every 865 people.
Maine	1 saloon to every 862 people

DEMOCRATIC STATES.

Alabama	1 saloon to every 1,133 people.
Arkansas	1 saloon to every 1,170 people.
S. Carolina	1 saloon to every 1,153 people.
Mississippi	saloon to every 1,593 people.
N. Carolina	1 saloon to every 1,693 people."

And then you say? "And yet what makes the above figures especially interesting is the fact that three of the states in the republican list, Iowa, Kansas and Maine— are prohibition states. And yet you will occasionally find some misguided fellow with the cheek to get up and say prohibition is a success."

Now your figures are partly untrue, and your statement wholly misleading. In the first place let me say, that Iowa is no longer a prohibition state, the last republican legislature having by law re-established the wide open saloon there, just as the party intends to do at the earliest possible date here in Kansas. Just now is a good time to find out, if you don't already know, that the reason why these southern states have such a small number of retail liquor dealers in proportion to population, is because from one-half to three-fourths of each state named, is under prohibition, and the south enforces its liquor laws: while here in Kansas a lot of saloon anarchists are allowed to rule the state. Give Kansas as faithful and rigid enforcement of our prohibitory law, as Frank R. Ogg gives us in Johnson county, or as they have in these southern states, and Kansas will tower above them all in point of law, order and sobriety.

Had you desired to make a point in favor of the democrats, as compared with the republicans, touching the liquor traffic, you could have done so by calling attention to the fact that in old "mossback" democratic Missouri they have but one retail liquor dealer to every 342 of the population; while in republican Illinois they have one to every 209 of the population. Democratic Kentucky has but one to every 426, while republican Ohio has one to every 225 of her population. Democratic West Virginia has one to every 596 and republican Pennsylvania one to every 357 of her population; and taking the entire United States we find less than one-half the number of retail liquor dealers in proportion to population in democratic states than are found in republican states. But when we come to compare prohibition territory with territory under license we find not more than one such place under prohibition to five under license. But independent of all these facts, it is sufficient to say that the saloon is a monstrous evil, condemned by the best civilization of the age, and no amount of license money can ever make it respectable, usefull or right.

IN mentioning the appointment of the Sergeant-at-arms of the Republican National Convention lately, the Valley Herald says: "Time's perennial smile won the honor."

EX PRESIDENT BENJAMIN HARRISON is out in a letter over his own name in which he says "No, there has never been an hour since I left the white house that I have felt a wish to return to it."

THE people of Aitkin County, regardless of party, have called a non partisan convention for the purpose of devising ways and means of educating the voters of the state on the Anderson bill, taxing railroad lands. It is to meet at Aitkin Tuesday, March 17, at the Court House.

THE Minneapolis Tribune gives as a reason for the diminished acreage of land plowed last fall, that "The farmers were delayed by the taking care of their immense hay crops and so got to work on the plowing later than usual." Wonder what part of the country the Tribune reporter found that big stack of hay? Maybe it was straw?

THE St. Cloud Times reports a sad case of diphtheria resulting in the death of a young lady 21 years old, who went to work in a family who had been quarantined but in some mysterious way the card posted by the Health Officer had been removed. The house was a boarding house and when it was found the girl had died of diphtheria the house, including family and several boarders, was quarantined and guards posted to enforce the laws. Stringent measures are best in these cases at the very outset.

DELANO demands that it be counted in if Congress insists upon making appropriations for this, that and the other purpose for all the little villages hamlets, brooks and creeks in the country. Congressman McClary is advocating an appropriation to aid in making the Minnesota river navigable. Fletcher is trying to have an armor plate factory located at Minneapolis and a lot of fellows are advocating dams on the upper lakes to flood Chicago, while others are trying to open a sewerage for Chicago toward the Mississippi river. Now Delano could as well as not have a ship yard. One of those grand man of war vessels would look fine in the raging Crow, while some of our local politicians would be terribly tickled to have a dam built and a sufficient amount of dust removed from the bed of the river to allow the ship to float. There would be a fine opportunity for many of our citizens to observe how the work was progressing from day to day. And when the boat was ready to take to the sea she could be "christened" right here at home, and the contract for getting her out of the Crow and into the Father of Waters and down over the St. Anthony Falls, would furnish about as fine an opportunity for political trades and traffics as do many of the jobs already let and in course of being let. Let Delano keep up with the procession; or just let the procession slack up a little, for we're bound to be in the swim, some how!

Read and Circulate.

The Anderson bill needs but one thing to make it a law—a majority of the votes of the people of Minnesota at the next general election. On us of the northern counties lies the task of getting that majority. Every man of us owes to his fellow-men his best efforts to that end. The railroads pay yearly some $800,000 of tax. The railroads own in Minnesota some $235,000,000 worth of property. If they paid taxes on it all, as all men else must, they would pay $1.700 000 of annual taxes. There, fellow sufferers from this monstrous injustice of untaxed railroad lands, is the text. From it preach an unceasing sermon to every friend, relative and acquaintance you have in all the state from now till election day.—Aitkin Age.

Protect Old Glory.

An effort is being made by various military and patriotic organizations to secure federal legislation against the use of the Stars and Stripes as an advertising medium. This is highly commendable and deserves the hearty support of every patriotic citizen.—Annandale Post.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

Minnesotians in Pasadena, Fruits and Rains.

HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

Minnesota has many representatives in the population and visitors to the Golden State, and your correspondent has on several occasions been agreeably surprises on meeting Minnesota acquaintances, of whose migration to the Pacific coast he had not been informed. Names of several and former Minnesota residents are as follows: Beal, photographer; R G. Shuler, millwright, Timothy Dunlap, Dr. E. G. Cates and others of Minneapolis; Mr. Robinson formery of Dayton; J. R. Newberry, traveling salesman, St. Paul, K. P. Cullen, L. McEvoy, St. Paul.

Sojourning here for the winter are J. S. Malbon of Crystal Lake, George M. Turner and family, Mr. and Mrs. Boutelle of Boutelle Brothers, H. J. Cobb and wife, of Minneapolis. There are many other Minnesotians here whose names the writer cannot recall at present, but may do so on some future occasion.

Your correspondent has enjoyed many visits during the last month or two with the venerable J. S. Malbon recalling many incidents of the pioneer days of Minnesota. Mr. Malbon, although at the age of 83, is quite hale and is pleased with this sunny climate. On New Years day we sat on the veranda of the Los Angeles Hotel, Pasadena, with an umbrella to shield the warm sun rays, viewing the procession of the "Tournament of Roses" as it passed along in front of the hotel, so vividly described in the letter of Miss Isa Kerr in the GAZETTE of Jan. 17th, and noticed a jaunty rig highly ornamented with flowers and foliage containing two persons, a young lady and a miss not yet in her teens, drawn by a pony, but little did we suspect that any of the occupants were Minnesotians, neither of us being acquainted with Miss Kerr,

The process of gathering and packing the orange crop has commenced, which nets the grower about one dollar per box of 300 oranges, the packers gathering them from the trees, so at that rate an orchard containing trees of the age of seven years will yield from $300. to $600. per acre depending on the condition and management of the orchard. Tde value of such an orchard depends on its location and condition and ranges from $300 to $500 and as high as $1,000 per acre. Orange trees bear some fruit at three years and afford a considdrable yield at the end of the fifth year. Other fruits as prunes, peaches, pears, apples, apricots, figs, olives, lemons etc. are also raised in this part of California.

The first rains for January began on the 16 and continued with short intermissions through six days ending on the 21st. It has been clear since till today, the 27th, when it is raining. The total rainfall since Septemer 1st is about five inches. Aside from the rains January has been a very pleasand month.

Borers in Apple Trees.

From the Faribault Republican, Jan. 22, '96

In a letter just received from Iowa the writer says: "All apple trees that have been set for the past three years in this part of Iowa have been killed by borers." The same or similar complaints come from all over Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin. There are two kinds of borers troublesome to apple trees. The one above referred to is by the most dangerous as it is most numerous and not only above in the trunk, but also below in the ground. This species has not been seen much in Minnesota until the last two years. They have undoubtedly come here from other states in nursery stock. They are often to be found in nursery apple trees even as young as two years but more often in three year and four year old trees. They are so concealed that their presence is scarcely noticeable. The only-safety for our fruit growers is to let all outside nursery apple trees alone. We have already paid millions of money for these outside trees only to have them die in a few years, and now to escape this new enemy we must act at once. Refuse all Iowa, Wisconsin and other foreign trees.

"Keep Your Eyes Open."

"Having eyes, see not." That's the trouble with lots of people, who never see the wonders of their own dooryard or farm, the roadside by which they drive, the fields and woods through which they walk, or the ponds where they catch anything from frogs to black bass. WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jany. 31, 1896.

President Cleveland spent a day duck-shooting this week and that may have started the rumor of his intention to decline forwarding to the European nations which signed the Berlin treaty that Concurrent Congressional resolution, expressing sympathy for the Armenians and calling upon the powers named to enforce the Berlin treaty and compel Turkey to protect the Armenians, on the ground that to do so would be a violation of the American policy inaugurated by Washington and indorsed by all our Presidents, of avoiding entanglement in European politics. Whether the President has any such intention is doubtful. The resolution itself being a concurrent one, does not require the President's signature to become binding, nor can it be vetoed by him. It "requests" him to communicate the resolution to the goverments of the countries named, and while it would be unusual for him to decline, he has the right to do so if he thinks best. Should he do so it will not be because he does not sympathize with the condition of the Armenians, as he expressed his sympathy for them in strong words in his annual message to Congress.

Cuban matters came to the front with a rush when Senator Morgan, of Ala., on behalf of the Senate committee on Foreign Relations, reported a lengthy resolution setting forth the unfortunate condition of affairs in Cuba and their depressing effect upon our commercial interests, and requested the President to use his good offices with Spain to get the Cubans recognized as belligerants, in order that the fighting in Cuba may be governed by the rules of war. Nobody expects that Spain will agree, but if she doesn't it is altogether probable that the United States will, unless there is a change in the situation.

Senator Tillman of S. C., made the speech this week which has been expected from him ever since the session opened. It showed that he lacks the respect that every man should feel for the occupant of the President's chair, and that he is more of a populist than a democrat. It also showed—but why write more about it.

Senator Thurston, of Nebr., more than balanced the speech of Senator Wolcott, of Colo., against the Monroe doctrine resolution, now before the Senate, by one in its favor which specifically pointed out the errors upon which Mr. Wolcott built his argument. Answering the statements made in English papers about the people of the United States being divided in sentiment, Senator Thurston said: "Standing upon the floor of the American Senate, knowing whereof I speak, I say to the people of Great Britain that the grave issues which have been settled by brave men upon American battlefields can never be reopened again. Sir, there is no division of sentiment in the United States. Let but a single drum beat be heard upon our coasts announcing a foreign foe, and there will spring to arms in North and South the grandest army the world has ever known; animated by a deathless loyalty to their country's flag, and marching on to the mingled and inspiring strains of our two National airs, Yankee Doodle and Dixie."

The editors of those newspapers which are printing what purport to be accounts of the bids received by the Treasury department for those bonds have probably not carefully read the call for those bids. If they will do so they will discover that the bids are to be "sealed" and not to be opened until Feb. 6th. With the exception of a few letters containing bids, which were opened by mistake, owing to their not being endorsed on the outside "bids for bonds," no bids have been opened at the Treasury, and none will be opened before the date specified. This makes it plain that when a newspaper prints the amounts of bids submitted and the prices offered, it either has an accomplished second sight man, or an unblushing liar, upon its staff. Secretary Carlisle doesn't know the contents of the sealed bids, but he knows the bonds will all be sold, because intending bidders have so assured him.

A dinner party of gentlemen only was entertained by Senator Murphy, of New York, at his Washington residence, this week, and one has only to glance over the names of the guests to be certain that matters were discussed that would interest every democrat, could the conversation with propriety be made public. Senator Murphy's guests were Senators Hill, Brice, Gorman, Vest, Smith, White, Turpie, Pugh, Roach, Chilton, Faulkner and Walthall, and Representatives Crisp, Bartlett, Sulizer, and Cummings and Hon. Richard Croker, of New York, in whose honor the dinner was given. It will be noticed that every man of the party is a democrat of the rock-ribbed, tried and found true variety. I don't know that they discussed Presidential politics, but if all of that party will agree on a candidate his nomination might be regarded as settled.

The debate on the free coinage substitute for the House bond bill, which had dragged ever since the measure was reported to the Senate from the Finance committee, became quite lively in its closing hours, although everybody knew just what the vote would result in.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

Not much news this week, Mr Editor. Everything is so quiet one does not even know his next door neighbor's business.

Our reads are in rather poor condition for traveling, for it is neither sleighing nor wheeling. Hicks must have sent out the wrong edition.

Most of the sick are improving.

In places politics has begun to sprout and it is expected that it will be in full foliage very early in the season.

We hope the different political Committees of all political parties will trot out no cheap, one horse, drizzling, idiotic, squib of a thing, who has just one lesson, something about the war, tariff, free trade, etc. The time has come that the people must be fed on meat, and not the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table. These old stories that have been worn out years ago better be left home. We must have the live issues of the day; the people demand it. The idea of making votes over these old cracked chestnuts is preposterous, it's all out of date. We must have a new version of things, but no doubt they will come out with the same old song, and sing it to either long or short meter and in any key.

Independence Town, the border town of Hennepin County on the west, think they are now entitled to a County Commissioner from this district. So say we all.

As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1896. The cost of this superb work of art was $350.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day. THE number of people who are obliged to be disagreeable in order to attract attention seems to be on the increase.

TWO BRIGHT men in North Carolina are Isosceles Beazley and Prehensile Beazley, who live 13 miles from Possum Trot, N. C.

THERE are now 45 states, making a senate of 90 members. There are three more territories. When they are admitted the number of states will be 48 and the number of senators 96.

IN New York city the new liquor law is playing havoc with saloon property. It is believed that $5,000,000 worth will have to be abandoned by the business because of proximity of churches and schools.

A MAN, says a statistician, smoking a pipe of medium size, blows out of his mouth for every time he fills the pipe 700 smoke clouds. If he smokes four pipes a day for 20 years he blows out 20,440,000 smoke clouds.

THE illiterates in the United States are 13.3 per cent. of the total population. This includes the negroes. The number of schoolhouses in the country is over 235,000, on which we spend over $165,000,000 annually. Education comes high, but it is the best thing we have in this country.

A GRAPHIC idea of the immense size of Siberia may be gleaned from the following comparisons: All of the states, kingdoms, principalities, empires, etc., of Europe (except Russia), and all of the United States, including Alaska, could be placed side by side in Siberia, and yet but little more than cover that immense country.

MANITOBA has an election law that sometimes falls heavily on an unsuccessful candidate. A deposit of $200 has to be put up before a candidate is allowed to enter the field, and if he does not get a certain per cent. of votes, the deposit fails to be returned. The man is not only beaten out of his boots, but out of his $200.

THE fox's reputation for smartness was well sustained by a member of the tribe near Falmouth, Me., the other day. A couple of hounds and a hunter were after it, and the fox led the hounds to a frozen pond, and out on the ice so thin that it just supported the fox, which escaped, while the hounds went through and were drowned.

AN immigration investigation committee finds that at least 100,000 Canadian laborers come across the borders every working season and then return to Canada with their earnings. The commission recommends stringent laws to protect the country against invasion by laborers who have no intention to settle in this country or become citizens of it.

IN Dakota they attach cards to Russian thistles to see how far they will travel. One man found a specimen roaming over the prairies which bore a label and had rolled along for 300 miles. The thistles do not drift in any one direction, but backward and forward with the veering winds, so that they literally sow acres of land with their pestiferous seed.

AN Iowa paper says that wooden shoes are spreading. It is learned in some way that wooden shoe factories are increasing and that American people are becoming addicted to this form of footwear. It says they are cheap, easy to wear, warm and dry. The foot incased in wood is never cramped, and it develops according to natural laws. Trilby's feet might have grown in a pair of wooden shoes. Wooden shoes are worn more or less in all the countries of northern Europe, including northern France.

DURING the year 1895 a newspaper tried to keep a record of all people reported to have died in the United States at the age of 100. Two-thirds of these were women, all but four being white women. Of the colored centenarians there were 13 men. The oldest person to die was a colored man, who was 125. A white man died at St. Louis who had claimed to be 140, but there was no proof that he was over 121. Even at that age, however, he was the oldest white man to die during 1895. The oldest white woman was 120. There were 14 people whose ages ranged from 110 to 125.

DWIGHT L. MOODY, the evangelist, has made friends over more than a continent, and there will be widespread sympathy with him in the death of his mother, which occurred at her home in Northfield, Mass. Her ancestors were among the earliest settlers of that portion of New England, and all her life was passed there. In 1841 her husband died, leaving her in poor circumstances with nine children to support. But she took up the burden uncomplainingly, kept her family together and brought them up to be useful citizens. All except one daughter live in Northfield. Her good deeds survive her.

A MEDICAL journal seriously states that when milk is drawn from the cow by a clean method, cooled rapidly and delivered within 12 hours, it only contains 100,000 bacteria to the cubic centimeter compared with millions under other circumstances. This reminds us of a good woman who was once told that the authorities of her church had, in revising their creed, decided to lower the sentence of the condemned from eternity to a period of only 10,000,000 years in hades. "Bless my soul!" she exclaimed; "how thankful we should be!" The bacteria question is certainly assuming frightful proportions.

The discovery was made that Lee Sellers (colored), who was lynched at Knoxville, Tenn., ten years ago for murder, was innocent of the crime.

The death of Parley C. Stearns, aged 84, the oldest justice of the peace in Illinois in point of service, having held the office 52 consecutive years, occurred at Canton.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

Lord Salisbury said in a speech at a banquet in London he was a firm supporter of the Monroe doctrine.

Insurgents were driven out of Sabinilla by Spanish volunteers, who afterwards shot and killed 30 women and children and 16 men in the streets for cheering the insurgents.

Mexico according to the federal census has a population of 12,542,057. The City of Mexico has 339,935 inhabitants.

A demand was made by United States Minister Terrell for an indemnity of $100,000 for the burning and pillaging of the American missions at Marash and Kharput, in Turkey.

The governments of Guatemala, Nicaragua, Salvador, Honduras and Costa Rica have accepted an invitation to join in a convention of American republics in Washington next August with a view to unifying them.

Havana advices say that a great many families in that city were dependent for subsistence on what the government gives them — a small amount weekly—and hundreds of persons were leaving the city by every steamer.

Ex-President Harrison wrote a letter to John K. Gowdy, chairman of the Indiana republican committee, in which he declines to have his name presented at the St. Louis convention as a candidate for president.

LATER NEWS.

Campos, the late captain-general of the Spanish forces in Cuba, returned to Madrid, Spain, the 4th. The crowds in the streets hissed him on his arrival.

The National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial union met in Washington, D. C., the 4th.

Jeff Lang, aged 19, shot Grace Morrison and two associates with a shotgun at a dance at Lead, S. D. He was enamored of the Morrison girl and was crazed because of her attentions to another.

The steamship St. Paul, which went ashore off Long Branch on Jan. 25th during a fog, was moved off the bar into deep water the 4th.

Two slight earthquake shocks were felt at Norfolk, Neb., the 4th. Windows were rattled, but no damage done.

Four prisoners charged with murder escaped from jail at Bunkie, Fla., the 4th, two of whom were sentenced to be hanged.

A detailed official report from Cuba of the engagement between Gen. Luque and the forces of Antonio Maceo, corroborates the first account as to the number of killed insurgents, namely 62. The battle was fiercely contested and the advantage is claimed to be all on the side of the Spanish as a result. But it is significant that Maceo's forces instead of being turned back to the westward, proceeded on their way towards Havana province after the battle.

Thomas Pusheng, a wife murderer of St. Joseph, Mo., was sentenced the 4th by the supreme court to be hanged. He was once sentenced to the penitentiary for 20 years for the crime, but was granted a new trial.

Thomas Boswell, his wife and son, and Mrs. Joseph Bowers were seriously burned by the explosion of an oil stove at Camden, N. J., the 4th.

Two Wabash freight trains collided at Carpenter, Ill., the 4th. Fireman Huff was killed. Engineer Hardgrove and Brakeman J. Moy were severely injured.

MAXIMO GOMEZ IS WILY.

Great Generalship Displayed in Outwitting the Spanish.

While Marin Is Pursuing Him He Breaks Through the Enemy's Lines—Our Citizens in Havana Want a War Ship.

Havana, Feb. 4.—Maximo Gomez, accompanied by 4,000 mounted men, succeeded late Thursday in recrossing the trocha or military line established by the Spaniards between Havana and Batabano.

He crossed a few miles south of Bejucal, near Buena Ventura, which is about ten miles north of Quivican. At the same time he destroyed a small culvert, tore up the railroad tracks, cut the telegraph wires and crippled the section of railroad between Rincon and Quivican.

People wonder how Gomez evaded the Spanish columns, how it was possible for him to recross and practically cut through the wall of men of which the Spanish generals expect so much. At the very time Gomez played this trick on the Spanish guard along the trocha Gen. Marin, the acting governor general of Cuba, who had left Havana the same day at the head of the best-equipped force put in the field during the present rebellion, was slumbering quietly, surrounded by his troops, at San Antonio de Los Banos, about ten miles east of Guanajay. While Gomez was coming east and approaching the trocha Gen. Marin and his corps were going west on a train from Rincon towards Guanajay.

Gomez' route of march was parallel with the railroad used by Marin and not more than from six to ten miles distant at any time. Yet the forces did not meet.

Gen. Marin did not learn until the following morning (Friday) that Gomez was again in the east. The first intimation reached him by a roundabout telegram from Quivican.

Spain is reported to be mobilizing 18,256 troops to reinforce the army in Cuba.

Hundreds Leave Havana.

An exceedingly large number of people have left Cuba in the last fortnight, and it seems as if the exodus had only just begun. Every steamer leaving Havana carries hundreds of families not only to the United States, but to Mexico, South America and West Indian ports. Steamship agents talk of putting on extra steamers to carry the passengers away. Business is practically at a standstill. Merchants who have storehouses filled are unable to sell their goods, particularly provisions, owing to the interruption of traffic on the railroad lines running from the coast ports into the interior of the island.

Americans Uneasy.

Havana, Feb. 1, via Tampa, Feb. 4.—American residents here are becoming alarmed as to their safety in case the report of the committee on foreign affairs becomes a law. The news of the action of the committee caused many bitter utterances in the local papers against Americans. The feeling against Americans has been fed by newspaper editorials and public utterances of rabid Spanish office-holders, to the effect that the United States is to blame for all the trouble that has come upon Spain. The feeling has been intensified since the recall of Campos, and American citizens who are merchants, business men, professional men and who are permanent residents here, are very much worked up over the outlook. They would feel much more secure if one of Uncle Sam's war ships were anchored in the harbor.

Reports of a Recent Skirmish.

Havana, Feb. 4.—Gen. Marin has had an engagement with a body of insurgents, which he reports to be the main force under Gomez, and which was put to flight with a loss of 20 killed. The entire absence of any details as to the number of insurgents in the body attacked leaves some ground for doubt as to whether it was in truth Gomez' immediate following. Pretty much the whole of the combined columns under Gen. Marin, including 1,700 cavalry, seem to have been engaged. The force was equipped with a special view to running down and cornering the insurgents when once it should come face to face with them, and great expectations were founded on its supposed ability to do this. But the report of this engagement, although it indicates that the Spanish attack was made with great dash and vigor, seems to indicate that the insurgents were as successful in evading the Spanish forces as they have been at any time heretofore.

ALL AMERICA TO UNITE.

Convention of New World Republics a Certainty.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Minister Carbo, of Ecuador, has received a cable dispatch from the secretary of state of Ecuador stating that the Central American governments of Guatemala, Nicaragua, Salvador, Honduras and Costa Rica have accepted the invitation to join in a convention of American republics with a view to unifying them. This is the first affirmative action toward the convention, which is designed to bring about a common understanding of North, South and Central American countries on the Monroe doctrine.

The general plan is to have the convention held at Washington some time in August next, although the exact date is dependent on the answers of the countries invited. Senor Carbo says he has no doubt of the success of the convention, as it is responsive to a universal sentiment among Latin-American countries, and is favorable to a general upholding of the policy enunciated by the United States in the Monroe doctrine.

DENIED BY BAYARD.

Report That He Had Planned His Resignation He Declares Nonsense.

London, Feb. 4.—A journalist saw the United States ambassador, Mr. Thomas F. Bayard, Monday in regard to the motion that he be censured for recent public utterances here which the house of representatives will be asked to adopt. Mr. Bayard said that as the matter had not yet been decided by congress he thought it would be unbecoming for him to express an opinion on the subject. Monday night, however, Mr. Bayard said, relative to the report circulated in the United States, that he had authorized President Cleveland to announce his resignation in the event of a vote of censure passing the house of representatives at Washington: "I deny any such report with indignation. I never dreamed of any such thing. It is the utmost stuff and nonsense."

CONFLICTING VIEWS.

Dun Notes an Improvement in Trade—Bradstreet Is Disappointed.

New York, Feb. 1.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"Though business is still waiting, there are some signs of definite improvement. It is now believed that the first payment for bonds will cause no further pressure, and the money markets are easier, as respects loans on collateral, though the difficulty of making commercial loans still checks operations. But large maturities at the end of January have been met more satisfactorily than was expected and merchants and bankers report that the signs promise a good spring trade.

"No increase appears as yet in the demand for the principal products, unless for some forms of iron and steel, in which good contracts have been made this week. Domestic trade recorded through clearing houses is 6.5 per cent. smaller than a year ago. Signs of improvement in the iron and steel business are gratifying, even though they spring from combinations which have raised the price of coke and allotted the output of lake iron ore. Pig iron is rather weaker, southern works competing sharply, while speculative buyers of some months ago are selling below present furnace prices, but the average for all products is practically unchanged and 11.4 per cent. below the highest last year.

"Wheat has again advanced about 3 cents for cash, but only 1½ for May, although Atlantic exports are little larger than a year ago. Neither this fact nor the continued excess of western receipts explain an advance for which the basis or the excuse must be sought in foreign reports. Corn has ceased to "sympathize," and records little advance. Cotton is a shade lower than a week ago.

"The earnings of railroads in three weeks of January were 9.9 per cent larger than last year. The stock market has been lifted by these returns and hopeful monetary conditions, so that the average for railroad stocks is $1.84 per share and for trust $1.84 per share higher than a week ago. The expectation of an anthracite settlement has been a powerful factor, and it is generally supposed that prices will rise after the bond settlement.

"Failures in three weeks of January show liabilities of $17,836,511, against $10,685,660 last year; in manufacturing $6,661,129 this year, against $2,479,193 last year; in trading, $10,317,360, against $8,165,267 last year. Failures this week have been 404 in the United States, against 354 last year, and 70 in Canada, against 54 last year."

Bradstreet's says of the trade situation:

"General trade at the close of January proves disappointing, particularly in central western, western and northwestern states, where the movement of merchandise from jobbers has been slow and unsatisfactory, it being only fair at a few points. The volume of spring goods distributed from Chicago in January falls behind expectations, although larger than in January, 1895. Some traders in territory tributary to Chicago are making orders small, owing to having carried over large stocks and to a desire to confine purchases to actual requirements. At St. Louis spring demand is slow and general trade is characterized as only fair by the most sanguine. The condition in the northwest is such that grain moves freely in some regions, irrespective of low prices. A result of all this is shown by the cuts by New York, Chicago and St. Louis jobbers in prices of standard cotton goods, which demoralizes demand."

THE SENATE'S ACTION.

Passes a Free Silver Substitute for the House Bond Bill.

Washington, Feb. 3.—The long contest over the silver bond bill is at an end in the senate, that body having passed the free silver coinage substitute to the house bill by the decisive vote of 42 to 35, a majority of seven for free silver.

The result was such a foregone conclusion that little excitement or surprise was occasioned by the announcement of the passage of the substitute. The early hours of the session, beginning at 11 o'clock, were given to the closing speeches, including that of Senator Morrill, the octogenarian of congress, who is still vigorous in speech and thought. The other speeches were under the five-minute rule, being brisk and snappy.

Senator Mills, who voted with the silver men on all test motions, changed his vote at the last, and recorded himself as against the passage of the free silver bill.

The vote in detail was as follows:

Yeas—Allen, Bacon, Bate, Berry, Blanchard, Brown, Butler, Call, Cameron, Cannon, Carter, Chilton, Clark, Cockrell, Daniel, George, Harris, Irby, Jones, of Arkansas; Jones, of Nevada; Kyle, Mantle, Mitchell, of Oregon; Pascoe, Peffer, Perkins, Pettigrew, Pritchard, Pugh, Roach, Shoup, Squire, Stewart, Teller, Tillman, Turpie, Vest, Voorhees, Walthall, Warren, White, Wilson—42.

Nays—Allison, Baker, Burrows, Caffery, Chandler, Davis, Elkins, Faulkner, Frye, Gallinger, Gear, Gibson, Gorman, Gray, Hale, Hawley, Hill, Hoar, Lindsey, Lodge, McBride, McMillan, Martin, Mills, Mitchell, of Wisconsin; Morrill, Murphy, Nelson, Palmer, Pratt, Proctor, Sherman, Thurston, Vilas, Wetmore—35.

[The bill passed Saturday by the senate as a substitute for the house bond bill provides that from the date of the act the mints of the United States shall be open to the coinage of silver and the dollar shall be the present weight and fineness, and also provides for the certificates. It further provides for the coinage of the seigniorage now in the treasury and authorizes immediate issue of certificates upon the same in advance of it being coined. One section of the bill provides that no bank note less than ten dollars shall hereafter be issued, and those outstanding of less amount shall be taken up and canceled as rapidly as possible.

Section four provides that the greenbacks and treasury notes shall be redeemed in standard silver dollars or in gold coin at the option of the treasury, and the greenbacks, when redeemed, shall be immediately reissued.]

A Bad Fire in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Feb. 3.—The fiercest, most stubborn and most destructive fire that has visited Philadelphia in years broke out at 3:30 Sunday morning in the cellar of the Hazeltine building, Nos. 1416 and 1418 Chestnut street, and before it had been subdued the Hazeltine building and the American Baptist Publication society's building at Nos. 1420 and 1422 Chestnut street were destroyed, the dry goods store of Homer Le Boudellier & Co., Nos. 1412 and 1414 Chestnut street, was badly damaged, and the rear of the Hotel Lafayette, which faces on Broad street, was damaged to the extent of $75,000. The approximate total loss by the fire is $1,075,000, the greater part of which is covered by insurance.

Quakers to Meet.

Philadelphia, Feb. 4.—The greatest meeting of Quakers ever held in the world will assemble at Swarthmore college in August. Ex-President Magill, of Swarthmore college, said over 5,000 Friends would attend this biennial congress, which will represent all America. He also said that it would mark an epoch for the followers of William Penn. Questions of great importance to the Quakers relating to their government as a religious body will be discussed. The convention will be in session a full week. Nearly 2,000 of the delegates will encamp in tents on the college grounds.

Story of Awful Massacres.

London, Feb. 4.—The Daily News gives alleged trustworthy details of the massacres at Oorfa on December 26, and also on October 23, according to which 3,500 persons were killed, 1,500 having perished in the great Gregorian church. Syrians and Catholics being spared. The wells of the city were filled with dead bodies. Foreigners, the dispatch says, were protected by a strong guard placed about the American priests.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS.

A Stumpage Verdict.

A verdict which will cause considerable interest in the lumbering world was returned by the jury in the case of the state of Minnesota against the Carpenter-Shevlin Company, of Minneapolis, to recover on a quantity of stumpage cut on government land. The question at controversy in the suit was whether or not the stumpage should be paid for at the price which it would bring where it was sawed, or whether it should be paid for at the price usually assessed on the land where the stumpage is cut.

A number of witnesses were on the stand to show the value of the stumpage and the prices quoted ranged from $2 to $4 where cut and $5 to $5.75 in the city. The large number of witnesses swore that the stumpage was worth about $2 a thousand on the land. One witness swore that it was worth $4, but the consensus of opinion was largely in favor of the $2 price. Notwithstanding this, the jury returned a verdict of $3.75 per thousand, making the total amount awarded to the state $9,120.

Declared Unconstitutional.

Section 21, of chapter 24, of the general laws of 1893, relative to the illegal shipping into Minnesota of game killed out of season in another state, has been declared unconstitutional by the supreme court. The validity of the statute was called into question by Edwin O. Keith, accused of having in his possession one prairie chicken, killed and shipped from North Dakota, contrary to the laws of that state. Keith was confined in the county jail and appealed to the supreme court from an order of the Ramsey county district court denying his petition to be released on a writ of habeas corpus. The order of the lower court is reversed on the ground that the section is unconstitutional, because the subject is not expressed in the title of the act of which it is a part, as required by article 4, section 27, of the state constitution, which is expressed in these words: "No law shall embrace more than one subject, which shall be expressed in its title."

Burned to Death.

Little Rolfe Daniel, 3-years-old son of W. H. Daniel, ex-state senator and representative of North Dakota, was burned to death at the Orleans, 700 Hennepin avenue, Minneapolis. The child while alone in the room got hold of some matches and accidentally set fire to his clothing. Before he could open the door he was a mass of flames. He ran out into the hall shrieking with pain and terror, where one of the guests extinguished the flames. The child was so badly burned, however, that after four hours of suffering, death ensued.

Burned the Car.

George Wylie, the 17-year-old boy arrested for burning a box car at Tenny pleaded guilty and was bound over to the grand jury under $300 bonds, in default of which he was taken to jail. The testimony showed no malice on the part of the defendant, as he crept into the car to keep warm and built the fire that caused the damage. The car had been loaded with wood and the chips and bark therefrom became ignited and could not be extinguished by Wylie, whereupon he ran for assistance, but too late.

Gone Abroad.

Fred Mitchell, who has been for six years operating on the Mesaba for Longyear & Bennett, has gone to Johannesburg, of South Africa, to take charge of considerable diamond drill work. Nearly 50 skilled engineers, drillmen, miners, etc., have gone to the South African gold fields in the past few months from the Lake Superior iron county, all under large salaries.

Can Have Two Guns.

The secretary of war has written Representative Kiefer that he can have two cannon for the use of the soldiers' home at Minnehaha on a bond being furnished for $1,000. Kiefer will see that this bond is given immediately. The cannon and condemned shells for the St. Paul Cemetery Association will be furnished by the secsetary of the navy.

The Lord Mayor's Robes.

London's lord mayor has to put on three suits of clothes on taking office. He wears a wide-sleeved, velvet-faced, fur-trimmed robe of purple silk rep on presenting himself to the lord chancellor at Westminster; this he uses afterward as a police magistrate. For his show he wears a robe of superfine scarlet broadcloth, faced with sable fur and lined with pearl satin; this he must wear when greeting the judges at the Old Bailey and on all saints' days. The dress for evening and formal receptions is a black damask satin robe, embroidered with silver gilt. Under these he wears a velvet coat and knee breeches. The robes are a perquisite of the office and cost $1,000. The chain of office has on it diamonds worth $600,000, and each lord mayor must give bonds for its safe return on receiving it. When the queen passes through the city a fourth robe is necessary, but, as this seldom happens, it is bought only when the occasion arises.

YES.

HE postman, on his morning round
Left me a Valentine,
Which makes my heart with rapture bound,
My eyes with rapture shine.

It does not bear the rainbow's tints,
You would not call it "fine."
There's nothing that so much as hints
That it's a valentine.

It seems a modest little note,
In truth I will confess
The little maid bare one word wrote,
But oh! that word was "yes."

That word was "yes," and you can guess
What radiant joy is mine,
For she will be—oh, happiness!—
My life-long valentine.
—Joanstone Murray, in Womankind.

DATED FEBRUARY 14th

THE mild air of mid-February was perfumed with violets. From a yard across the way their odor floated even to where old Caleb sat on the courthouse steps. Above the gray old negro gleamed the white Doric columns of the house of justice.

Caleb was the most bedecked old negro to be seen out of Congoland. He wore a tall white hat, a blue frock coat—some 20 brass buttons adorned that coat—a steel chain (presumably for a watch he wore), a chain that crossed his breast four times. Sundry charms and bangles dangling about him give him an appearance imposing as that of a Knight of the Garter. This was his usual attire. He felt that such elaboration of toilet was due his position; he was general sweeper and cleaner of these offices and this house of justice. He rang the great bell when courts were in session. He fed the flock of pigeons that hovered about the courthouse belfry and the jail tower. Manifold as his duties were, he had comparative leisure now; even commissioners' court was adjourned. He sat basking in the pleasant afternoon sun, looking with unflagging interest down the vista of old shops and new-set young water oaks.

In front of one shop sat his quondam owner, sometime employer, and always his object of devotion. Very old and worn looked the major in the bright light that fell over him. His neatly-brushed clothes were very shabby, his handsome old face and military air were very imposing. His rattan stick and his cork leg were rested out on a splint-bottomed chair before him. His gestures, as he talked to the group of gentlemen about him, were excited. He was probably telling a story of the war, possibly telling the same story for the 100th time. Caleb was trying to match the excited gestures with his own experience, and to guess at the particulars of the story; for he had followed young Travis Calvert through fighting, wounding and imprisonment. His efforts after the thread of the story were interrupted, however, by the rolling of a handsome carriage between him and his master. Down went the major's cork leg, up the major's stiff body, off the major's soft hat; and just so often as a lady passed, or driving or walking, just so often and so elaborately was the major's story interrupted.

In the present instance the lady was Miss Lorena Banks, fair, fat and much over 40. Her carriage drew up at the post office, too far for either Caleb or the major to hear the fidgety inquiries after the Woman's Work, that came always, or nearly always, on a Wednesday; the Lofty Choir Weekly, that failed to come last evening; and the Portrayer of Fashion, that must be in the office now, and must be searched for.

Though Caleb could not hear the sharp tones, he could note very well the gloss and elegance of the equipage. From his smattering knowledge of deeds, titles, rent notes, crop liens and the like, he knew very well the goodly amount of the lady's income. Something, maybe the time of the year, maybe the insistent odor of violets in the air, maybe the red glow of the camellia japonicas on the coats of the university boys as they sauntered by him, themselves glowing with youth and brightness, every four out of five smiling over a valentine; anyhow, something set Caleb thinking of the long ago. It was of '61, the 13th of February, and bitterly cold in that intrenched camp, called by grace Fort Donaldson, Grant threatened by land, Commodore Foote by water. To help in the land attack, unexpected and unprepared for, until the fall of Fort Henry, the soldiers were throwing up earthworks as hastily as might be. Under biting snow and sleet they shoveled cheerily at the red earth.

Side by side worked Travis Calvert and his body servant, Caleb. Down in concert swept the arm of master and slave, up in unison heaved the shovels of earth.

Caleb remembered to-day how Calvert had said to him that day: "When I get a snatch of time, Caleb, I am going to write a letter to Miss Lorena. I am going to give it to you, and if in the engagements to come behind these earthworks I am killed, you send it to her. If I come out safe I'll send it myself."

Caleb had said: "You talk 'bout gittin' killed, Marse Travis; what yo' ma gwine to say to that?"

"Me being killed would break 'em up at home, wouldn't it? But," continued the young soldier, "I am going to have no more shilly-shally about this letter. I love that girl. I always will, always have loved that girl, and I am going to tell her so"—all his young breath froze on the keen, cold air as he talked of the warmth in his young heart; "I'll be the happiest man if that girl loves me. My name, my heart, my fortune, everything is hers if she will marry me," declared this young aristocrat, heaving his shovel.

Caleb had said: "You talk 'bout ma'yin' de daughter of de man what oversee for we-all in yo' gran pa's time? What yo' ma gwine say to dat?"

"That would break 'em all up at home, too, wouldn't it? But I love her, and that letter I write as soon as this shovel is out of my hands."

It was the gray dawn of another day ere Calvert found time to write that letter full of love's assurances and urgency; so it happened that it was dated February 14, the day sacred to sweethearts, pink hearts, and the arrows of Cupid. Of this, however, Calvert had no thought, among the ringing of the enemies' bullets across the earthworks, and the sound of the plunging fire of the confederates against the gunboats on the river.

For the next two days there was no way out of the besieged camp, and Caleb was too busy dodging shells to think of the letter he carried.

On the 17th, that day of fiercest fighting, Calvert's leg was cut clean away. That awful night, when 4,000 dead, and dying, and wounded of both armies lay on the ground and literally froze outright, it was Caleb who got Calvert a place in an ambulance of the enemy. A fortnight later Calvert waked to consciousness. He lay somewhere in the chill north on a prison cot, and Caleb leaned over him to ask: "Marse Travis, mus' I send the letter now?"

"No, no, no," groaned Calvert; "I am broken up. I am worthless now. Not with all my wealth, not with all my lands, would I ask her now."

When at last prison doors were flung wide, when hundreds upon hundreds of crippled, maimed southern boys turned their prison-paled faces homeward, young Calvert found Caleb waiting for him.

Freedom and honor had been Caleb's in the land of Calvert's captivity, and these he had used to the utmost of his power for the comfort and succor of his master. Now together they turned their faces to the warm, sweet south.

That was a returning that was no home-coming. Calvert's father was buried, his mother crushed with sorrow, his home burned, his negroes freed, his lands mortgaged.

In a little cottage at the park gate he found his mother, and this they made their home; there Calvert managed to eke out an existence for himself, his mother, and the ever-faithful Caleb.

In those first days of home-coming Caleb had asked, seeing that Lorena in her girlish beauty looked kindly on the maimed hero: "Shall I give de letter now, Marse Travis?"

"No, no! what have I to offer a woman?" Calvert would exclaim.

At intervals in all those long years when Miss Lorena was left sole heir to a goodly fortune, while Calvert scuffled with only the salary of a chancery clerkship and a swelling current of mortgages with no breakwater of payments to check their progress, Caleb had continued to ask, when violets were sweet and japonicas bright: "Marse Travis, mus' I give the letter now?"

Since the mother's death Calvert had lived alone in a bare little hired room over a shop. Wire-pulling politicians had maneuvered to thrust the major out of his office, and now with clear honor ever his and hard chance ever against him, he made a meager sum by copying and accounting.

Caleb lost neither his position at the courthouse nor his place as Calvert's housekeeper and man of all work. Just now the faithful creature lived in constant terror lest the major should discover that oftentimes his own earnings went to help out the meager sums the major gave him for the frugal housekeeping. He well knew if ever a suspicion of this reached the brave major, himself was forever banished, and the major given over to utmost poverty and unmitigated discomfort.

These thoughts, together with the dreams of what might have been, were too much for Caleb. He resolved to make one more effort to gain permission from his master to deliver the letter. He rose from the steps of the Doric portico—all the bangles and chains tinkled on him as he started across the street to the major—but a sudden decision stopped him short; wheeling about, he struck off in the opposite direction as fast as his old legs could carry him.

It made no matter that the major called to him querulously. He pretended that he could hear nothing.

He stopped nor stayed until he had reached the broad door of the Banks mansion and had tapped an apologetical tap under the electric bell thereon. At the door he had trembled; but his knees verily shook and bowed under him, and all his brazen adornments jangled on him like bells on a shaken tambourine when he stood before Miss Lorena.

She was so utterly different in appearance from the girl he had been dreaming of for his master's sake. He felt ready to swoon, too, for the room smelled so strangely and diffusely of old, very old rose petals, of simmering tea, of dried sweet fern, that one would have fancied that there was never a fresh violet or a day of gay youth in the whole world. But there was no drawing back now; for Caleb held the yellowed missive abroad in his hand, and Miss Lorena was already eying it curiously. So, bowing and bending till he tinkled like a rattle in a baby's fist, he laid the old letter in the hand held out for it. While she fumbled with the ancient seal Caleb's hand fumbled with his blue-checked shirt as if it would tear it into shreds.

The antiquated paper told faithfully young love's story—a sweet, fervent tale. For a moment the reader was herself young again, 30 years well forgotten; but, suddenly remembering those 30 years and more, she turned sharply on the cringing old negro to ask: "Whoever gave you this?"

"Marse Travis Calvert."

"When did he give it to you? I say when—when?"

"Nigh as I can git de count it were 30 odd year ago," stammered Caleb.

"And you!" she cried; "you kept it!" She saw the cause of her youth's disappointment, and she felt it anew and most keenly. "You! Why didn't you give it to me? You—"

Caleb was frightened now of no uncertainty, of no imaginings of his own. He was desperately frightened of Miss Lorena, and he made all haste a human tongue could make to tell the story of the letter and its long delaying. He dwelt especially on his own repeated offers to deliver it; he spoke with especial fervency of his determination of that afternoon to consult with the major no longer about the matter, but to fetch it to her on his own responsibility.

Full dark had fallen before Miss Lorena sent for Caleb from the kitchen, where he had been warming and feeding, to lay a crisp new note in his hands with the injunction: Give this to Maj Calvert immediately!"

The major's bare little room was dark and cold, for it takes all the sunshine to keep February warm. The major himself was fractious, for Caleb had not been inattentive before in over a quarter of a century. But when the note was in his hand, when Caleb had found his glasses and held the smoky lamp near for him to read it, he was as exultant for a moment as a schoolboy on an April day, rich with his love's first kiss.

It was the answer to his own love's urgency; he knew it as soon as the first words met his old eyes. In that moment of ecstasy his cork leg, his poverty, his sorrows—all were forgotten. And even when, an hour later, he sat by Miss Lorena's warm fire, her plump hand held charily in his thin one, and all the years and all the griefs that had sundered them remembered and talked over, surely in all the loving world, on that blessed St. Valentine's day, there were not two happier hearts than these.—Martha Young, in N. Y. Independent.

HE STOOD BEFORE MISS LORENA.

Grandma's First Remembrance.

Last week I was over at grandma's, and while I was holding the yarn for her to wind I said that next Monday was Valentine's day. And she said was it? And I said yes, and wouldn't she tell me about some valentines she used to get. And she said she never got a valentine in her life! I was so surprised I nearly whistled. And I felt so sorry for grandma! But I just thought inside: "She can't say that any more after next Monday."

I had some nickels and pennies in my bank that I was going to buy valentines for some of the girls with, but I knew they had all had valentines in their lives, and I was bound to do the right thing by grandma. And I'm glad I did.

I went to see her again Monday afternoon. And there she sat by the window, with all my valentines spread out in her lap, looking as pleased as you ever saw. There was a big, lovely store valentine, and a pretty square card, and one I made myself with some pressed flowers. And I printed all the addresses, so she wouldn't reckernise the writing.

And she said: "Artie, who do you suppose sent me these beautiful valentines? If I only knew who 'twas, I should have him take tea with me, and help eat the cookies I made to-day."

And I said: "Why, grandma, I couldn't tell who sent the valentines, but I could tell who would like to take tea with you."

So she laughed and squeezed my hand, and went to set the table.—Youth's Companion.

—Apple Sauce.—Pare, quarter and core tart apples. Put sufficient sugar to sweeten some into an agate or earthen pudding dish; dissolve with hot water, add the apples, cover closely and bake until tender but not broken. Cook rather slowly.—Orange Judd Farmer.

—Cream Soup.—Boil any kind of vegetable desired, fresh peas, lima beans, asparagus, cauliflower, lettuce or celery, in water, salted. When done, rub through a sieve. Put butter in a saucepan, and stir in some flour, moistened with milk, remove the vegetables and water. When serving stir in the yolks of two beaten eggs.—Chicago Chronicle.

—Graham Pudding.—Two cups graham flour; one teaspoon of salt; one cupful of raisins, seeded and chopped fine; one cupful of sweet milk; one cupful molasses; one egg beaten light; one teaspoon of soda, boil three hours, serve hot with sauce.—Mrs. Pauline Smith, in Womankind.

—Frosted Apple Pie.—Make an ordinary apple pie, leaving off the upper crust. When baked beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff froth, add one tablespoon pulverized sugar, spread over the top of the pie, replace in the oven until it has a delicate brown. Dried stewed apples can be highly seasoned and used the same way.—Housekeeper.

—Macaroni.—Take half a package of macaroni and boil it in salt-water until perfectly tender. In a baking-dish scatter a layer of macaroni, and over this a layer of grated cheese, alternating until the dish is full. Season with pepper, salt and butter. Cover with milk, and bake until brown.—Farm and Fireside.

—Calf's Liver a la Brouchette.—Take a thin slice of liver and one of breakfast bacon for each person; cut them into little squares as nearly one size as possible and place them on skewers, a piece of liver and one of bacon alternately until the skewers are full. Dredge with pepper, place them in a dripping-pan in the oven, turn them two or three times while cooking, and when done place the liver and bacon on long pieces of buttered toast already in a dish; hold in place with a fork while you draw out the skewers, then serve hot. If not possible to procure calf's liver other liver will do, though not as good.—Chicago Record.

WHEN HE PLAYED BASEBALL.

Experience of a Michigan Judge When He Was on the Diamond.

Of all the people who have entered his division of the Wayne circuit court since his accession to the bench, it is not probable that even one has even dimly imagined that Judge Robert E. Frazer ever played baseball. His breadth and girth are not suggestive of the nimbler divisions of athletic sports, and he doesn't look like a ball player. There are, of course, surprises upon the diamond as well as in other places, and after one has seen Cherubic Childs, of Cleveland, bounce around second base it requires but a trifling stretch of the imagination to picture the judge sprinting around the bases.

He told about the first and only regular game in which he ever appeared. He had long been a recognized professional at round ball and three-old-cat, so when the county officials of Washtenaw challenged the city officials of Ann Arbor to a national game, marquis of Chadwick rules, he admitted to the captain of the Washtenaw team that Prosecuting Attorney Frazer could bat a ball out of the county, and stop a sizzling daisy-cutter that was leaving a comet's tail behind it. He was immediately signed for shortstop.

"Perhaps I ought to explain," said the judge, "that out in the country where I used to play ball we had no umpire, and never heard of such a personage. We used to decide all questions of play ourselves, and when there was a serious difference of opinion we had it out right on the spot and the side that got whipped was in the wrong. On the whole I think it was better than the modern umpire, for it was soon over, was satisfactory and there were no protests to vex the board of appeals. Pretty soon after the game commenced I noticed a fellow hanging around the plate and having a great deal too much to say; but I stood it until I had been to bat, made a hit, but was caught between two bases and put out.

"'You're out!' he yelled at me.

"I knew it was out, and I was not particularly well pleased at the knowledge. To be told of it by a meddling bystander was rather rubbing it in, and I walked up to him at once.

"'Look here, young fellow, you are having altogether too much to say about this game. You've been sticking your nose into other people's business about long enough, and if you open your mouth again I'll—'

"I was interrupted by one of the other players, who told me that the meddling fellow was the umpire. I've seen many an umpire in a tight place since then, but I never saw one who came so near being licked."—Detroit Journal.

Importance of Table Manners.

I cannot dismiss the subject of breakfasts, luncheons, dinners and suppers without a few hints on the necessity of teaching children daintiness in table manners, says a woman writer. The young person is to be sincerely pitied who has had no careful mother, nurse or governess to attend to this in childhood—that golden time when learning is so easy. Men and women are judged by trifles. After a rugged backwoodsman has hewn his way to a high place in the councils of the country, or, perhaps, saved it in hour of peril, one may well forgive him if he forgets the right way to shake hands or doff his hat or enter a drawing-room. But even he will be unforgiven if his table manners are untidy or offensive. Just here the most amiable of men, Thackeray, drew a sharp line. "Oh," he sighs, "if only the dear American girls would not strip the corn with their white teeth!" And again: "How could I breakfast with five women eating with their knives! I could have stood one—but five, all at once!"—St. Louis Republic.

—"Brown is weak financially, isn't he?" "He hasn't much money, but he gives employment to a great many men." "Who are they?" "Other people's bill collectors."—Brooklyn Life.

Time and Tide.

"Time and tide wait for no man," saith the adage—but there are many other things of the non-waiting kind which will not be put off and ought not to be. Half the misery of the world is caused by delay, and Rheumatism is one of those insidious ills which demands prompt attention, especially in mid-winter, when the cold accelerates its action and intensifies pain. If allowed to have its way, it will wait for no man in its rapid development of the chronic stage. When this is reached, then come troubles, not only in its misery but in many ways where a helpless condition throws the sufferer out of work and money. But whether in its acute, chronic or inflammatory stage, don't wait. The tide of pain will go on and so will loss of time. At the same time we all know that St. Jacobs Oil is made and sold for the express purpose of curing the worst cases in their worst form at any stage. It has cured and will cure in nine cases out of ten.

DELANO DIARY

--Fairday tomorrow, Feb. 8.

—The groundhog that ventured out last Sunday, could easily see his shadow.

—Read the call by President Lindsley for a meeting of the Washington's Birthday Association, to arrange for the annual meeting.

—A slight flurry of snow came Tuesday evening, but not enough for sleighing. Wheeling has been the best mode of traveling since last weeks rains.

—On account of Diphtheria being so prevalent over the state and having made its appearance in our midst, it has been thought best, to suspend all public gatherings, for awhile.

—The sociable given by the Cecilian Club at the City Hall Tuesday evening was well attended, and an enjoyable time had. The band furnished music and a good supper was served. Many visitors were present from out of town, among them several priests. The affair must have netted the young ladies having it it charge a considerable sum of ready cash.

—Examinations in the High School are pronounced exceedingly hard by some of the classes. Some refused to try them, claiming the questions could not be answered from the books in our school. Questions, books, teachers and pupils should agree, in order to have successful examinations. Questions should be of such a nature that any creditable text book on the given subjects would furnish answers.

—A brother of Mrs. Albert Eppel, who has lived in the west for a number of years, has written to Delano friends that he has lately discovered that an abundance of gold is laying around loose on his farm. He has begun gathering it up and is becoming quite well off. Al has promptly intimated to him that he has a pick and shovel and a good strong pair of hands and a fine eye for gold, and is simply waiting for the word to help gather in the nuggets.

Homeless Children.

Mrs. B. L. Russell Assistant Superintendant, Minneapolis, of the Children's Home Society, gave a history of the work being done by this organization last Sunday, at the German Evangelical church in the forenoon and at the M. E. Church in the evening to crowded houses. She organized a local board here and has handed us the following for publication:

"Local Advisory Board, Delano, organized Feb. 2, '96.

Frazee, Mr. and Mrs. H. Bock, Mr. and Mrs. M. A, O'Hair, Mr and Mrs. A. W. Wittman, Mrs. H. Parslow, Mr. and Mrs. O. Peterson.

The duties of the local Board are 1st, to supervise the care of children adopted into the community. 2nd, to report applications for children. 3rd, (of chief importance to the town) to report cases of destitution, the Society taking even intire families if left destitute. Over 900 children have been cared for since first organized in 1889.

The first regular quarterly meeting of the Board is to be held on the first Monday in June in the M. E. Church at 7:30 P. M. Emergency meetings as required, notice of which will be given in the local papers. The Ladies of the Executive Committee intend collecting clothing so as to send a box as soon as possible to 802 N. Y. L. Building, St. Paul. Infant garments are especially needed. 18 babies now for placing. 10 boys from 2 to 13 months and 8 girls from 1 to 14 months.

Washington's Birthday.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Delano and Crow River, Washington's Birthday Association is hereby called to be held at the City Hall in Delano on Saturday February 8th at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, to make arrangements for their annual celebration. Miss Viola B. Cunningham left yesterday evening for Minneapolis, to spend a few days with relatives and friends.

Creamery Coffin, of Lyndale, was in town the other day, cheerful as ever, though he said he had been under the care of several doctors for some time.

Mrs. Mary LaClair, of Brown's Valley and Mell Powers, of Rockford, spent a portion of the week with their sick mother, Mrs. J. F. Powers, at the residence of J. D. Young.

C. W. Kerrick has lately returned from Helena, Mont. He says times are picking up in that country, that not much attention is now being paid to the silver mines but that gold mining is paying.

County Cullings.

The Ramsey County District Court has decided that it has jurisprudence in the case of the asylum dispute between Hastings and Anoka.

From the Maple Lake Messenger we learn that a creamery and mill are in prospect for that place, when bread and butter can be had at home. Correct.

Read Superintendant Lee's announcement of Spring Examinations for teachers. Attend the regular sessions and save the Superintendant and yourself considerable trouble.

The Commoner says "The Republican party will have to hump itself from now on to regain lost ground; the verdict of the Judges Monday evening was in favor of the democrats." And that right there in Cokoto! Surely daylight is dawning!

The Waverly Tribune says examinations were being conducted last week in the public schools of that place with a view to placing Waverly among the High school villages Thats right. Keep up with the procession. Wright county should have her share of the good things of the earth.

The Wright County Times last week said: "We had made arrangements to publish the financial statement of Wright County in full this week, but owing to a break in the press we will not be able to give it until next week." Wonder if that is included in the Syndicate contract for county printing?

If our county political officials sit around and do nothing for a short time longer the pills will be all rolled out, and all our voters will have to do will be to swallow them, or refuse as they choose. Why don't the respective party county committees call out their party leaders and formulate a plan of action; get together for the conflict; settle their differences and know where they are at?

We are indebted to that indomitable James F. McDonnell, of Waverly, for an invitation and complimentary ticket to the Grand Testimonial Ball, for the Waverly Orchestra, given under the auspices of the Literary Society, Friday evening, Feb 14. Tickets 75 cts. Good music and entertaining and instructive Literary societies go far toward making a town more pleasant to live in.

The Howard Lake Herald, in commenting on our cartoons and our items concerning county printing says: "If the doctor would just breathe on the plates a few times when he is discoursing on the county printing Syndicate the zinc would certainly yield where the acid failed to cut deep enough and the pictures would be quite presentable." The Herald seems to think the county items cutting; but what thicks hides the Tribune, Times, Journal, Eagle must have.

The Farmer's Institute at Buffalo is reported as a grand success, some six hundred people being in attendance. That's business. There is no use in the State paying good lecturers, well posted men to go around lecturing to empty houses. Nor is there any excuse for farmers not understanding their business when these institutes are held in their midst, and so many good papers can be had so cheap to aid them in understanding farming in all its intricacies.

Among Our Exchanges.

It is beginning to be understood that this is not a carnival climate. The boys and girls had a jolly good time, just the same.—St. Paul Globe.

In South Dakota there have been issued 1,240 United Srates revenue licenses to sell liquor. In North Dakota the number is 710. And yet both states have a prohibitory law.—Dassel Anchor

The best advertising our state immigration committee could do would be to issue a circular containing the weather reports for December and January of the present winter.—Sherburne Co. Times.

The New York Tribune, (since Greeley's death the organ of Wall street) says the gold democrats at the next presidential election will vote with the Republican party. Certainly, but how will the silver republicans vote? There is the rub.—The Waseca County Herald.

The Martin County Independent notes the strange fact that for 30 years no candidate nominated at any other place than Chicago has been elected president. In this connection it is a significant fact that the democratic convention is to be held at Chicago. —St. Peter Herald.

Talk about California climate; what is the matter with Minnesota weather when chickens will hatch out in Jan right out in unprotected places. It's time more was said about Minnesota balmy and warm weather and not advertise her with an ice palace. —Cleveland doings, in St. Peter Herald.

The Hastings people claim that the location of that fourth hospital at Anoka, is a state disgrace. That is a pretty rank statement when you consider that, geographically, Anoka is much the best selection. It would seem to us that it would be disgraceful to locate it south of the twin cities and thus give to southern Minnesota three of the four hospitals. If there was a disgraceful act committed it occurs to us that it was in the uncalled for proposition of Sam Smith and his overtures to Chaska.—St. Peter Herald.

Three judges of the Hennepin county district court have decided the Keeley-cure inebriate law valid and that whenever a judge of probate sends a man to the Keeley cure doctors for four weeks or more, the county MUST pay the doctor bill. This is getting to be a glorious country! We first license a lot of drunkard makers and then tax the industrious and decent people to support the inebriates and pay $100 doctor bills. O, this drunk business is grand for a set of people who pride themselves upon having good sense! —The Waseca County Herald.

A teacher told the pupils to make up a sentence or "story" from the suggestive words "boys," "bees," "bear." Quick as a flash up came one hand, "I have it." "What is it, Tommy?" inquired the teacher. THREE HELPS.

BY LUCY LARCOM.

If the world seems cold to you,
Kindle fires to warm it!
Let their comforts hide from view
Winters that deform it,
Hearts as frozen as your own
To that radiance gather;
You will soon forget to moan
"Ah! the cheerless weather!"

If the world's a wilderness,
Go build houses in it!
Will it help your loneliness
On the winds to din it?
Raise a hut, however slight,
Weeds and brambles smother,
And to roof and meal invite
Some forlorner brother.

If the world's a vale of tears,
Smile till rainbows span it;
Breath the love that life endears,
Clear of clouds to fan it.
Of your gladness lend a gleam
Unto souls that shiver;
Show them how dark Sorrow's stream
Blends with Hope's bright river.

In the Sweet By and By.

Below we give the hymn written by Samuel Fillmore Bennett and which was in everybody's mouth when it first came out. Mr. B. graduated and was valedictorian of the class, in 1874 from Rush Medical College, Chicago. He is now practicing medicine in Richmond Ill.

"There's a land that is fairer than day,
And by faith we can see it afar,
For the Father waits over the way,
To prepare us a dwelling place there.

CHORUS.

"In the sweet by and by
We shall meet on that beautiful shore—
In the sweet by and by
We shall meet on that beautiful shore.

"We shall sing on that beautiful shore
The melodious songs of the blest,
And our spirits shall sorrow no more—
Not a sigh for the blessing of rest.

"To our bountiful Father above
We will offer the tribute of praise
For the glorious gift of his love
And the blessings that follow our days.

Don't Seem Anxious!

Who'll be Governor? Not I, says Bob Evans!

JANUARY 1, 1892, a bushel of wheat brought 26½ pounds of sugar, it now brings about 12 pounds. The tariff made the differences.—Eagle.

WONDERFUL results are claimed by numerous scientists throughout the country who have been working in photography, and a human boney skeleton, and a Doctor's brain are said now to grace the tables of the experimenters while the originals are still alive

THE Medical Department of Hamline University, have appointed a committee, of which Dr. Barton, formerly of Buffalo, is a member, to investigate the examining board whose business it is to grant licenses to practice medicine in Minnesota It has been claimed that members of the examining board favor students of the State University. It is to be hoped the matter will be settled to the satisfaction of all parties.

CONGRESSMAN HALL, a leading Missouri Democrat, in a speech in Congress a few days ago, called the attention of his colleagues forcably to the fact that they sometimes shunned their duties, in the following style:

"If I were called on today to define what I regard as the greatest crime and curse threatening to sink American institutions, I should reply in one sentence 'the cowardice of our politicians, of the men who have not the courage, the manhood, the grit to go before the people and tell them when they are wrong upon these great economic questions."

J. J. HILL made a speech at the Immigration meeting at Princeton last week. He is reported among other things to have said that many farmers are afraid the farming business in Minnesota will be overdone; but that as a matter of fact our competitors are in foreign lands, not in our own state. We think J. J. is about right on this point,

Mr. Hill offered to take the farmers of that part of the country, free, to visit the Agricultural College. They should improve the opportunity.

And J. J. might without serious harm to himself, furnish a load of city people desirous of locating in the country, free transportation to go up and spy out the land.

FROM the Wabasha Democrat we clip the following concerning the new diphtheria remedy:

There is considerable misunderstanding as to the effect of antitoxin, the new antidote for diphtheria. It does not cure diphtheria but simply stops the development of the poison, and leaves the patient to overcome the disease as it is at the time of commencement of the treatment. For this reason the treatment should be commenced as soon as possible before the poison has pervaded the entire system, as then the antidote will do little towards averting death. A patient under this treatmest does not get well immediately, but ceases to grow worse, and nature is given a chance to overcome the poison already in the system. —Lake City Republican.—Wabasha Democrat.

Political Pointers.

It was hoped by many that when the Republicans came into power in Congress, something would be done to relieve the country of the financial embarrassment that has so long been felt in this country. But week after week, and months go by, and nothing is done to settle the matter. The financial question instead of being relegated to the rear, looms up with still greater force as the time draws near for making party platforms. Instead of carrying on a campaign on the tariff question, as McKinleyites would have us, we seem bound, as a people, to let that matter go for the present, and to make the question of what kind of a dollar we will have, the principle plank in the platform of all parties. And between the two old parties it looks as if it would be a difficult matter to decide which will advocate bimetallism. Some of the most eminent Republicans and leading men are advocating free silver; or bimetallism; while others want nothing but gold for a standard. It is the same way with Democrats, some are for a gold standard, others advocate both gold and silver for money; as has been since the foundation of our government. It looks now as if it would turn out that in case the moneyed men can run the conventions that both will favor a gold standard in some kind of round about language that can be read several ways. If this is the case then look out for a union of bimetallists all over the country.

Pool Rooms Legally Declared Nuisances.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 4.—Judge Perkins of Kenton county, Ky, some time ago decided that pool rooms and all other immoral nuisances could be abated under the common law, independently of special legislation. His opinion has been sustained by the court of appeals. Under these decisions two of the pool room proprietors in Covington, Sharp and Bollinger were cited this afternoon to appear in court tomorrow and answer for maintaining an immoral nuisance.

Railroad Land Taxation Convention.

Pursuant to the unanimous action of a mass meeting of citizens of Aitkin county, held on the 17th day of December, 1895, a non-partisan convention is hereby called to meet at Aitkin, Minn., at 10 o'clock a. m. on Tuesday, March 17, 1896, at the court house in said village, for the purpose of devising ways and means of opening a campaign on the merits of the Anderson bill (to tax unused railroad lands) with a view of bringings about its ratification at the polls next November. To this convention we invite the citizens of our northern counties to send five or more delegates each, irrespective of party, and to that end request that the chairmen of the several county committees of such counties jointly call a convention in their respective counties for the purpose o selecting such delegates.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feby. 7 1896.

Democratic Senators are proving the truth of the adage that "There are more ways to kill a dog than by hanging," by forgetting, or at least laying aside, their financial differences, and working together for the purpose of killing the House tariff bill; and whether they succeed or not, they have already badly frightened the republicans. They have succeeded, aided by the vote of Senator Jones, of Nevada, in getting a free coinage substitute for the House tariff bill reported from the Finance committee, and that is the weapon they intend to use to thump the life out of the tariff bill, Upon a direct vote of the Senate it would require the combined vote of all the democrats and populists to make a majority of one over the 44 republicans, who are apparently united in defense of the tariff bill, and it is doubtful if the votes of all the populists can be had against the tariff bill. But there are other ways of accomplishing legislative ends besides direct votes, and the democratic side of the Senate is especially strong in skilled parliamentarians.

To say that President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle were pleased to know that the proposed issue of bonds was over-subscribed to the extent of about $400,000,000 is a very mild way of stating how those gentlemen felt when the bids had all been opened and tabulated. Of course they as well as everybody else realize that this bond issuing business is thoroughly bad, but so long as republican laws make it necessary to do so, it is naturally gratifying to all members of the administration to know that so many people are ready and willing to invest their money in them It indicates a faith in national finances that cannot but have a good effect in business circles throughout the country.

The selection of Hon. Edwin F. Uhl, now Assistant Secretary of State, to be Ambassador to Germany, appears to have given general satisfaction to democrats in Congress, Mr. Uhl has made a splendid record in the State Department.

Publicly the republicans all pretend to believe that Mr. Harrison's letter entirely removes him from the contest for the republican Presidential nomination. This is especially true of the supporters of other candidates, who are rather over doing the thing in their anxiety to convince the Harrison people that their man is out for good and all. But privately nine republicans out of ten will admit that they consider the letter absolutely meaningless, and that it leaves Mr. Harrison just where he was before it was written. Weeks ago it was given out by Mr. Harrison's friends that his name would not be formally presented to the convention by the Indiana delegation but might be sprung upon the convention if there was anything like a deadlock, in the interest of party harmony. Mr. Harrison's letter confirms the first part of that statement, and says nothing else. In short, Mr. Harrison's letter is thought to mean merely that he declines to enter the general scramble, when the chances would be against his winning; but he is just as willing to be a candidate as ever.

The fight made on the appropriations for the Catholic charitable institutions in Washington, in the House this week, may not have been of itself a thing of national importance, but it will be heard from, inasmuch as it brought out the fact that many republican members of the House were, while claiming to be fighting sectarianism, in reality merely acting as agents for the A. P. A. They got so mixed up that they defeated the District of Columbia appropriation bill; the first time such a thing ever happened in the House. The vote was afterward reconsidered and the bill sent back to committee

Col. William R. Morrison brands as fabrications those stories sent out from Chicago, as to what he intended to do to control the financial opinions of the Illinois delegation to the National Convention. He says he has received dispatches from Chicago, and I will say in reply that I have sent no message to the democracy of Illinois by anyone whomsoever. This answers all the assertions and is as good as a whole column of denial."

Ex-Congressman Hendricks, of N. Y., who was in Washington this week, said when asked what he thought of the condition of the democratic party: "Oh, democracy is all right; that is to say, its cardinal principles are correct and sure to endure. The root of the tree is live and healthy, but some excrescences have developed in the top that need lopping off. I have no doubt that the party will get back in the old conservative channels in the course of time."

The House will, of course, sustain the report of the Ways and Means committee, that the House does not concur in the free coinage substitute for the House land bill, which was last week passed by the Senate. Then there will be a conference, the members of which may be looked upon as mourners, as both measures will die on their hands.

A substitute for the first Cuban resolution has been reported from the Senate committee on Foreign Relations, It declares it to be the opinion of Congress that the Belligerency of the Cubans should be recognized by the U. S.

Prof. A. F. Baker started out Sunday morning with his new horse to visit his father-in law and also to break the colt. While on the way the colt got scared at a wind mill, ran into the fence, tore one wheel off the cart, and caught the Professor's overcoat and pants on the barbed wire. The Prof, being gritty, still hung to the lines for a distance of some twenty rods or more when the colt managed to leave him The Prof came home not very badly hurt but rather scant of clothing. He says he is now going to break the colt if he has to use buckskin.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

Last Monday produced quite a little blizzard for this winter. Yet there was nothing in the nature of it very alarming.

There is quite a good deal of sickness in our town and local doctors are kept quite busy. This has been a very open winter so far but thought by many not to be very healthy.

O Styner is on the sick list along with one or two other new cases.

BORN. -To Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lucas, on the 9th present month, a boy. All the parties doing well.

R. M. Mills is spoken of as a possible candidate for County Commissioner from this district. It is thought Mr. M. would fill the bill satisfactorily.

The Town Board was in session last Monday and transacted some important business.

The creamery meeting held at School House Hall, Maple Plain, on last Monday evening, was not largely attended on account of the cold wind. Yet the meeting took the necessary steps in preliminary matters toward starting a creamery. There will be another meeting next Monday evening at the same place to make further arrangements toward the enterprise.

"Keep Your Eyes Open."

"Having eyes, see not." That's the trouble with lots of people, who never see the wonders of their own dooryard or farm, the roadside by which they drive, the fields and woods through which they walk, or the ponds where they catch anything from frogs to black bass. Of many of these usually unseen "wonders and beauties of Nature" you can read in THE OBSERVER, Portland, Conn. This very interesting illustrated magazine is of interest to all students and lovers of Nature. It assists parents in providing home interests for their children, and leads the "children of a larger growth," to be more interested in home.

Do you enjoy roaming over hills and fields or through the woods; are you interested in birds, flowers, insects, rocks, etc., then send ten cents for sample copy of THE OBSERVER (an illustrated monthly magazine), Portland, Conn. The Man Behind the Plow.

BY C. M. CONZET, Delano.

He is not so much at singing as those high faluting chaps;
His voice it may be husky, and a little loud perhaps,
For he has been plowing with a lazy team you see,
That's kept him busy with his "get up" and "Whoa, haw-gee."

But if you'll pay attention to what I have to say,
About a great mistake you make and do it every day,
In dealing out our praises, and I want to tell you now,
Too often you forget the man who walks behind the plow.

I plainly can remember when I was on the farm,
And drove the team for brother Fred who wasn't very calm;
His patience used to give away and p'rhaps does sometimes now,
But still he is the honest man who walks behind the plow.

Talk about your learned men your wit and wisdom rare,
Your poets and your painters, they get praises everywhere:
They're well enough to make a show, but will you tell me how
The world would ever do without the man behind the plow?

'Tis very nice to go to school and learn to read and write,
And nicer 'tis to dress up fine and sport around at night,
Your music, painting, poetry may all be hard to beat,
But tell me what your going to do for something good to eat.

You say his boots are muddy and his clothing is to coarse,
He makes a good companion for the oxen or the horse;
His face is red, his hands are hard, too true I will allow,
But do not be too quick to spurn the man behind the plow.

He likes your great inventions, he's glad you're getting smart,
He likes to hear your music for it kinder stirs his heart,
But 'twill never touch the stomach of a hungry working man,
And so I call attention to the kind of things that can.

Just go to some good farmer and stop with him to eat,
The nice kind of pork and beans, the milk and cream so sweet,
Then go into his garden spot and through his orchard too,
Then you will have an idea what the farmers do for you.

Then boys don't be too ready to leave the good old farm,
Father's getting feeble now, he will need a youthful arm,
If honest in your purpose at your feet all men must bow,
For the greatest of the great men is the man behind the plow.

THE Latest addition to the navy is the gunboat Helena, which was launched at Newport News a few days ago. It is 250 feet long by 40 in width, is built of steel, and will have a speed of 13 knots. It would not be much of a sea fighter, but for the purpose for which it is intended, light patrol duty in rivers and shallow waters, it will be very effective. When the gunboats of this class authorized at the last session of the Fifty-third congress are completed the navy will have 15 of these vessels.

The burglar slipped out, broke into the banker's house, found the diamonds and other gewgaws of fashion on the dresser, appropriated them and left a note saying that he took them to remove from the convert all temptation to resume her worldliness.

WEYLER'S RECEPTION.

New Captain General of Cuba Reaches Havana.

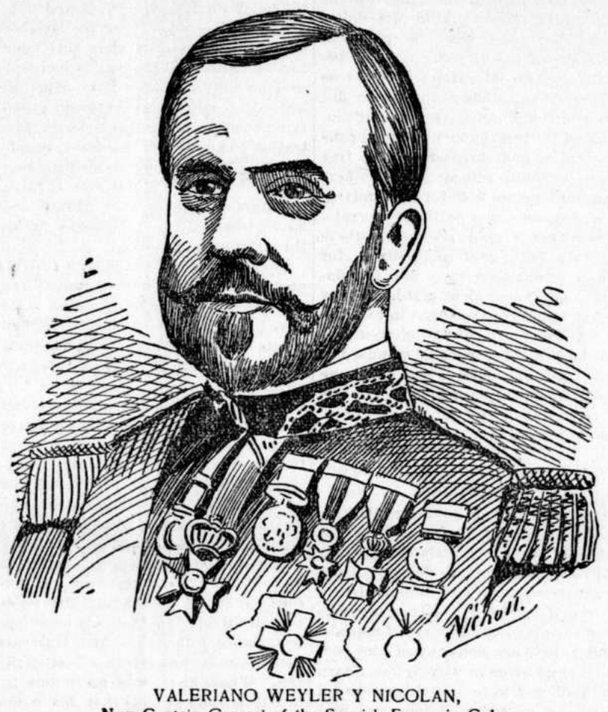
He Is Greeted with Much Enthusiasm by the Populace — Preparations for a Vigorous Campaign — Insurgents Appeal to Americans.

Havana, Feb. 11. — The Spanish cruiser Louis XIII., with Gen. Weyler, the newly-appointed captain-general and commander in chief of the Spanish forces in Cuba, on board, arrived off Morro castle at nine o'clock Monday morning and at ten o'clock entered the harbor and steamed up to the city. As the warship passed Morro castle she was saluted by the guns of that fortress and as she proceeded was welcomed by thunders of artillery from the Cabanas fortress and the dipping of flags and other greetings from the ships in the harbor.

After landing Gen. Weyler proceeded on foot to the palace, where he at once took the oath of office as captain general of Cuba. After this ceremony, the new governor and commander in chief held a reception in the palace, receiving the leading citizens of Cuba, a number of grandees of Spain, at the heads of various commercial bodies; leaders of political parties and the foreign consuls. Crowds of people in holiday attire filled the streets and the plaza de Armas, in the vicinity of the palace of the captain general, was packed with cheering men, women and children, while numerous bands of music played patriotic airs.

Weyler's Plan of Campaign.

Gen. Weyler will first devote himself to a complete review of the operations already undertaken and then he will figure out the situation as it actually exists. For this purpose, almost immediately after taking the oath of fealty, he issued orders to be sent to all the commanders in the field to draw up promptly and forward to headquarters complete returns of the conditions of their commands, together with the state of the railroads, telegraphs and public thoroughfares and the probable location and strength of the enemy in their neighborhoods.



VALERIANO WEYLER Y NICOLAN,
New Captain General of the Spanish Forces in Cuba.

The exact plan of campaign of Gen. Weyler, naturally, is not known, but it is believed that it will be a very different one from that of Campos. He is likely to call in all the small detachments of troops, which have from the first had such a weakening effect upon the Spanish operations, and he will try to drive the insurgents into a position from which they cannot escape without a pitched battle.

Appeal of Cubans.

Philadelphia, Feb. 11.—The Press publishes an appeal to the American people, signed by the president of the provisional government of Cuba, and craving recognition of the insurgents After rehearsing in detail the history of the United States' struggle for freedom, the appeal continues:

"We ask the American people to grant us, through its president and congress, those rights of belligerency to which, according to the laws of war and of nations, we are entitled. Our armies have marched whithersoever they would throughout the entire island, and for weeks have threatened the stronghold of Spain's power in Cuba.

"Must we capture Havana and drive Spain's hirelings across the sea before we are even given the right as men to fight for that priceless gift which God destined should be universally divided among His children" Must we gain our independence before we are accorded the sanction of the world to labor for it?

"Is Spain entitled to consideration at the hands of a modern civilized and highly progressive nation? Does its misrule of Cuba for a century commend it to the hearts and minds of men? Are its hirelings here fit to lift up and educate the Cuban and make his beloved land prosperous?

"Cuba, the bleeding, appeals to its American sisters. It does it in the name of God, of justice, of civilization and of America."

Providence, R. I., Feb. 11.—The boiler in the Annes Hop mill at Lonesdale, owned by the Goddards, exploded Monday morning. Patrick McConnen was killed; Hugh McClaren will probably die, and three or four others were badly injured. The cause of the explosion is unknown as yet.

Gold Deposits Refused.

New York, Feb. 11.—The subtreasury has been compelled to refuse further gold deposits on account of bonds, because the rush has overtaxed the available clerical force. A large deposit was rejected, and was carried away from the subtreasury.

RACES AT WAR.

Three Men Killed in a Riot at Whiting, Ind.

Whiting, Ind., Feb. 7.—Whiting was the scene of a bloody riot Thursday afternoon and as a result three men are dead and another is lying at the point of death. The dead are: Emory Szanjo, Steve Mutcha and John Mokin.

Seriously injured: Jacob Gladstone, cigar manufacturer, 397 South May street, Chicago, shot in breast; John Thomas, foreman for Standard Oil company, shot in right side, will die.

The trouble began in the saloon of Joseph Maovitik, corner of Adams street and Whiting road. For some years bad blood has existed between the Hungarians and the Polanders living in Whiting. Maovitik is a Pole, and about two o'clock Thursday afternoon a crowd of Hungarians entered his saloon with the avowed purpose of cleaning out the place. They began by directing insulting remarks to the saloonkeeper and his wife, who was also in the saloon at the time. Several of Maovitik's friends were standing around, and one of them struck a Hungarian, knocking him senseless.

The Hungarians became enraged at this, and, drawing revolvers, opened up a promiscuous shooting. Maovitik and his wife fled upstairs, leaving the Huns in possession of the saloon. Several of the Huns rushed outside and with clubs began breaking out the large plate-glass windows of the saloon. Maovitik from an upper window fired a volley at the men below. His shots told, and when the smoke cleared away Szanjo, Mokin and Mutcha lay dead in the street.

In the meantime, Mrs. Maovitik stood at the head of the stairs and fired into a crowd attempting to mount the stairs. Thomas fell, it is thought, mortally wounded. Gladstone was in the saloon at the time the trouble began taking orders for cigars, and was endeavoring to escape when one of the shots from the woman's gun struck him in the breast, just over the heart. The bullet was checked by a matchbox in his vest pocket, which saved his life.

At this juncture, Chief of Police Dobbins, Officer Lowenthal and Deputy Sheriff Emmell came on the scene. The maddened Hungarians barricaded themselves in the saloon and refused to come out. With drawn revolvers, the officers attacked the doors of the building. They succeeded in forcing an entrance and arrested the ringleaders.

W. H. ENGLISH IS DEAD.

A Brief Sketch of the Life of the Deceased.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 8.—William H. English, who for more that a half-century has been prominently identified with the commercial and political life of Indiana, died Friday at the age of 74. He is best remembered as the democratic candidate for vice president on the ticket with Gen. Hancock in 1880. He was at the time of his death probably the wealthiest man in Indiana, his possessions being estimated at $1,750,000.

[William Hayden English was born in Lexington, Scott county, Ind., August 27, 1822. His father, Elisha G. English, was one of Indiana's pioneers and honored with many public trusts during a period of 40 years. William was educated in common schools and at Hanover college. He studied law and was admitted to practice in the United States supreme court before he was 25 years of age. He was principal clerk of the house of representatives of Indiana in 1843-44 and principal secretary of the convention in 1850 which framed the constitution of Indiana, and was speaker of the first house after its adoption. He was clerk in the United States treasury department during Polk's administration, and in the United States senate about 1850. He was prominently identified with the compromise measure in relation to the admission of Kansas. This measure, known as the English bill, afterward became a law. In 1880 Mr. English was unanimously nominated for vice president on the ticket with Gen. Hancock by the democratic national convention. He was president of the Indiana Historical society and author of a historical and biographical work on the constitution and lawmakers of that state.]

The Catron Bill Is a Law.

Washington, Feb. 8. — The Catron bill to prevent prize-fighting in the District of Columbia and territories was signed by the president about 4:35 p. m. Friday and became a law. The bill did not reach the white house until four o'clock or afterward, and in its case the usual routine was departed from and the measure taken at once to Mr. Cleveland, who, after examining its provisions, promptly attached his signature, so that from the date of signature prize fighting is a felony on all soil over which the federal government has exclusive jurisdiction.

Believe It Settled.

London, Feb. 8.—The Chronicle announces that it learns on good authority that a partial settlement of the Venezuelan difficulty has been effected, "or," the Chronicle adds, "if not actually effected, is on the very point of settlement. We believe that the settlement refers to the Yuruan outrage."

Washington, Feb. 8.—In the senate Friday morning Senator Hale introduced a bill making February 12, President Lincoln's birthday anniversary, a national holiday.

SWIFT JUSTICE OF MINERS.

Gold All About and If One Steals Tin Pans Sound an Alarm.

In the gold mines of Coolgardie, Australia, much valuable ore is left absolutely unwatched, says the New York Press. If any person breaks away from the Arcadian habit of honestly leaving it alone he meets with justice by strange means. Confidence in honesty must be kept at any cost out there. Tents or encampments are left for hours and even days in the bush without being touched, even when full of clothes, etc., things which one would think were of use to some of the poor wretches round about.

The summary justice referred to is indeed a strong deterrent, the way it is carried out being as neat as it is effective. Immediately anyone is caught stealing, says a London correspondent, the "roll up" is sounded—that is to say, a tin pannikin is beaten vigorously drum-wise and in hearing this ominous sound all the miners in the camp hurry up to the place. The case is roughly explained to them; an impromptu court is immediately formed, a president elected and then and there the culprit is tried. If he is found guilty—and where he has been caught gold-handed, so to say, there is, of course, no doubt about it—he is ordered to leave the camp within a given time—generally a few minutes only—and never return to it again under the risk of being tarred and feathered or worse. It is extraordinary what wholesome fear there is of this "roll up" system—far more so in many cases than the police inspires.

GHOST OBJECTED.

Wouldn't Keep Quiet Until the House Was Moved.

It is told in the Washington Star that a correspondent had occasion to stop all night in a West Virginia cabin, where he had been entertained a year before. The cabin at his first visit had faced the road; it now occupied a position at a considerable distance from the highway and faced the other direction. When asked about the change the owner of the cabin said:

"Had ter make it. Dad made sech a fuss 'bout it, my wife 'lowed we'd hev ter move back. Yo' see, she never knowed the ole man in his lifetime, an' she didn' like bein' pestered by him 20 y'ar after he wor dead."

"How was that?" inquired the correspondent.

"Waal, the house uster be hyar, 'fore thar war any road, an' when dad died we buried 'im over yonder by them oaks. The road war cut through, an' we moved the house over dad's grave. He never had cut up none, though he war a great cavorter when he lived, but when we moved the house he uster come every night to our bed an' try to sw'ar at me—only he couldn't talk. It kin' o' tickled me to see the ole man when he couldn't swar, but my wife kicked erbout it an' I moved the cabin back ag'in. The ole man hain't come back sence, an' I'll reckon he'll hev his way; he allus did 'fore he died, an' he hain't los' none of his uppishness sence."

FORGOT COLORS.

Experience of a Man Who Was Nine Months in a Dark Room.

The human eye, though trained to distinguish colors, may by want of use forget how to distinguish them. The unique experience of Dr. R. Harley, F. R. S., related in the London Spectator, establishes the fact that color can be forgotten, as well as learned, by human sight.

Dr. Harley, in order to save the sight of one, perhaps of both eyes, when one was injured, voluntarily immured himself in a room made totally dark for nine months.

The fortitude which enabled him to adopt this course and the ingenuity by which he preserved his health and faculties in this, the most mentally and physically depressing of all forms of imprisonment, are sufficiently remarkable; but Dr. Harvey also kept an accurate record of his impressions when he at last looked again upon the light, after the supreme moment at which he satisfied himself that he was not blind, but could see.

He found that in the nine months' darkness his eyes had lost all sense of color. The world was black, white and gray. They had also lost the sense of distance. His brain interpreted the picture wrongly. His hand did not touch the object meant to be grasped. Practice soon remedied the last induced defect of sight. Experiment with skeins of various-colored wool, in the presence of one who had normal color vision, restored the first.

A Remarkable Echo.

A Killarney tourist, so the story goes, was assured by a guide that the echo on Loch Gill was worth hearing. So off went the tourist to hear it, and hired two men to row him out, accomplishing the transaction so swiftly that there was no time for them to arrange for the usual echo to be in attendance. In despair they broke an oar, and one swan ashore to fetch another. The echo began. "Good morrow," cried the tourist. "Good morrow," said the echo, with a brogue. "Fine day, God bless it," cried the tourist. "Foine day, God bless it," said the echo. "Will you have a drink?" cried the tourist. "Begorra, I will!" roared the echo.

Very Awkward Indeed.

This is precisely the kind of mistake a man makes if he "turns out" on the wrong side of the road when a vehicle comes toward him. No less absurd is the error of the individual who takes drastic medicines to relieve his liver. That organ is on the right side, and the road to its relief is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a medicine also adapted to the relief of dyspepsia, constipation, kidney and rheumatic ailments and malaria.

FATTENING HOGS COSTS ONE CENT.

The editor recently heard of a farmer fattening hogs at less than one cent a pound. This was made possible through the sowing of Salzer's King Barley, yielding over 100 bu. per acre, Golden Triumph Corn, yielding 200 bu. per acre, and the feeding on Sand Vetch, Teosinte, Hundredfold Peas, etc. Now, with such yields, the growing of hogs is more profitable than a silver mine.

Salzer's catalogue is full of rare things for the farmer, gardener and citizen, and the editor believes that it would pay everybody a hundred-fold to get Salzer's catalogue before purchasing seeds.

IF YOU WILL CUT THIS OUT AND SEND it with 10 cents postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., they will mail you their mammoth seed catalogue and 10 samples of grasses and grains, including above corn and barley. Catalogue alone, 5c postage. (K)

LETTERS FROM HOME.

I've a box of yellow missives
Sacred kept through changing years,
And when sad and weary hearted
Often read 'twixt smiles and tears.
There are notes of invitation,
Souvenirs of graceful sort;
Japanned bits and quaint old menus,
And rare treasures never bought.

There are letters from the schoolmates
Who through years proved true and tried;
There's the card of still another,
First of us to be a bride.
There are lines penned in flirtation,
Flattering and insincere;
There are others, gay and witty,
Filled with wishes and good cheer.

There are bright vacation letters
From the summer friends of yore;
They had written through the autumn,
But were never heard from more.
But in all the store of letters
That I keep where'er I roam,
There are none I find more precious
Than the sacred ones from home.

THE SECOND WIFE.

BY LUKE SHARP.

THE French have a habit of filling their railway carriages too full for comfort, and when my friends and myself reached the station in Paris to take the express for London, we found nearly every place occupied. Twice we walked the length of the train, but without seeing a spot available for two. I asked one of the officials if they intended to put on another carriage, but he replied that there was room enough for all who wished to go. "Then," said I, "we shall be obliged to you if you find us two seats in the same compartment." The official shrugged his shoulders and said that we could easily find them if we looked for them. This was about as much satisfaction as one can get out of a French railway official, who doesn't know much, anyhow, and cares less.

Again we walked the length of the train and I noticed one compartment out of the door-window of which leaned a very stout elderly gentleman. The curtains on the two side windows were drawn, and we could not see whether there was vacant places there or not. My friend, who is a very suave and polite gentleman, said to the elderly man: "Will you excuse me a moment?" and he proceeded to open the door.

"All the places here are taken," said the elderly individual, hurriedly.

"That's just what I want to see," said my friend, and gently, firmly, but politely, he opened the door to the great danger of the old gentleman falling out. A lady of perhaps 25 sat in one corner seat; all the other places were vacant but piled with portmanteaux, valises and what not.

"Ah," said my friend, "there seems to be some vacant space here."

"I tell you," replied the elderly gentleman, getting red in the face, "that all these places are taken. There is a party of us, and I'm looking for the others, who may arrive at any moment. You will miss your train if you wait here, for you will undoubtedly have to get out."

My friend glanced up at the big clock placed in the center of the arch at the end of the huge station, and said:

"The train leaves in two minutes, so it seems to me your party is cutting it a little close."

"The party is all right," observed the old gentleman, testily. "They know that I am reserving places for them, and they will be here in plenty of time."

The lady in the corner smiled sweetly at my friend, and he with some reluctance closed the door, for there was nothing more to be said, without calling the old gentleman a liar, which we knew very well that he was. Once more we walked the whole length of the train.

"I wouldn't stand it," I said, impatiently, for I always get angry when I see a man monopolizing a whole compartment, except when I do it myself. "I should have gotten in and taken a place in the corner. He is evidently waiting for no party."

"Gently, gently," said my friend, "all in good time. I will leave them half a minute to come, and then we will quietly wander back to the old duffer's carriage and step in."

We did this and my friend once more opened the door in spite of the protestations on the part of the occupant, who got redder and redder in the face as he saw the attempt to force the position.

"I tell you," he said, "that it's no good. My party will be here and then you will have to go out and you will miss your train."

"We have made up our minds to chance it," said my imperturbable friend,

OUT OF THE WINDOW LEANED A VERY STOUT GENTLEMAN.

as he proceeded to remove the impediments from the two corner seats and, speaking with the utmost respect, he continued: "If your party arrives even while the train is moving out, we will jump off and hold the door open for them to enter. I don't much mind missing a train myself; I could do with another day in Paris. It's a most charming city."

The old man grunted, and the lady smiled across at us. It was quite evident that she was his second wife, and that the honeymoon was drawing to a close. It was also evident that the lady was just a little tired of the old gentleman, and welcomed an accession to the party, but the old man was mad clear through; anyone could see that. He muttered to himself that it was an outrage and ought not to be permitted in any civilized country. A man had a perfect right to a carriage taken for his friends; this was always recognized in England, and no gentleman, nor anyone calling himself a gentleman, would force his way into a compartment where he was not wanted.

"I quite agree with you," said my friend as smoothly as sweet oil. "It is an outrage. I asked the officials, or rather my friend did, whether they would not put on an extra carriage, and they refused to do so. In England we do these things very much better, for such overcrowding of carriages would never be permitted on any first-class line."

"I was not addressing you, sir," said the old man, peevishly.

"Oh, then, I beg your pardon; I thought you were. I hope you will excuse me, for I know how annoying it is to be waiting for a party, and then have the party turn up too late."

The lady smiled again at the polite young man, and the old gentleman kept on muttering, but not so loud that we could hear what he said.

A gong clanged, and the porters ran hither and thither shouting to the passengers to take their seats. My friend put his head out of the window and called to one of the railway men; a porter came to the window.

"I see, sir," said my friend to the old gentleman, "that your porty is going to be left behind. Now if you will tell me which articles belong to them I will give them in charge of this porter who will return the articles to them when they arrive."

He picked up the portmanteau which had been in the place he now occupied, and thrust it through the window to the porter, telling him in French that a party was coming who would be left behind.

"Will you leave that alone?" cried the old gentleman rising and snatching the baggage.

"But, my dear sir," said my friend, protestingly, "you are surely not going to carry the other folks' luggage with you? Think of them left in Paris with none of the comforts of life."

"They will come by the next train," said the old gentleman, placing the portmanteau up in the rack again.

"They may have made up their minds to stay a week," said the young man.

The lady put the book she had been reading up to her face and laughed outright. Her husband looked at her with an expression of disgust on his highly colored face.

"It is no trouble to me at all," continued the young man, blandly, "to put out the luggage and give it in charge of a porter. It will be all right. I have seen it done a hundred times, and the train is just about to depart."

"Will you oblige me by attending to your own business?" exclaimed the old gentleman.

"Oh, certainly," said the young man, settling back into his place as the train moved slowly out of the station. There was a look of baffled benevolence on his face that was most touching.

"But, you see, I know what it is to be left without luggage and I merely wished to be of service to your party."

"Hang your service! I don't want any of it."

"No, probably not; but those that are left behind, sir; you should think of them; you should, indeed, sir; but then it must be a consolation for you to know that through your kindness two persons have obtained places in this train; many another man who had a party coming would have bundled us bodily out of the compartment."

"It is what should have been done," cried the old gentleman.

"Oh, don't say that, I beg of you," said the young man, looking inexpressibly hurt. But the old man was not to be drawn out any more. He took the English paper that he had paid three times the London price for, and began reading it. The young man after several fruitless attempts to engage him in conversation and learn some of his opinions on the news of the day, noticed that the second wife was reading a book whose pages were uncut, so he took from his inside pocket a small ivory paper-knife that he always carried with him, and sitting opposite her offered her the use of it. She thanked him, and, greatly to the old gentleman's annoyance, talked in a friendly manner with him until we came to Calais; here the young man insisted upon shaking hands with both of them, and again mentioned his deep regret that the party had been left behind, but his expressions of sympathy were entirely thrown away, for the old gentleman took his second wife under his wing, and, ordering all the luggage to be taken on the boat, departed. The second wife looked over her shoulder and smiled at the young man, who had helped to beguile a tedious railway journey.—Detroit Free Press.

Shape of the Moon.

It is believed nowadays that the moon is a perfect ellipse, its figure being nearly exactly one-third longer than it is broad. This elliptical theory of our satellite's shape is founded on the well-known fact that a certain side (end, rather) of the moon is always presented to our view. This is caused by the moon revolving once on her axis in exactly the same period of time that she revolves around the earth. Her elongated shape was probably caused by the attraction of the earth when both planets were young and soft.

—Robert Bandas, who presided at the annual gathering of the Caledonian railway engineers, remarked that the much-vaunted invention of the steel sleeper is where fast traffic is concerned not half so durable as a creosoted timber sleeper.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS.

Can Brewers Be Taxed.

Criminal complaints have been filed in the municipal court at Duluth against the representative of seven brewing companies, charging them with selling liquor without licenses. The actions were commenced at the instigation of the city attorney, and their purpose is to determine the question of whether the outside brewers doing business there can be compelled to pay the municipal license fee of $500. The question was first brought up a year ago by the agents, but the actions were finally dismissed owing to a compromise effected between the agents and the city council. The city attorney now contends that the outside brewers are not exempt from the license fee, and says they must all pay up or withdraw their agencies from the city.

A Valuable Horse Dead.

The fastest pacing horse in Minneapolis, Dr. Hedderly's St. Cloud, died while racing with Johnnie Smoker, at Lake of the Isles. The horses were pacing the last heat of a race of three heats. St. Cloud had been held down to slow time in both previous heats. When about an eighth of a mile from the finish St. Cloud was seen to slow up perceptibly and then suddenly reared in the air and fall prostrate without a struggle. It is thought that a blood vessel was ruptured but there seemed to have been no extraordinary exertion by the horse to warrant such a theory. Heart trouble is more likely the cause. St. Cloud was driven by Ed Webster, and W. A. McLeod was driving Johnnie Smoker.

Held to the Grand Jury.

There is considerable excitement over the arrest of Leroy Cleveland and George A. Titus, of Medford, for burglarizing the store of John Bailey, of that place, on the night of Jan. 22. Cleveland was arrested in St. Paul and made a complete confession, implicating himself and Titus. At the preliminary examination Cleveland plead guilty and was bound over to the grand jury, which meets in June, in the sum of $1,000 bail. Being unable to get this he was remanded to the county jail. Titus plead not guilty. He will undoubtedly be held for the grand jury, as Cleveland's testimony is corroborated by other witnesses. Both young men are well known in Medford.

Will Complete His Sentence.

William Healey, the young man who was arrested in Minneapolis several days ago by Patrolman Linquist, which act drew on the officer the severe censure of Judge Kerr, was subsequently rearrested by Inspector Nick Smith, on the charge of stealing a tub of butter. His case was heard in the police court and he was adjudged guilty of the offense. A fine of $75 or 80 days was imposed, but an alternative was adopted. Healey, in 1894, was sentenced to five years in the reformatory for breaking into a car on the St. Louis road. After serving one year he was released on parole, and has been taken back to complete the remaining term of his sentence.

Y. M. C. A. Convention.

The annual state convention of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held at Rochester, Feb. 13 to 16 inclusive. The committee have the promise of aid from Rev. R. A. Torrey, of Moody's Bible Institute, Chicago, who will deliver his now famous addresses on the "Baptism of the Holy Spirit." The international committee will be represented by Robert Weidensall, the association prophet; C. C. Michener, national college secretary, and C. M. Copeland, field secretary. An address is promised by President J. W. Strong, of Carleton College, and one by H. G. Van Tuyl, of Detroit, Mich., chairman of the Michigan state committee.

Steel Works Will Resume.

James E. York, general manager of the Ironton Structural Steel Works, of Duluth, stated that his works would start up soon under full pressure. About $100,000 will be spent in further improvements and additions, including a 30-ton basic openheat furnace, giving a capacity of 700 tons per week in the steel making department. Another improvement will be a large 36-inch blooming mill, with more engines. An elector generator in the plant, for driving all the cranes and finishing machinery, will also be put in. The plant will then have a capacity of 150 tons finished steel product per day.

The spring of the 1896 will find Redwood county with nine creameries, or three more than last fall. They are at Morgan, Revere and Sunborn. The Redwood Falls Cooperative Creamery, which has been doing business all winter, is now making arrangements to enlarge its plant by the addition of another separator.

C. E. Mosier, one of the bondsmen of W. M. Hewitt, receiver of the Stillwater Street Railway Company, has made application to Judge Williston, of the district court to be released from the bond, and the action of Mr. Mosier will probably result in winding up the receivership matter.

Warden Wolfer, of the Stillwater prison, states that a demand has already appeared for binder twine for next season's use, and that the indications are that the factory will be unable to supply the demand.

Fire destroyed the Brombaugh residence at Princeton; insurance, $500.

LOST IN A STORM.

Many Sailors Find Watery Graves in the Atlantic.

Amesbury, Mass., Feb. 10.—A three-masted schooner was wrecked Sunday night half a mile off Salisbury beach. The schooner, presumably the Florida, of Rockland, Me., coal laden for Newburyport, was driven on the beach in a heavy northeast gale about five o'clock and within an hour began breaking up. The sea was so heavy that to launch a small boat was out of the question, yet in the face of this peril two of the crew could be seen making the attempt. The boat was taken up by a huge wave and tossed beyond their reach, to be washed up on shore, stove to pieces. As the hatches and house went by the board the crew made for the rigging, one, thought to be the captain, lashing himself to the mainmast, where through a glass an hour later be appeared to be dead. Five of the others took to the mizzenmast, lashing their bodies to it, while the seventh man lashed himself to the other mast.

Hundreds gathered on the beach, and the fishermen battled for an hour in the surf in an effort to launch a boat, but they were forced to abandon it. The Plum island life-saving crew was notified and drove over the ten miles of rough road in the lifeboat behind four horses, arriving at 7:15. At that hour a blinding snowstorm had set in, cutting off a view of the vessel and making it impossible to throw a life-line to the doomed craft. At 10:15 two bodies were washed ashore, and soon after it cleared for a few minutes, when it was seen that the masts had been swept away and the other five had gone down to watery graves.

Newburyport, Mass., Feb. 10.—The three-masted schooner Allianza, New York for St. John, was driven on Plum island at seven o'clock Sunday night. She had been in the company of the Florida all day and met the same fate. Her seven men lashed themselves to the masts and the craft broke up an hour after striking. Three bodies were washed ashore and the other four men were swept in, tied to the masts, and were rescued by plucky spectators, who at the peril of their lives rushed into the breakers. The vessel was commanded by Capt. Melanzo, of St. John, who was one of the three men drowned.

THE BOND SALE.

It Will Net the Treasury About $111,000,000 in Gold.

Washington, Feb. 10.—The treasury will receive in round figures from the bond sale about $111,000,000. Geographically considered, the bonds are distributed in round figures as follows: New York, $78,000,000; New England, $9,000,000; eastern states, $2,600,000; western states, $3,550,000; central states, $3,000,000; southern states, $1,250,000. It is impossible to give the exact average rate at which the bonds awarded was made, but it was close to 111, at which the interest realized will be slightly less than 3⅝ per cent. The exact average rate may not be computed for a week or so by the treasury officials. The amount awarded to the Morgan syndicate is slightly reduced from that stated, owing to overlooking two bids, or rather in not being able with a hurried examination to discover the exact rate named. These mistakes reduce the amount awarded the Morgan syndicate by $32,100 and makes the true amount of bonds the syndicate receives $13,179,250. There were 78 separate successful bidders, and they were formally notified Saturday night by Secretary Carlise of the acceptance of their bids.

WHEELMEN MEET.

The League Opens Its Fifteenth Assembly at Baltimore.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 11.—The 15th annual assembly of the League of American Wheelmen was opened with a good roads meeting in the Young Mens' Christian Association hall, at ten o'clock Monday morning. Representatives of 40,000 organized wheelmen will wrestle with L. A. W. problems for the next four days.

Reports of committees, papers and suggestions on the question of highway improvements and short addresses followed. Chief Consul Potter, of New York, delivered an interesting discourse on the subject of good roads and illustrated his remarks with a stereopticon showing good and bad roads in this and foreign countries. He also explained the great financial saving to the agricultural communities, as well as gain to pleasure drivers.

DUNLOP SENTENCED.

Must Serve Two Years and Pay a Fine of $2,000.

Chicago, Feb. 10.—Joseph R. Dunlop publisher of the Chicago Dispatch, was sentenced to pay a fine of $2,000 and to undergo a penitentiary imprisonment of two years. The sentence of Judge Grosscup came after an hour and a half of an argument by Attorney Forrest for a new trial and the consideration of the mitigating circumstances in the case.

The prisoner was allowed 20 days in which to file his bill of exceptions and apply for a writ of supersedeas. In the meantime he will be at liberty on bail.

Mr. Dunlop's crime was the publishing of obscene advertisements in his paper and sending the same through the United States mails.

Willis in Disfavor.

San Francisco, Feb. 11.—Advices from Honolulu to a local paper say that unless Secretary Olney apologizes for the actions of Minister Willis that official may soon be given his passport. The trouble all grew out of an invitation issued by the Hawaiian foreign office to the diplomatic corps to participate in the national holiday of January 17, the anniversary of the overthrow of the monarchy. Willis refused to take part in the celebration on the ground that President Cleveland did not approve the manner in which the monarchy was overthrown.

Survey of the Gulf.

Washington, Feb. 10.—Official reports from Commander Burwell, of the United States Dispatch, show that the survey of the gulf of Honduras, upon which that vessel has been engaged for the past month, is progressing rapidly, and that accurate charts of this important harbor will soon be available.

Poisoned by Picture Cards.

Plainfield, Wis., Feb. 10.—A seven-year-old daughter of Lyman E. Berry, of Almona, was poisoned and died from playing with picture cards of highly colored hues. The girl had innocently held the painted cards in her mouth.

PARALYSIS.

From the Press, New York City.

Morris Preslaner of No. 1 Pitt Street, New York, who is real estate agent and collector of rents, caught a severe cold early last spring, which settled upon his kidneys. Soon he began to suffer severe pain in his backbone, sides and chest. His symptoms grew rapidly more alarming, until at last he was as helpless as a child and could scarcely move as he lay on his bed. As Mr. Preslaner is well-known in the part of town where he resides, he had many sympathizers, who did all they could to help him.

Though a native of Berlin, Mr. Preslaner has lived in this country for forty years, having served the country of his adoption by three years' hard service in the civil war. He enlisted with the Nineteenth Illinois Infantry, taking part in many battles and marching with Gen. Sherman to the sea. While in Georgia Mr. Preslaner was promoted to first sergeant for bravery on the field of action. He is now a member of Koltes Post, G. A. R., and is one of the most popular men in the Post.

Mr. Preslaner told a reporter the story of his dreadful illness and the wonderful recovery. The reporter met him as he was returning from a long walk, and, saying that he had heard of his wonderful cure, asked him to tell the story. When Mr. Preslaner was comfortably seated in his pleasant parlor, he told the following story, which, he said, he hoped everyone who was suffering as he had suffered would read. His words were as follows: "To begin with, I was taken sick just a year and a month ago, having taken a severe cold which settled on my kidneys. At first I thought the pain I suffered would soon pass away, but, instead of doing this, it grew more intense every day, so that in a week I could walk only with considerable difficulty.

"I called in a doctor, who said I had locomotor ataxia and began treating me for that disease. He did me no good, and all summer long I could scarcely attend to my business at all. Then I called another doctor and took his medicine for several weeks, but experienced no relief. Dr. Truman Nichols, of No. 287 East Broadway, who I at last called in, helped me more than any of the other doctors, but along towards fall I grew worse, despite his treatment. I think Dr. Nichols is a good doctor and understood my case, but despite this fact his medicines did me no lasting good.

"Early in November the little strength I had in my legs left me and I was unable to stand. The pain in my back and sides became almost unbearable, and my limbs grew cold. An electric battery I bought failed to help me, and for weeks I felt myself gradually growing weaker until all hope left me.

"Some time before this I had read of a wonderful cure a man had received from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, but was so prejudiced against what I thought was a patent medicine of the usual worthless character that I could not make up my mind to try them. As my pain increased and death seemed coming near, I thought of what I had read and of the symptoms of the man who had been cured. They were precisely the same as mine, and at last, with my wife's earnest entreaty, I consented to try the Pink Pills.

"I am now convinced that these pills saved my life. Gradually my strength began to return, the desire to live grew stronger within me. After having taken three boxes I left my bed. This was early in March. All pain had left me, and that terrible dead feeling in my legs had gone away. I was still very weak, but before I had taken the fourth box I was able to get down stairs for a short walk in the open air. Now I feel as if I had been born again and am as happy as a child. Every pleasant day I take a walk, and am sure that in a month I will be as well as ever."

All diseases, such as locomotor ataxia, St. Vitus' dance, partial paralysis, sciatica, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervous headache, palpitation of the heart, effects of la grippe, pale and sallow complexions, and all forms of weakness, either in man or woman, disappear when Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are taken. Pink Pills can be bought of any dealer, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold by the hundred or in bulk) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Rattlesnakes, Butterflies, and . . . ?

Washington Irving said, he supposed a certain hill was called "Rattlesnake Hill" because it abounded in—butterflies. The "rule of contrary" governs other names. Some bottles are, supposedly, labeled "Sarsaparilla" because they are full of . . . well, we don't know what they are full of, but we know it's not sarsaparilla; except, perhaps, enough for a flavor. There's only one make of sarsaparilla that can be relied on to be all it claims. It's Ayer's. It has no secret to keep. Its formula is open to all physicians. This formula was examined by the Medical Committee at the World's Fair with the result that while every other make of sarsaparilla was excluded from the Fair, Ayer's Sarsaparilla was admitted and honored by awards. It was admitted because it was the best sarsaparilla. It received the medal as the best. No other sarsaparilla has been so tested or so honored. Good motto for the family as well as the Fair: Admit the best, exclude the rest.

Time Table.

Going West,	Going East.
10:47, a. m.	8:57, a. m.
7:40 p. m.	4:53, p. m.

DELANO DIARY

—On Wednesday a light fall of snow came, but not enough for sleighing.

—The old settlers programme for the Buffalo meeting appears in another column.

—The Public schools observed Lincoln's Birthday, Wednesday, by taking a vacation.

—Henry Conzet has vacated the Danforth House and J. S. Cooper has succeeded him as landlord.

—Messrs. Babb and Coffin have completed the repairing of the damage wrought by fire at the Presbyterian church. The church has been papered and now looks better than before.

—The BUFFALO GAZETTE, the Northwestern Agriculturist and $1.60 worth of seeds all for $1 50. This small sum gives you a local paper, a farm paper and your garden seeds for one year.

—Miss Maud Sherry has been employed by our school board to teach the second primary department in the public schools. This makes the sixth teacher. The next move will be a second school house.

—Prof. Charles S. Hawker gave such universal satisfaction as speaker at the Washington's Birthday celebration last year, that he has been placed on the programme this year as orator of the occasion, for the 22nd.

—The family of John Cameron seems to be having an unusual amount of affliction all at once. Mr. and Mrs. Cameron and their daughter, Alvira, are all sick and Miss Addie is home from Minneapolis to attend them.

—If you are going to raise fruit in Minnesota send 2 cent stamp to A. W. LATHAM, 207 Kasota Block, Minneapolis, for a copy of "The Minnesota Horticulturist." There is nothing like profiting by others experience, even in fruit raising.

—The strong wind on Monday made a job for electrician Muckey repairing the street lamps. Hanging in the middle of the streets and furnishing such a surface for the winds to catch they seldom escape some damage when there is the slightest gale.

—Read the poem in another column "The Man Behind the Plow," by our local poet, C. M. Conzet. Charley is climbing and bids fair to reach the top of the poetical ladder at least as soon as his competitor the new English Laureate, Mr. Alfred Austin.

—Read the offer of the New York Triweekly World and the GAZETTE. All for $1.75 in advance. This will furnish you an abundance of good reading for the campaign. This is Presidential year and you want to know what's going on in the country.

—F H. Lindsley, President of the Board of Education is working with the village Council to have electric lights put into the school house, so that some literary work can be done evenings, by the scholars and teachers. This would be a move in the right direction.

—The Board of Health met last Saturday and passed a set of rules and regulations according to the laws governing such Boards, prohibiting the holding of any public gatherings of unusual size until further notice. If no further cases develop in our village it is hoped that these restrictions will not long be necessary.

—Chemical apparatus and appliances, reagents, etc. have arrived for starting a class in chemistry; but with the usual lack of git-up-e-tude-ness of somebody, there is a hitch somewhere; a precipitate that don't clear up, and the boys and girls are existing in hope of something in the future. Commit-get a move on your chemicals.

—A meeting of Ladies was held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Lewis, on Wednesday and several contributions received toward making up a box for the Homeless Children Society. Another meeting will be held Wednesday next, at the home of Mrs. C. G. Roosen, when it is hoped to complete the shipment.

—Next month comes the village election. If you want an orderly, quiet, pleasant town to live in, don't shun the caucuses and stay away from the polls and take no part in choosing officers and then complain. But be out and express your choice at the caucuses, and don't fail to be on hand and vote, on election day, for the best men.

—As the creamery business increases farmers begin talking about "silo" and other means of saving all the corn and other feed for cattle. This year will likely see several of our most prosperous and intelligent farmers looking out for the latest improvments in this line.

"That's the way the world is wagging, wagging all the while;
And if you'd keep along with it, you've got to get the style."

—On Monday morning while the Watertown stage was being loaded at the depot the wind blew the robes off and frightened the horses; a lively runaway was the consequence. The team made good time and a first class turn onto the bridge, where Messrs. Horsch stopped them. The driver, Mr. Malsed, started over the R. R. bridge at a double quick to head them off; he also made quite a record for speed. No harm done.

—We are in receipt of a fine variety of flower and garden seeds from that old and reliable firm, James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N Y —Not much wheat seems to find its way to market now. We understand that Johnson the miller buys and grinds about half that comes to town.

—LOST, on Monday, Feby. 10th, between the school house and the depot, a kid mitten having fur around the edge. The finder will please leave at this office.

—The fair on Saturday was largely attended. But we did not hear of much trading in stock. People who have wintered cattle until now generally prefer keeping them until prices are up.

—It still looks as if our school would not receive the prize for the best essay on the Declaration of Independence, offered by the Sons of the Revolution. The school board should have attended to this matter.

—If you are going to read the newspapers and post up with a farm journal and expect to make garden, read our offer in another column. The GAZETTE, the Northwestern Agriculturist and $1.60 worth of seeds for $1 50.

—Each year the wood supply grows smaller and the number of coal stoves in the community more numerous. At the present rate coal will soon be the principal fuel, unless oil or some other heating substance supersedes it.

—Preparations are going on toward observing Washington's Birthday, after Delano's usual custom, The programme will be found in another place in this paper. People are requested to bring plenty of provisions and the committee will see that hot coffee is served to all. Delano has established a reputation for having a good time on the 22nd and it is to be hoped that this year will be no exception in this respect, to the general rule.

—We are in recipt of a letter from one of Delano's former sons who seems to be rapidly climbing up the ladder of fame and fortune. He invites us to call on him; but after our experience in Chicago trying to get a sight of him we would want him to agree to be at home before we make the attempt. Below we give the letter:

904 Olive St., ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feby. 8th, 1896.

DEAR DR.:—Kindly change my address from Chicago to 904 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo., as I will be here permanently from this on. I have charge of St. Louis office of D. Appleton & Co. and when you come to the Rep. Convention be sure and call as the Convention Hall is just three blocks farther up Olive St, and we would be pleased to see you.

Very truly yours,
JAS. R. SUTTON.

—Miss Anna Mc Alpine, who was taken down with diphtheria last week, is recovering quite rapidly. Dr. Chilton, of Howard was called in consultation and agreed with the attending physician that it was a case of diphtheria. He administered antitoxin to her; and also to her sister, as a preventative. There seemed to be no bad effects, more than from the hypodermic injection of other remedies, though it could not be positively asserted that there was any good effects. At all events the patient is now in a fair way to make a rapid recovery and her sister who waited on her has shown no signs of getting the disease. Quarantine has been well observed and it is hoped no more cases will appear.

—We are creditably informed that the article which appeared in the GAZETTE a few weeks ago, containing the comparison of saloons to number of people in Democratic and Republican states was refused publication recently, when sent by the W. C. T. U. press agent, to one of our county papers. Had the comparisons shown more favorably for the party of his choice would the partisan editor have refused to give it space? If it is correct the editor should fearlessly publish it. If it is incorrect he has the privilege of refuting it. But it looks a little queer to do neither. Below we give the table of comparisons:

REPUBLICAN STATES.

Iowa	1 saloon to every 425 people.
Kansas	1 saloon to every 823 people.
Vermont	1 saloon to every 866 people.
Maine	1 saloon to every 802 people

DEMOCRATIC STATES.

Alabama	1 saloon to every 1,183 people.
Arkansas	1 saloon to every 1,170 people.
S. Carolina	1 saloon to every 1,153 people.
Mississippi	1 saloon to every 1,593 people.
N. Carolina	1 saloon to every 1,596 people.

Clerk of Court Vorse came over from Buffalo and spent his first official holiday, Lincoln's birthday at home.

Charley Ebert, a Minneapolis Attorney, spent several days in town this week on the case of Schwatzka vs. Otto.

County Commissioner Kemper, of Victor, passed through town Monday morning on his way to Buffalo to attend a meeting.

Commissioner Bugbee was a GAZETTE caller this morning. He is on a committee to locate the road in the neighborhood of Wright's Ford.

To the Ladies.

There will be another meeting of the ladies, with Mrs. Roosen, on Wednesday, at 2 p. m., to finish up the box of clothing for homeless children. Any person having clothing to send will please send or bring it.

Per order Sec., MRS L. A. FRAZEE.

The families of S. F. Bunker and Dr. Davis are in quarantine on account scarlet fever.—Howard Lake Herald.

Montrose folks are preparing to build a creamery in their village. The butter business seems to be growing, fast.

The Supreme Court rendered a decision that the law making the term of Clerk of Court four years was constitutional, consequently Mr O'Leary's term has ended and C. H. Vorse, of Delano now wears them shoes.

Mrs. Harry Marshall, of Fountain Lake, has been on the sick list for some time. She is one of the old settlers in these parts and has lived alone since the death of her husband, a few years ago.

The three newspapers in Glenwood have been consolidated into one. This was a wise move. It is a good deal better for a town to have one good newspaper that two or three half starved affairs.—Buffalo Journal.

Why don't the Republican papers of Wright County follow this wise move?

If you contemplate planting out any fruit trees send for a Fruit List for Minnesota as adopted and recommended by the State Horticultural Society. Address A. W. Latham, Secretary, 207 Kasota Block, Minneapolis, send a 2 cent postage stamp, with your name and address plainly written. From long experience the members of this society should know what to recommend.

Don't forget to go to the caucus and help nominate the best man for each office in your town that the town affords. And when you have your choice nominated don't stay away from the polls and allow the ticket beaten by unscrupulous and wire pulling politicians and then go around growling about how town matters are run. Be on hand, take part, do your duty and then with a clear conscience you can criticise those that do wrong or stay away.

At the high school in this city, says the Saline (Ark.) Republican, an experiment was performed on a cat. The professor, wishing to give the cigarette the benefit of every doubt, chose a cat because of its fabled nine lives. The nicotine was extracted from a cigarette and a drop of it placed upon the tongue of the cat. Instantly the feline began to whine and soon commenced rushing through the school, apparently in great agony of mind and body. In just four minutes from the time the fatal nicotine was placed upon its tongue the cat expired. The fact caused some boys in the room to turn pale.—Minneota Mascot.

BILL NYE is reported as being quite sick at his home in Asheville, N. C.

Now comes the news that Stephen B. Elkins, of Va., is a candidate for President. Mat Quay was in the field before. It looks as if the old war horses were as determined as ever.

MILLS, of Texas, Morrison, of Ill., Voorhees, of Indiana, Watterson, of Kentucky, Bob Taylor, of Tennessee, and many others would make Presidential timber preferable to the old season cracked stuff of York State.

As we read of the splendid time some of our brother editors enjoyed at the annual gathering in St. Paul this week we think, how we would liked to have been there, but circumstances prevented us from attending this time.

MARCUS O. CATHCART, of the News Ledger, Litchfield, died last week. He was sick but a few days. Mr. Cathcart was born at Rockford, Wright County, Oct. 29, 1860, and has been connected with the Litchfield paper for about 15 years. He is highly spoken of by his acquaintedces everywhere as a man of more that ordinary ability.

THE terms of office of the only Democratic Judges of the District Court in our district, Judges Smith and Pond, expire this year. New ones will have to be placed on the ticket. The same old racket will probably be up about whether they will be from Minneapolis or the country, and whether they shall be Democrats or non-partisan. This kind of thing is getting stale. What constitutes a good Judge? He should be a man who commands the respect of his fellow men always. Whether he is from one end of the district or the other he should be honorable, upright, fearless and honest.

CLIMATE or something else seems to have effected a change of sentiment, or else the Minnesota Editor who while at Nashville when the Taylor brothers started out with "Yankee Doodle and Dixie", made the remark that if they produced that upon the stage in the North they would be mobbed, was in a hopelessly small minority. Instead of mobbing them, the Minnesota Editorial society extended them the freedom of their annual meeting in St. Paul, this week. We thought the eminent pen pusher had made a great mistake when he made that savage remark, even though he were taking a trip in the Sunny South.

Old Settlers' Association.

The Annual Reunion of the Old Settlers of Wright County, will be held on Saturday, February 22, 1896, at the Opera Hall, Buffalo, Minn. There will be a basket, picnic dinner in the small hall, where tables will be set and accomodations furnished for making tea and coffee. Well filled lunch baskets will be a necessary part of the equipment. After dinner, the people will assemble in the large hall, where the exercises of the day will begin at 1:30 sharp.

Primary Election Law.

BUFFALO, Minn., Feby. 14, 1896.

To the Editor:—

The Last legislature placed on the statute books of this state what is commonly known as the Primary Election Law. It is entitled "An Act relating to primary elections" and it is Chapter 276, Laws of 1895, and found on Page 661 of the Laws of 1895. It is very probable that the political committeemen of the various parties and the people in general have not made themselves acquainted with this new statute; and the writer of this will undertake to explain its provisions, not claiming to be infallible in explaining the statute but hoping to be able to give at least a fairly correct interpretation and hoping to awaken a discussion that will bring this important law prominently before the people.

It was urged through the Legislature by its friends who claimed that it would tend to purify politics and afford the people better means than they heretofore have had to place in office the men they wanted or to advance the doctrines in which they believe. It was also urged and correctly urged that in ordinary times the people were governed through the caucus and that being conceded it cannot be denied that the caucus should be an orderly, legal, assemblage, amenable to, and regulated by law.

The law has no application to anything except the town and village caucus at which delegates are elected to county and city conventions. It does not undertake to regulate county or city conventions or elections, except that in relation to conventions it regulates the giving of proxies and filling of vacancies on delegations from the primaries.

The main objects of the law are:

1st. To prevent snap caucuses and so provide that all the voters in a precinct may know when and where the caucus is to be held.

2nd. To require the caucus to be held open a specified time so that ample opportunity is given for any person who has the right to vote to go in and vote and then go away about his affairs if he wishes.

3d. To prevent the voters of one party from packing the caucus of another party.

4th. To put the officers of the caucus under oath to perform their duties faithfully and justly and to provide penalties for the violation of any of its provisions.

The writer will not discuss this law from a legal stand point but will assume that all regular party organizations will act under its provisions and be guided by it, but it may here be noted that the law does not apply to a party polling less than five percent of the county. Also, in the writer's opinion, it no way interferes with the existing provision of law allowing the nomination of candidates by petition.

In the coming conventions the Republican County Committee will act under this law and it is believed that all other organizations (except those very weak) will do so.

The first step will be taken by the regular County Committees of each party. This will be a notice by that committee published in the papers twice, that on a certain day twenty days after the first publication a primary election will be held in the county to elect delegates to a county convention for a specified purpose.

The notice will give the apportionment as is usual but will fix the day and hour at which the primary will be held. The caucuses will be held at the same day and hour in all the towns and villages. The notice will state when the polls will open and when close not to be open less than one hour and somewhere between the hours of 2 P. M. and 9 P. M. Probably two (2) hours would be a time long enough to enable all desiring to participate a chance so to do.

This notice so published will advise all the people as to the time of their caucuses long in advance. No man could complain of lack of notice.

The second step is that six days before the time stated, the town committee of the various parties shall post in their election district three notices posted publicly announcing the same as the notice of the county committee and in addition fixing the place of holding the caucus.

It will be remembered that this town or village primary notice is posted by the town or village precinct committee and not by the members of the county committee in any town thus keeping that part of the party organization strictly in the hands of the people in each precinct.

In the third place the primary is called to order by the chairman or secretary of the town committee, the chairman having precedence, and in their absence by a voter. Then the voters elect a chairman, a clerk and two judges for the primary from the voters present and the law enjoins that the selection should be made so as to represent as far as possible the rival candidates if any.

It is also the law that the county committee may name these caucus officers This might save some confusion but in this county this work will be left by the republican organization in the hands of the voters themselves. The chairman has power to swear in the two judges and the clerk and the clerk power to swear in the chairman. A written oath is not necessary but a simple blank could be sent out by the county committee covering the oath and credentials and vote.

In the next place the voting for delegates begins. It is exclusively by ballot excepting that the primary officers are elected "viva voce".

The voter places on his ballot, which may be printed or written the names of his men, all that the precinct is allowed and deposits his ballot. If the precinct is allowed three delegates he votes for three persons and places three names on his ballot. He may then go away as he has no further duty or he may stay as he pleases. The judges shall receive the votes and make a record of the name of each voter. They also hear and determine challenges, having power to refuse a vote if the person does not belong to the party holding the caucus or unless he declares that he intends thereafter to act with the party holding the caucus.

There are other provisions in relation to challenges but the above is broad enough to cover that question.

A plurality elects, the principle being the same as is applied to the actual election itself. That is to say, in a town entiteled to four delegates the four delegates having the largest number of votes are elected even though some or all of these four have less than one-half.

This will happen when the vote is split up among a large number.

It may be observed that this rule applies to our elections of county officers, members of Congress and in fact all elected officers. It is applied of necessity or there would have to be a second ballot and a third and so on until the necessary number had a majority of all votes. This of course would be intolerable. The law is defective in not providing for a tie. In that case lots could be cast or the parties who are tied could be given one half a vote each in the county convention. No doubt this defect will be remedied.

After counting the votes the judges shall give to the delegates their credentials, which can be done as usual by handing to the chairman of the delegation, ordinarily the one who heads the list, the credentials, and the caucus is closed.

There are some other provisions of the law which may be noted.

It is provided that none of its provisions shall apply to village, township or school district caucuses assembled for purly local purposes.

It is also provided that in case a voter at a primary, places on a ballot more names for delegates that the precinct is entitled to, his vote is wholly void and shall be thrown out.

As to proxies it is provided that when a delegate fails to attend he may not give a proxy but the acting delegates fill the vacancy by appointing a person properly qualified from their own district.

In case no delegates attend from a town or village the county convention itself appoints a delegation from people of the proper town who may be present.

I will close here while I feel that more may be said and should be said in explaining the law. I would not have obtruded myself on the public except through the request of various members of the press and many citizens desiring that the law should be explained.

Its operation will soon be tested. Late in March a Republican State Convention will be held at Minneapolis. The Democrats and Populists will follow promptly. So that caucuses must be held, under this law, not later than about March 20th. The Minneapolis convention referred to will be held for the purpose of electing four delegates to the Republican National Convention. The county convention will select delegates to that convention and also, in all probability, delegates to the Republican 6th District Convention to select two delegates to the same National Convention. Very truly yours,
WM. E. CULKIN.

The people who go from the country as delegates from the convention at Minneapolis on the 24 h of March will probably find that they have no business there, that the slate made by the wire pullers will go through.—Buffalo Journal.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feby. 14, 1896.

The Quay-Platt-Reed combine put a new comedy on the political boards this week by announcing the candidacy of Senator Quay for the Republican Presidential nomination. It was expected to make a political sensation, but it didn't. Quay's candidacy, although followed by a qualified denial from him, may be accepted by the gullible republicans of Pennsylvania as a thing of life, just as many New York Republicans have accepted the candidacy of Gov. Morton, launched by the same combine, but, bless your soul, that doesn't make it so. There isn't the slightest doubt among politicians that this combine wants Reed nominated, nor that this alleged Quay boom is like the Morton boom only intended by the combine as another step toward Reed's nomination. In addition to that, this Quay boom is being used to let Senator Cameron, who has already been forced by Quay to announce that he would not be a candidate for re-election to the Senate, understand that the money he has put into his literary bureau, established to boom him as a republican silver candidate for the Presidential nomination, has all been wasted and that his political aspirations may not be pigeonholed for good and all. Quay wants to control the Pennsylvania delegation, just as Platt does that of New York. They will at the proper time throw then to Reed, unless it becomes apparent before that time that Reed can't be nominated. In that case they will throw them to the man they can make the most advantageous deal with. They are out to win. They would prefer doing it with Reed, but will not hesitate to throw him overboard if it becomes necessary to win with some other man.

The republican Senators are still very much in doubt about their future programme. They are trying to make some sort of a deal with the populists to get the House tariff bill through the Senate without amendment. They have not yet attempted to elect the Senate officers nominated by their caucus with the excertion of the Assistant Doorkeepel who was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Captain Bassett.

The papers covering the Waller case were this week sent to Congress by President Cleveland, in answer to a recent resolution asking for them. And if they do not make certain republicans who have been using this case to make political capital feel like fools they must be queerly constituted. Instead of having neglected Waller because he was a negro, as these republicans have so loudly asserted, the administration has, because he was an American citizen, succeeded in getting the French Government to release him from prison, although the papers sent to Congress prove beyond a doubt that he was guilty of the offense for which he was sentenced—treasonable correspondence concerning the movements of the French in Madagascar. The papers sent to congress also show that Waller's alleged valuable concessions from the government of Madagascar are not believed in by anybody but himself, and have nothing official upon which to stand. The French Government agrees to release Waller, as a courtesy to this government, merely stipulating that he shall make no claim for damages except through the French courts. Thus endeth the disagreeable chapter.

The Senate this week adopten a resolution directing the Secretary of Agriculture to resume the free distribution of seeds.

If Speaker Reed has counted upon the support of any silver republicans in his fight for the Presidential nomination he would better scratch them from his calculations. They know him now for their enemy. Not because of the vote by which the House refused to agree to the free coinage substitute for the House bond bill, which was passed by the Senate, because they knew all thi time that a large majority of the House was opposed to silver, and that Mr. Reed himself would vote against free coinage, as he had done before. It is for the unexpected knockdown blow which has been administered to silver by the action of the House committee on Territories, which this week voted against reporting a bill for the admission of Arizona to statehood, and which will do the same for New Mexico and Oklahoma, that the silver men are blaming Speaker Reed. It is no secret that the action of the committee was taken solely because it was known that Arizona would have sent two silver Senators, and it is regarded as certain that the same reason will cause the committee to take the same action on the bills for the admission of New Mexico and Oklahoma. The silver men charge that Speaker Reed selected the members of the committee with the special view of having them block the admission of these territories, and they will not fail to make use of that charge against him, particularly in the northwest.

The Senate passed a bill appropriating $100,000 for the preliminary surveys for the erection of a memorial bridge across the Potomac from Washington to Arlington

ASIA is the most populous quarter of the globe; it is reckoned to contain 500,000,000 of people.

AT a cent a mile it would cost $939,000 to make a trip to the sun, and at a speed of 40 miles an hour it would take 295 years to get there.

A CENSUS of the entire world is proposed for the year 1900. The United States had a population of 5,308,483 in the year 1800, and will not have far from 80,000,000 in 1900.

A FRENCH scientist says that girls who play on the piano suffer from a great many nervous maladies. But as a rule they do not suffer from half so many as those who hear them.

IT is said that no country in the world can rival Japan in the matter of hot springs. The springs that the Chinese made, however, in getting away from the Japanese were pretty hot stuff.

A CAT has been brought to life by the cathode rays, and Edison thinks he can cure hydrophobia with them. Who knows but the man with a weakness for liquor may be brought to bay with this new light?

COLD storage is a thoroughly proved success in northern Siberia. Remains of mammoths, which were frozen thousands of years ago, have been discovered, and the meat is as fresh as though of yesterday's slaughter.

A ST. PAUL jury has fixed the market price of kisses at $1.75 each, whereas in Massachusetts, it is understood, kisses are going begging at a premium for purchasers. Is the interstate commerce law operating to offset the law of supply and demand?

ARMENIA, which is now playing so important a part in the politics of the world, is an indefinite extent of country — its boundaries being variously estimated to contain all the way from 50,000 to 150,000 square miles. Part of it is in Asiatic Turkey and part in Russia and Persia.

JOHN B. ROBINSON, of South Africa, was a poor grocer in 1878. He and his wife begged their way to Kimberley, and he was lucky enough to find a diamond which he sold for $1,200. With that his fortune began. To-day his wealth is set down at $350,000,000. He is among the richest men, if not the richest, upon the globe.

THE Coreans are cutting off their queues from the king down to the peasant. The queue is the token of subjection and was imposed on the Chinese by their Tartar conquerors two centuries ago, and upon the Coreans when China obtained suzerainty there. The cutting off of this appendage means severance from China.

GEN. GRANT once made this prediction: "Though I have been trained as a soldier, and have participated in many battles, there never was a time when, in my opinion, some way could not have been found of preventing the drawing of the sword. I look forward to an epoch when a court recognized by all nations will settle international differences, instead of keeping large standing armies as they do in Europe."

THE income tax which has just been proposed in France will fall on everybody whose annual income is $500 or more. Between $500 and $1,000 the tax is to be 1 per cent.; between $1,000 and $2,000, 2 per cent.; between $2,000 and $3,000, 3 per cent.; between $3,000 and $5,000, 4 per cent.; more than $5,000, 5 per cent. Deductions are to be made from these rates varying with the number of children a man has. The more children a man has the less tax he will have to pay.

THE making of aluminum is one of the few industries showing steady growth. In 1883 the product was only about 83 pounds. The discovery of the electric process for extracting the metal revolutionized production, and last year the total output was 850,000 pounds. The great reduction in price has brought aluminum into general use, and in consequence the demand is large. Yet the metal has not proved as widely useful as anticipated. Its lightness gives it special value, but experience has shown that in a large variety of cases it cannot be substituted for iron and steel.

EVER since Jules Verne imagined such a craft, inventors have been trying to solve the problem of constructing a boat which will travel beneath the surface of the water. Now it is announced that a Frenchman has succeeded in building a practical submarine vessel which will be useful in time of war to explode torpedoes under hostile ships. It is claimed that in such a boat, traveling 45 feet below the surface, seasickness would be unknown. There may be a time coming when timid souls who refrain from going to sea through fear of sickness will be able to enjoy the pleasures of ocean travel.

A SUCCESSFUL test was made of the eophone, a device of Frank Della-Torre, of Baltimore, whose object is to locate sound at sea during fogs and so prevent collisions now unavoidable. An eophone was placed on the lighthouse tender Lilac, and in a dense fog a whistling buoy was picked up at a distance of a mile and its direction indicated correctly. Another test was made by blindfolding the observer and then chasing another vessel by the sound of its whistle, the vessel pursued doubling and twisting in every possible way. No difficulty whatever was found in following the vessel.

WEYLER'S POLICY.

Displays a Determination to Crush the Cubans.

The Spanish General Makes Public His Plan in Three Proclamations—Summary Punishment Promised to All Offenders.

Havana, Feb. 17.—Gen. Weyler issued three proclamations on Sunday. A synopsis of the first is as follows:

It warns all honest inhabitants of Cuba and those loyal to the Spanish cause, that they must conform to the laws; commands "all inhabitants of the district of Sancti Spiritus and the province of Puerto Principe and Santiago de Cuba to concentrate in places which are the headquarters of a division, a brigade, a column, or a troop, and to be provided with documentary proof of identity within eight days of the publication of this proclamation in the municipalities.

"To travel in the country in the radius covered by the columns in operation it is absolutely indispensable to have a pass from the mayor, military commandants, or chiefs of detachments. Any one lacking this will be detained and sent to headquarters of divisions or brigades and thence to Havana, at my disposition, by the first possible means. Even if a pass is exhibited which is suspected as not authentic or granted by authority to persons with known sympathies toward the rebellion, or who show favor thereto, rigorous measures will be taken upon those responsible.

"All owners of commercial establishments in the country districts will vacate them, and the chiefs of columns will take such measures as the success of their operations dictates regarding such places, which, while useless for the country's wealth, serve the enemy as hiding places in the woods and in the interior.

"All passes hitherto issued hereby become null and void."

The Second Proclamation.

The second proclamation is practically as follows:

Prisoners caught in action will be subjected to the most summary trial, without any other investigation, except that indispensable for the subjects of the trial. Spanish soldiers only are provided as judges in such trials. When the sentence is pronounced, if the sentence be deprivation of liberty, the culprit shall be brought to Havana with the papers in the case, so that the testimony can be referred to regarding the penalty and the sentence be carried into effect. Gen. Weyler reserves the right of promoting and sustaining all questions of competence with other jurisdictions, as also with military, and to determine inhibitions in all kinds of military processes in the territory of the island. He reserves likewise the faculty of assuming an inquiry into all cases when it is deemed convenient. The proclamation continues: "No sentence of death shall be carried into effect without the acknowledgement under my authority of the testimony of the judgment, which must be sent to me immediately, except when no means of communication exists or when it is a case of insult to superiors or of military sedition, in which case sentence will be carried out and the information furnished to me afterwards."

Third Proclamation.

A synopsis of the third proclamation is as follows:

"I make known that, taking advantage of the temporary insecurity of communication between the district capitals and the rest of the provinces, notices which convey uneasiness and alarm are invented and propagated, and some persons, more daring still, have taken advantage of this to draw the deluded and the ignorant to the rebel ranks. I am determined to have the laws obeyed and to make known by special means the dispositions ruling and frequently applied during such times as the present, through which the island is now passing, and to make clear how far certain points go in adapting them to the exigencies of war and in the use of the faculties conceded to me by No. 12, article 7 of the code of military justice, and by the law of public order of April 23, 1870. And I make known, order, and command that the following cases are subject to military law, amongst others specified by the law:

"Those who invent or propagate by any means notices or assertions favorable to the rebellion, whenever such notices facilitate the enemy's operations; those who destroy or damage railroad lines, telegraph, or telephone wires, or apparatus connected therewith, or those who interrupt communication by breaking down bridges or destroying highways; incendiaries in town or country, or those who cause damage as shown in Cap. 8 article 13, volume 2 of the penal code ruling in Cuba; those who sell, facilitate, convey, or deliver arms or ammunition to the enemy, or supply such by any other means, or those who keep such in their power or tolerate or deal in such through the customs and employes of customs who fail to confiscate such importations will be held responsible; those who being telegraphists divulge telegrams referring to the war, or who send them to persons who should not be cognizant of them: those who, through the press or otherwise, revile the prestige of Spain, its army, the volunteers, or firemen, or any other force that cooperates with the army; those who, by the same means, endeavor to extol the enemy; those who supply the enemy with horses, cattle or any other war resources, those who act as spies, and to these the utmost rigor of the law will be applied: those who serve as guides, unless surrendering at once and showing proof of compulsion and giving the troops evidence at once of loyalty; those who adulterate army food or conspire to alter the prices of provisions; those who by messenger, pigeons, fireworks, or other signals communicate news to the enemy.

"The offenses enumerated, when the law prescribes the death penalty or life imprisonment, will be dealt with most summarily."

Fall of Managua.

Havana, Feb. 18.—The town of Managua, four leagues from Havana, was again attacked by the insurgents and captured after a fight lasting 40 minutes. The Spanish regulars, fortifying themselves in the church, held out an hour longer. The Spanish volunteer garrison, however, went over to the insurgents at the beginning of the attack and to a man joined the invaders, with all the arms and ammunition at their disposal. The Cuban force was led by Col. Castillo, of Gomez's advance, who, after taking the church by storm, disarmed and then paroled its defenders. Castillo was slightly wounded during the fight.

Other Engagements.

Havana, Feb. 18.—Col. Seguera reports from San Felipe that the force under his command found the insurgents under Maceo at noon Monday at San Antonio de las Vegas, in the province of Havana. The troops attacked the rebels, who, after a slight resistance, retreated to the Culebra hills. The troops followed them and gained upon them so rapidly that the rebels were compelled to come to a stand. They took up a good position that enabled them to withstand the fire of the artillery that was directed against them. They also managed to avoid the rifle fire of the troops. In the first engagement the insurgents lost 12 killed.

The rebel leaders, Miro, Collazo and Castillo, were with Maceo. Col. Seguera makes particular mention in his report of the second squadron of cavalry, which made a brilliant charge against the enemy. He adds that while passing the forces of Maceo on February 14, near Vapor, his troops fired on the insurgents, killing five and wounding 12. Gen. Echegue reports that a body of rebels attacked a train on which his brigade was traveling. The scene of the attack was near Molina, which is between Palenkue and Melina. The train was not stopped. The rebels evidently mistook it or a train conveying merchandise and intended to loot it. When they discovered their error, they fled, not being in force strong enough to cope with the brigade.

It is now reported that Maceo has succeeded in crossing the military line drawn across the island to prevent his escape from the province of Pinar del Rio; that he has passed between Neptuno and Waterloo, on the south coast, and has entered the province of Havana. The widespread and destructive activity of the insurgents in Matanzas and Havana provinces continues unabated.

TRADE RETARDED.

Business Held Back by Weather, Congressional Inaction and Close Money.

New York, Feb. 15.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"The weather still hinders business, also continued closeness of money and prolonged inaction of congress; but confidence increases. There is a little more demand for some manufactured products. Exports improve with yielding prices of staples, and for the week from New York exceed last year's 30 per cent., while imports have increased 15 per cent. Pig iron at the east and at Chicago has not advanced. Southern competition continues at prices so low that several Alabama furnaces have stopped, but Bessemer is a shade lower at Pittsburgh. The demand for plates, sheets and wire nails continues fairly good, and there are more orders for railroad cars and bar iron at Chicago, but no further sales of rails appeared.

"The demand for boots and shoes is still disappointing. Some makers get good orders for women's light shoes, but others scarcely any, and Boston shipments thus far are 21 per cent. less than last year. Textile work shows little change, though the cut in print cloths and general concessions in brown and bleached staples averaging for the whole list quite 6 per cent. since January 1, induced more buying, which the known accumulation of goods ahead of demand has hindered. Many mills are reporting great profits last year in cotton, but the prospect of a larger crop this year does not promise repetition of such gains.

"Failures for the first week of February were $4,079,680, against $2,900,890 last year. Manufacturing were $2,372,253, against $729,348 last year, and $1,594,672 in 1894, and trading were $1,626,427, against $1,934,894 last year, and $2,485,585 in 1894. Failures for the week have been 321 in the United States, against 279 last year, and 67 in Canada, against 51 last year."

Bradstreet's says:

"The general business situation throughout the country does not meet anticipations, and except at a few cities—Baltimore and Pittsburgh, in the east, Chicago, St. Louis and Omaha, in the west, Galveston, Chattanooga and Atlanta, in the south—remains dull for the season, in most instances disappointingly so. Improvement in demand and prices is confined to hides, leather and boots and shoes, which are conspicuous in the short list of staples for which prices are higher. Features of the situation are those resulting from unfavorable weather east and in the central west, reaction in prices of iron and steel, further complaints by woolen manufactures, an outlook for more idle woolen machinery, a smaller total of bank clearings, continued stiffness, maintenance of high rates for loans notwithstanding the favorable inferences drawn from the heavy oversubscription to the government bond issue and restricted production of pig iron."

ASK CONGRESS FOR HELP.

Representatives of Live Stock Exchanges Go to Washington.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—William Thompson, president, and C. W. Baker, secretary of the National live stock exchange, L. B. Doud and Samuel W. Allerton left Saturday night for Washington to lay before the senate and house matters affecting the live stock business of the country. The Chicago men will be joined by representatives from exchanges throughout the country. The delegates will ask congress to repeal the national law governing the manufacture of oleomargarine and its sale; to enact regulations that will remove all embargoes placed by foreign powers on American meat products; to enact measures that will induce foreign powers to admit live stock from America into all portions of their countries under reasonable quarantine regulations; to place the consular service under civil service rules, and that commercial bodies with interests at certain points be permitted to name some one of the consuls or attaches at such port. They will also ask Secretary Morton to take some action on the quarantining of Texas, and will suggest the line marked out last year.

RATE IS ALL RIGHT.

National Grand Army Encampment Will Be Held in St. Paul.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 18. — Irvin Robbins, adjutant to Commander-in-Chief Walker, of the Grand Army of the Republic, announces that it is practically settled that the national encampment will be held in St. Paul, in accordance with the original plan. Two of the railroads leading from Chicago to St. Paul, he says, have made favorable rates and satisfactory extension of time, and it is believed they will be able to carry the veterans even if other roads do not make concessions. The meeting of the council of administration that was to have been held next week for the purpose of selecting a new city has been abandoned.

Convicted of Manslaughter.

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 17.—Daniel Brown and John J. Swan, charged with causing the death of Leon Pisa, a patient at the state insane hospital, at Farnhurst, while they were attendants, were found guilty of manslaughter. The penalty is $400 to $4,000 fine and one to five years in prison. Michael J. Lynch, who was indicted with Brown and Swan, was acquitted, but he is also charged with assault and battery.

Victims of the Turk.

London, Feb. 18.—Another blue book on Armenia has been published, the dispatches covering the period between September 6, 1895, and February 11, 1896. It contains a table, prepared by a committee of delegates from the embassies of the six powers, showing that the total number of persons massacred, concerning whose fate accurate information has been obtained, is 25,000.

The Reserve.

Washington, Feb 18.—The treasury gold reserve at the close of business Monday stood at $86,203,499. The withdrawals for the day amounted to $1,456,000. So far $71,430,649 in gold, on account of bond purchases, has been paid in, and since January 6 about $29,000,000 in gold has been drawn out.

She Owned the Picayune.

New Orleans, Feb. 17.—Mrs. Eliza J. Nicholson, proprietress of the Picayune, is dead. She was suffering from the grip when her husband died a week ago, and the sad event so shattered her system that the disease developed into congestion of the lungs.

Killed by Toadstools.

Anniston, Ala., Feb. 15.—Three children of William Littlejohn, living some distance north of this place, while playing in the woods found and ate several toadstools and soon were taken ill. Doctors were called, but in vain, for all three were dead in three hours.

DEATH AND RUIN.

A Disastrous Fire Visits Troy, N. Y.—Panic in Burning Factory.

Troy, N. Y., Feb. 18.—Three women jumped from the sixth story of the McCarthy building on Franklin square to their death shortly after five o'clock Monday night. Three hundred others fought with furious flames, and many were frightfully burned and otherwise injured in the frantic efforts to gain places of safety. It is feared the list of dead may count as high as 20 when the full truth is known. It is believed many were overcome by the heat and smoke and were consumed by the flames.

Th total loss by the fire is from $250,000 to $300,000, with about $100,000 insurance. At least 500 people are thrown out of employment. The firemen worked with the thermometer down below zero, and suffered very much.

Following is the list of unfortunates obtainable up to 11 o'clock:

DEAD—Mrs. Horbort, Mrs. Kane and Mrs. Foley.

MISSING—Mamie Danks, Kitty O'Connor, Miss Kane and Miss Foley.

INJURED—Miss Mamie Day, injured and bruised; Miss Lillie Kreiger, badly bruised and burned; Miss Mamie Rourke, driven insane by shock; Miss Mamie Downs, almost suffocated; Miss Annette Harrington, face and hands burned; Miss Lillie Outhout, West Troy, badly burned; Miss Clementine Lloyd; Miss Gertrude Lloyd: Miss Johnson, last three of Ladensburg, badly injured and burned; James Ross, crushed by falling walls, leg broken and seriously injured; Officer Burke, crushed by falling walls, condition serious; Officer Guy, badly bruised; Officer Watson, scalp wound and bruised; Alfred Casey, fireman, Osgood company, spine injured; John Crinsby, fireman, Osgood company, knee hurt; John Boland, fireman, Eddy company, scalp wound and leg broken.

From the outside of the high building the first notice of impending disaster was the sight of a body of girls as they rushed out upon the fire escapes from the windows. The fifth and sixth stories of the building were occupied by the collar factory of Vanzant & Jacobs and J. Stetthermer & Co.'s shirt-waist factory. Flames burst through the window almost instantly and the mass of frenzied humanity, finding the egresses too small for instant escape, began climbing over the sides of the fire escapes, and bundles of clothing filled with writhing humanity dropped at the feet of horrified passers-by. Within 20 minutes after the fire started there were three dead women laid upon the floor of an adjoining store and at least a dozen burned and maimed girls and women taken to the hospital or to their homes.

Superintendent Willard, of the police force, says that he saw a number of girls at windows who never came out, but fell back into the flames. One fireman who was working from the rear saw three girls with their arms wound tightly about each other turn and jump back into the flames. Some of the women who escaped tell of stumbling over prostrate bodies and are positive that a score of girls perished. The girls who did escape live in various suburban places and hurried away, so that until the roll is called this morning the exact number of missing will not be known.

The fire which ended so disastrously, started in the fifth story, in the part occupied by Stetheimer & Co. About 5:25 o'clock in the afternoon a little boy attempted to light the gas in what is known as the cutting department. He climbed on the cutting table and lighted the gas. Then he threw the match, which was still burning, to the floor, and it ignited a pile of scrap cambric. In an instant there was a crackling of fierce and uncontrollable flames, and the room was filled with smoke.

PARDONED.

President Dole Lenient Towards Queen Liliuokalani.

San Francisco, Feb. 17. — Advices from Honolulu, dated February 8, are as follows: Mrs Liliuokalani Dominis, ex-queen of Hawaii, has been granted an almost unconditional pardon for her participation in the uprising of January, 1895. The document reads as follows:

"Executive Mansion, Honolulu, Feb. 7, 1896.—Mrs. Liliuokalani Dominis, madame: With the advice of the cabinet, I take pleasure in modifying the restriction placed upon your freedom at the time of your release from confinement. Until further notice, only the observance on your part of the following conditions will be required by the government: Not to leave the island of Oahu without the consent of the president or a member of the cabinet. I desire to express my appreciation of the good faith with which you have observed the requirements of a former letter. (Signed) "SANFORD B. DOLE."

It was intended that the pardon should be granted on January 17, the anniversary of the overthrow of the monarchy, but, fearing that its receipt might prove distasteful to the ex-queen on such a date, President Dole's return was awaited. The president reached Honolulu January 4, after a pleasant tour of the islands, during the course of which he was the recipient of many flattering testimonials.

Demand Is All Defaulted Bonds.

Washington, Feb. 18. — J. Pierpont Morgan has made a special demand for all defaulted bonds of the recent issue under his blanket bid of 110.6877. Secretary Carlisle has taken the demand under advisement, but will not be able to render a decision until the treasury is advised of the number of bonds in default. It is known, however, officially, that William Graves and associates of New York have defaulted to the extent of $4,500,000. Their bid was 115.3391. It is not believed that any considerable number of other bond bidders have defaulted.

Mrs. Lease in the Pulpit.

Wichita, Kan., Feb. 17.—Rev. Mary E. Lease began her ministerial career in this city Sunday night, receiving a flattering reception. The Central Church of Christ, one of the largest in the city, was crowded to the limit of its capacity and many thousands were turned away. It had been expected that Mrs. Lease would deal largely in sensationalism, but her theme and its exposition were far removed from anything of that nature. It is predicted that her fame as a pulpit orator will far exceed what she has achieved as a reformer.

Cigarettes Cause Insanity.

Ottumwa, Ia., Feb. 18.—The coroner's jury at Centerville found that the double murder committed by George Jones and his suicide afterward were caused by insanity, the result of smoking cigarettes. Jones signed the petition to the legislature to pass the anti-cigarette manufacturing bill the day of the tragedy.

Bank Cashier Accused.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

IN THE SNOW.

Deep in snow the country road
Winds across the snowy hill,
All the fields with drifts are white,
And the flakes are falling still.
O'er the pine-tree grim and old,
Like a beggar in the cold,
Over ragged oaks that stand
Gaunt and gray on every hand,
Over elm-trees bare and brown,
Still the snowflakes flutter down.
In the woods the little brooklet
Trembles as the chill winds blow,
And the white birch shakes and shivers
In the snow.

Pale and pure against the sky
Faintly gleams the village spire,
Steadfast still through noonday's sun,
Evening mist, or morning fire;
And the snowflakes slowly fall
In their whiteness over all,
Till the slender bending stems
Of the grasses gleam like gems,
And a crystal fret-work fine
Covers every tangled vine.
Safely, sweetly, rest the dreamers
In the quiet town below,
In the silent town, safe folded
In the snow.

Restlessly the eager wind
Echoes like a throbbing lute,
Till the willows in the hollow
Quiver and are mute.
Under rifted clouds of gray,
With her troubles put away,
Now the old world lieth white
In the patient hush of night,
Not a dream of sorrow thrills
Through the silence of her hills.
God has touched her cloudy valleys,
Hushed her countless tones of woe,
And with sweet forgiveness folds her
In the snow.

PREBLE'S FAKE BEAR HUNT.

Got Up as a Joke on Greenhorn Hunter Gillson.

It Yielded Unexpected Fun to Such an Extent That Dave Ramsy Had to Go Out Into the Open Country to Laugh.

For more than five years not a bear nor a sign of a bear had been seen in the vicinity of Rose Lake, Pa., and consequently the killing of a big one near there one day made a great surprise in that corner of the hemlock belt. There were also circumstances connected with the killing of the bear that made it still more notable.

Doc Preble lives at Rose Lake. He is a 200-pounder, good-natured, and especially fond of a practical joke. Some weeks ago a party of sportsmen came to Rose Lake to spend a few days after partridge and other small game, which is abundant thereabouts. Among them was a slim young man from Pittsburgh, named Gillson. Young Gillson was entirely unsophisticated as a hunter, and was probably the greenest individual about backwoods things ever seen in that locality. He soon became game for mischievous natives who filled him full of hair-raising bear and wildcat stories and other tales of life in the woods thereabouts. Gillson accepted everything he heard in good faith, and became fired with a desire to kill a bear. Having been told that he was liable at any moment to come face to face with a bear or a catamount, Gillson followed the advice of Doc Preble, and every time he went into the woods he strapped a hunting ax at his side, carried a big knife, and kept one barrel of his gun heavily charged with buckshot. The rest of the hunting party themselves enjoyed the fun the natives were having with Gillson, and did not interfere.

Soon after there was a fall of snow in that locality, and Doc Preble conceived the idea of getting up a bear hunt for young Gillson's benefit. Putting on his rubber boots he made tracks in the new snow from one big laurel patch to another one a mile up the mountain and from that one to a third one nearly two miles away, on the edge of Billet's hollow. There he struck the old bark road and returned home by it. Toward evening he went to Barnes' boarding house, where the hunters were stopping, and remarked in a nonchalant way that from the tracks he had seen in the snow up along Lye's mountain that afternoon the biggest bear that ever had wintered in that district had come in and coiled himself up in some laurel patch over that way.

"It wouldn't be much trouble to rout him out, I guess," said Doc, "if anyone cared to go out and risk it."

Gillson was all excitement at once, and declared that he would go, for one. The rest of the party, suspecting there was a joke in it, said he might go if he wanted to, but that they hadn't come out there to be clawed and chawed and mussed up by bears, and would stay at home. So Doc Preble told Gillson that he would go with him, and Dave Ramsey, Barnes' boss chopper, and an old bear hunter, said he would go, too, Doc having confided the secret of the bear tracks to him.

The three started out early the next morning, Gillson with both barrels of his gun loaded with buckshot, and his ax and big knife ready at his hand. Preble and Ramsy each carried double-bitted chopping axes and a rifle, and revolvers in their belts.

"We'll find him a tough customer," said Doc Preble to Gillson. "His footprint measures nearly 14 inches, and the biggest bear I ever heard of around here before made a track only eight inches long. There's liable to be some blood spilt before night, and it won't all be bear's blood, either."

Gillson was inclined to weaken when he saw the tracks in the snow, and asked Preble why they couldn't trap the bear first and then kill him, but Preble and Ramsy laughed at him, and told him they didn't bag their bears in that way. So the unsophisticated hunter braced up and went on.

"I had laid out to have a heap of fun that day," said Doc Preble, telling about it afterward, "according to the programme I had made. This was to tramp Gillson up and down those hills and among the laurels for four or five miles, trailing the alleged bear, and all the time loading him with the danger there was in the rush of a ferocious bear from a laurel patch to anyone who might stand in his way; then for Ramsy, when we came to the laurel patch where we had agreed that the bear had stopped, to go into the swamp and rout him up making a tremendous hubbub, and howling and snorting and yelling, as if the bear was worked up to the wildest pitch of fury over being disturbed, and was going out of that swamp with a rush to carry trouble to the first one he came to. Gillson having just been posted at a point on the edge of the patch and assured that the bear would certainly come out there, so he could shoot it; and then to see Gillson break for the nearest tree and get into it at the first sound of the disturbance in the laurels.

"Everything worked first-rate. When we got to the last laurel patch I was puffing and blowing like a tired horse, and was about as near bushed as anyone could be, but I thought of the fun I was having, and the more I was going to have, and said nothing, but just went off to one side and shook my sides.

"'He's in here sure, and if there ain't breakers ahead, I can't read bear signs,' said Dave Ramsy.

"I unbuckled my revolvers and laid 'em on the snow, dropped my ax and stood my gun against a tree. I took Gillson over to one end of the patch and stood him there.

"'When the bear comes pitching out,' I said, as if it was a foregone conclusion that the bear was coming out right there and nowhere else, 'don't fire until you see the whites of his eyes. He'll come like a steam engine, and very likely run you down and trample all over you and claw you some the first time, but that's part of the hunt. I've known some folks to make a break for the nearest tree and shin up it when they saw the bear making his rush, but that spoils a man for being a bear hunter. Remember,' I says, 'and don't shoot until you can see the whites of his eyes, and when he's trampling and clawing and chewing you, then get in your little work with your ax and your knife. Understand?'

"Gillson kind o' stuttered out that he understood, and the sweat poured out of him so, and he looked so much as if he wished he was home, that I felt sorry for him, but I went off into a thicket and rolled in the snow for five minutes and stuffed my hat in my mouth to keep from hollering right out, and then went back to wait for Dave to go in and stir up the bear. I stood right where I could see Gillson and a maple tree that stood not more than 20 feet to one side of him.

"'I'll have to burst when he throws his gun and goes fer that tree!' I says. 'And if he is too scared to climb it, I know I shall die!'

"Dave went into the patch to rout up the bear.

"'Shake the laurels up lively,' I says to him, 'and holler and howl like thunder!'

"I guess Dave had been in the swamp three minutes or more before the disturbance began. When the laurels began to snap and crack and shake, I looked up at Gillson. He stood with his feet braced and his teeth clinched, and his gun ready. I hadn't any idea that Dave could make such a commotion among such a stubborn growth as laurels, and when the growling and snarling tuned up I just laid back and wondered. Gillson stood to his post like a soldier.

"'Ain't that darn fool going to cut and run after all?' says I.

"Just then the laurels shook and snapped as if a cyclone was working among them. There came from the midst of the disturbance such a combination of yells and howls and snorts and growls that I'd taken fright myself and run if I hadn't known that is was only Dave. And Gillson stood still and waited. Then I heard a shot in the swamp, and another yell, followed by a startling creaking and swaying of the laurels, the line of that commotion leading straight toward me.

"'Gillson,' I hollered, 'he's a terror!'

"I don't know what Gillson replied, for the next second out of that laurel patch, not 20 feet from me, crashed a bear so big, and with such fury in his eyes, that it's a wonder I didn't drop in my tracks. I didn't have time to think. The bear was coming head-on for me, with his jaws snapping like a thrashing machine. I turned and I saw the maple tree that I had in my mind reserved for Gillson and my fun. I flew for it. I don't know how many feet I covered at a jump, but, although I knew the bear wasn't many jumps behind me, I had time to think:

"Lord! If Gillson goes for that tree now he'll head me off, and I'm a goner!"

"For fear he would, I hollered to him in my desperation:

"'There's a tree just below you, yonder! Cut for that one!'

"But he didn't. He started for the maple. I put on more steam and got there first. I grabbed the tree, I remember bearing two shots. The next I remember was that I was sitting in the snow, with my arms and legs clasping the trunk of the maple tree. That was as far as I had climbed. I looked around. There stood Gillson, a little pale, but with a grin on his face that made me feel sheepish. Near by lay the bear with the top of his head half blown off. Gillson had put both of his buckshot charges into it, with the gun almost against it. Sitting on a log a few feet to the right, was Dave. What clothes he had on him were hanging from him in tatters, and his face and hands were streaked with blood.

"'Funny, ain't it, Doc?' says he. 'It's so funny that I've got to git in the open country where I can find room to laugh!'

"With that Dave got up and limped away home, and he hasn't spoken to me since.

"'The bear broke out in the wrong place, didn't he, Doc?' says Gillson. 'But it was deuced clever in you to run him over here so I could get a shot at him.'

"I didn't say a word, but got up and helped Gillson drag the dear bear home, only a matter of five miles, and a prouder man never walked than was that little greenhorn hunter."

It is supposed the bear was one that had been driven by hunters from the Sinnemahoning country, the chase being so long that they had given it up, and that it had come into the laurel patch before the snow, unknown to anybody, and settled there for the winter. When Dave Ramsy went into the laurels to make the mock disturbance with a bear to carry out Doc Preble's joke, he stumbled unexpectedly upon this ugly customer, and found himself in a rough-and-tumble wrestle with him before he knew it. The bear weighed 375 pounds.—N. Y. Sun.

—Red pepper seems to be nature's stimulant for the stomach in all hot countries. It is universally diffused and used by the natives of regions as widely separated as Mexico and India. In Mexico the natives will frequently be seen eating pepper pods with bread; in India the red pepper is pounded with a pestle and used as an ingredient of many dishes.

—The word meander comes from the river of the same name, whose course was so devious that it furnished nearly every modern language with a new word.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS.

Mankato Mysteries.

Two strange disappearances have occurred at Mankato. One of these was that of Emma Bucha, who had been employed by Landlord Himmelman, as cook at the City Hotel for a considerable length of time. She had been observed to act a little peculiarly, but it was not until recently that it was feared that any harm had come to her.

The peculiar feature of the case is that Miss Bucha is known to have had money in the banks, to the amount of $400. This sum was not all that she had saved from her earnings, for she had also sent a considerable sum of money to her parents in Glencoe. She held a note for this. The police have done some investigating, but so far without finding a trace of her. It is feared by those who have been acquainted with the girl that in some way she has become demented.

Willian Riarden has now been absent for nearly a week, and fears are entertained for his safety. It was discovered recently that after he left home the only article that could not be found was his razor, and it was supposed that he had taken it with him with suicidal intent. Riarden some time ago mortgaged a team and some farming implements. These goods have since been attached for a debt, and it now appears that they were the property of his wife, who has taken steps to replevin them.

Counterfeited the Brand.

For a year or more certain Canadian distillers have mistrusted that their special brand of whiskey, labels and bottles have been counterfeited in Minneapolis. Recently officers thoroughly searched the establishment of Jacoby & Mikolas, known as the New Market Wine Company, Second avenue north, between Fifth and Sixth streets. They had good reasons for the procedure, as the were armed with a writ of replevin taken out by Carpenter. However, they took possession of 100 or more bottles of liquor bearing the Canadian revenue stamps and copyrighted labels of the Canadian concern. The lithographing stone was found at the Monasch Lithographing Company's establishment, 16-20 Fourth street north, by Carpenter, Deputy Sheriff John Wall and Detective Doyle, of the local police department. The stone was taken on a writ of replevin, and will be examined by members of the grand jury during their investigation of the case.

The Mille Lacs Matter.

The Mille Lacs lake settlers have come to the conclusion that further absolute dependence upon the congressional and senatorial delegations from Minnesota is almost fruitless, and they will engage a St. Cloud lawyer to go to Washington and urge upon the department of the interior the justice and desirability of opening up the lands included within the old reservation settlement. Under the present conditions a man may locate on land on the reservation, but he cannot obtain any title to the land, for the reason that all applications for land in this region are rejected by the local land officers, acting, of course, under instructions from the general land office. The presence of the Indians on the land is a constant source of menace to the settlers, who have gone into the vicinity of the lake and make improvements on their real estate holdings.

Immigration.

The imigration convention held at Princeton was a grand success. It convened at the opera house, and organized by electing H. R. Mallette president and M. S. Rutherford, secretary. The delegation from St. Paul and Minneapolis were J. J. Hill, E. V. Smalley, C. W. Horr; I. G. Bernard, of Grand Rapids; E. E. Webster, of New York; Moses Folsom, P. B. Groat and Samuel Hill, with his private car. The opera house was crowded, there being over 600 people present and the proceedings were attended with great enthusiasm.

Inheritances Galore.

Inheritances seen to be falling around New Paynesville indiscriminately. R. P. Gilbert, a rich money lender, and Frank Brown, a well-to-do farmsr, returned only a few days ago from the East, where they went to settle an estate that had been left to them, and now word comes that A. F. Kluge and Mrs. Hugh Burr, have fallen joint heir to a fortune of $150,000. Mrs. Burr is the wife of a poor farmer, with a large family, and Kluge was a groceryman before these hard times came on, but is now bookkeeper for a firm in Sauk Center.

News in Brief.

Dr. Floyd Davis, of Des Moines, Io., has been employed to analyze the water at Duluth.

Fire damaged the stock of Charles Wright & Co., on the first floor of the Pioneer Press building, St. Paul.

John P. Grogan was killed while walking on the railroad tracks in St. Paul, near Hamm's brewery.

Edward Scherm died at Kasson from injuries received by being caught between the bumpers of a freight train.

Andrew Wickland, a Minneapolis carpenter, committed suicide by hanging himself with a piece of fence wire.

Fire destroyed J. A. Shea's merchandise store, Smith & Crawford's meat market, Severson's restaurant, Tom Anderson's saloon and outbuildings attached, at Glyndon. The fire started in the meat market.

President Hill, of the Great Northern road, was before the land office at Crookston to prove up on a timber culture claim made by him in Kittson county 13 years ago.

Request for a divorce was filed in the district court at Winona, by Mrs. Anna Wahl, wife of Dr. H. S. Wahl, who eloped with Mary Bracklow 10 days ago. The charges are adultery with Mrs. Bracklow since Jan. 27 at Chinago and elsewhere. Mrs. Wahl also asks for the custody of the child, Herbert, and that the doctor provide support for her and her child. She says the doctor took $5.000 with him and his property there is worth about $2,000.

Joe Zoullard and Wm. Verrill, two young fellows of Duluth who were arrested a fortnight ago for the murder of an old Frenchmen named De Mars, confessed that they shot him while he was at work in the woods. They wanted his money, which they secured. It has been found. They told their story with fiendish glee.

W. E. Lee's resignation as superintendent of the state reformatory at St. Cloud has thrown upon the board of managers an important vacancy to fill.

The Lakeside pumping station of the Duluth Gas and Water company was scorched by fire.

WATER SNAKE FIGHTS EEL.

Terrific Combat Which Finally Ended in the Eel's Escape.

"Did you ever know that there is a deadly antipathy between a common water snake and an eel?" asked the fisherman, according to the Indianapolis Sentinel. "Well, I never knew it until an experience I had in witnessing a fight between the two. Personally, I have the greatest dread of eels. I'm more afraid of them than I am of a snake, and you can imagine my chagrin when I happened to hook one on one of my fishing expeditions. I was afraid to touch it, and all I could do was to let it dangle in the air. I could not get it off my hook, and I was meditating what to do, when altogether unnoticed I allowed the slimy object to drop into the water. In a moment I saw a big water snake make a dive for it. At the first lunge it caught the neck of the eel squarely between his teeth, and I could see it sink its ugly-looking fangs into the eel's flesh. I waited anxiously to see the developments. With its grim hold still on the eel's neck the snake, quick as it takes to tell it, wrapped its sinuous body around its antagonist's neck in an effort to squeeze it to death. The body of the eel was too sleek, however, and the snake's coils, despite all it could do, would slip down into the water. Time and time again it tried to squeeze the life out of its antagonist, never for an instant releasing its hold on the eel's neck, but the body of the latter was too sleek for it and every time it would slip down. Finally the hook broke, and the eel made good its escape."

ONE WELL-MORTGAGED COW.

A Tale Illustrating the Guileless Simplicity of an Agriculturist.

"There are tricks in all trades but ours," remarked the carpenter, "and we sometimes drive screws with a hammer." A few days ago, not more than 1,000 miles from Lake county, says the Vermillion (N. D.) Freeman, a collector called on a farmer for the payment of a note secured by chattel mortgage. The farmer was obdurate and gave no satisfaction that he would ever pay the note. Finally the collector said: "Well, I'll have to take the 11 cows named in the mortgage." "Oh, no; you haven't got a mortgage on 11 cows on this farm." "Why, yes, I have." And the collector pulled out a copy of the mortgage and read as follows: "One red and white cow, one cow spotted red and white, one red cow with white spots, one cow with white spot in forehead, one red cow with two white hind feet, one white cow with red spots on side, one white and red cow, one red cow with two white fore feet, one white cow with red spot on shoulders, one red cow with white spot on hips, one white cow spotted with red. Now, how do you like that?" continued the collector. "Oh, that's all right; I see you've got 11 mortgages on my old red and white cow; there she is down in the pasture; the boys will go down and help you catch her."

A GREAT INVENTION.

He Thought It Got Smoke Out of Whisky.

Pat's employer is fond of things of an oriental nature. His library is fitted up with Turkish divans and rugs, the walls are decorated with all sorts of curious weapons of the east, and in every way the room suggests the lounging place of an oriental potentate. The latest acquisition to this interesting room is a nargnileh, which the proprietor smokes with evident enjoyment on frequent occasions.

Pat recently found it necessary to enter the room on some business connected with the fireplace, and for the first time in his life his vision took in the graceful glass jar half filled with water, and the long, slender tubing upon which his employer was contentedly puffing.

Pat stopped short on his way across the room, and gazed as if awe-stricken by the sight.

"What's the matter, Pat?" asked his master, with an amused smile.

"Nothin', sor," replied the Celt. "Oi wuz only sorphrized a bit at seein' thot new pipe yez hov."

"What is there surprising about it?" he was asked.

"Ut's a great invention, sor," returned Pat, with a shake of his head. "I knew Scotch whishky had shmoke in ut, but Oi didn't know yez could git ut out."—Harper's Magazine.

A MEXICAN CEMETERY.

Where Graves Are Rented at the Rate of One Dollar Per Month.

A correspondent describes the queer cemetery of the Mexican village of Guanajuato. There is hardly room in Guanajuato for the living, so it behooves her people to exercise rigid economy in the disposition of her dead. The burial place is on the top of a steep hill, which overlooks the city, and consists of an area inclosed by what appears from the outside to be a high wall, but which discovers itself from within to be a receptacle for bodies, which are placed in tiers, much as the confines of the native valleys compel them to live. Each compartment in the wall is large enough to admit one coffin, and is rented for one dollar per month. The poor people are buried in the ground without the formality of a coffin, though one is usually rented, in which the body is conveyed to the grave. As there are not graves enough to go around, whenever a new one is needed a previous tenant must be disturbed, and this likewise happens when a tenant's rent is not promptly paid in advance. The body is then removed from its place in the mausoleum, or exhumed, as the case may be, and the bones are thrown into the basement below.

Decision in Favor of the De Long Hook and Eye.

Judge Acheson, in the United States Circuit Court at Pittsburgh, has just rendered, in the case of Richardson & De Long Brothers vs. Campbell & Smith, an important decision of great interest, sustaining letters patent owned by Richardson & De Long Brothers, which were granted to Frank E. De Long for a humped hook and eye, and enjoining the defendants from selling the "Golden Spring" hooks and eyes.

The hooks dealt in by the defendants were manufactured by the Golden Spring Hook and Eye Company, of Springfield, Mass. In these hooks the positions of the straight and curved portions of the De Long loop were reversed. The Court held that this did not void infringement, and directed a decree to be entered for the plaintiffs.

The case, which was a test one of great importance, was contested at great length, and has been pending for almost two years.

Messrs. Richardson & De Long Brothers were represented by Messrs. Strawbridge & Taylor, Bradbury Bedell, and John G. Johnson, of Philadelphia, and Frederick P. Fish, of Boston, and the defendants by Messrs. Allan Webster and William L. Pierce.—N. Y. Times, February 3, 1896.

AMERICA'S GREATEST SEED GROWERS.

Thirty years ago when the Salzers were conducting in a small but profitable way, a market garden and green house business in La Crosse, Wis., they little dreamed that within a third of a century they would be the leaders in the seed-growing and seed-selling industry of America. The secret of this phenomenal success was quality, liberality, push. Nothing in the world advertises itself quicker and better, and more lasting than quality and to the superior merit of Salzer's northern grown seeds; to their unusual life and vigor and to their absolute surety of growth, in conjunction with their great producing qualities, and this coupled with the great liberality of the firm in the way of rare and many extras to each order and push back of all, has placed the firm in the van and entitles them to the proud distinction of America's greatest seed growers! The production of rare vegetable sorts and new farm seeds has long been a great specialty with this company, owning and operating many thousands of acres of land. Their great eight hundred acre trial farm in South Dakota was visited by thousands interested in higher farming, and all rail roads gave half-fare rate within the state to any wishing to see the farm. The Salzers pay great attention to the new grasses, clovers and fodder plants, and their catalogue contains the largest list of rare farm seeds found in America.

A strong point of the John A. Salzer Seed Co. is that they keep large stocks of everything in the seed line on hand, so that a customer ordering of them is always sure of getting what he orders.

A slight idea of the magnitude of this firm's business can be gathered that they issue probably the largest number of catalogues of any American firm; that they use over $60,000 postage a year, employ in the packing and distributing of their seeds upwards of six hundred hands and require for their distributing warehouse over ten acres of floor room.

A five cent postage stamp sent to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., will bring you their great catalogue.

"The Wooden Hen."

The illustration shown herewith is small in size, but really large when we consider that the "Wooden Hen" is no larger than a live hen, yet has double the capacity. It weighs only 15 pounds, has a capacity of 28 eggs, and while not a toy, is just as amusing, besides being instructive as well.

We suggest that every reader of this write Mr. Geo. H. Stahl, Quincy, Ills., and ask for a copy of his handsome little booklet "K," describing the "Wooden Hen;" also his large catalogue of the Model Excelsior Incubator. All sent free. Mention this paper.

—Wednesday morning at about 8 o'clock the thermometer on Railroad Ave., hanging in the sun, registered 14 deg. below zero

—We regret our inability to attend the exercises by the Primary department of the public schools this afternoon, as they celebrate Washington's birthday.

—A meeting was held Friday evening at the City Hall and steps taken to organize a new band. This will give the Franklin band competition; "the life of trade."

—Monday's blizzard of snow and Dakota dirt was about the hardest of the season; although the snow was melting where the sun shone and the wind did not strike.

—The BUFFALO GAZETTE, the Northwestern Agriculturist and $1.60 worth of seeds all for $1 50. This small sum gives you a local paper, a farm paper and your garden seeds for one year.

—The Eagle now has her new press in position and is ready to run off the Syndicate's "Wright County Quinette." All she lacks is for the Tribune Journal Times Herald to come in with the balance of the combine.

—If you are going to read the newspapers and post up with a farm journal and expect to make garden, read our offer in another column. The GAZETTE, the Northwestern Agriculturist and $1 60 worth of seeds for $1.50.

—If you are going to raise fruit in Minnesota send 2 cent stamp to A. W. LATHAM, 207 Kasota Block, Minneapolis, for a copy of "The Minnesota Horticulturist." There is nothing like profiting by others experience, even in fruit raising.

—On Monday as the evening train from the west pulled in the beautiful coach dog of L. A. Meister took a short but dangerous ride, about the length of a coach, on the cowcatcher of the engine. The train was about stopping at the depot when he got off and, looking very sheepish, made fair speed for the hotel. He didn't seem to be in the least injured, except in his feelings.

—Dr. Chilton tells a story about a small theft that was made at Montrose while he waited for the train in the darkness recently. He had a specimen of urine for analysis, and it being in a large bottle, he tired of carrying it around and set it on the window sill of the depot. When the train came and he went to get the specimen he found it gone. He suspected some one got it for whiskey. Those who want whiskey bad enough to purloin it had better not do so from M. D's.

—Delano still has one case of Diphtheria. On Monday the room occupied by Miss Anna McAlpine was fumigated. Miss Anna returned to the room where she remains during her convalescence. The same day little Jimmie Wharton was found to be having a run of the prevailing disease. The rosidence has been safely quarantined, the patient and his mother occupying an upper room while the Prof. and his other son are keeping house below stairs.

—W. H. Mapes, of Montrose, who has been suffering for a month with a low form of Erysipelas and Gangrene in the feet, and who spent a couple of days in a hospital in St. Paul last week, has temporarily moved, with his wife, into the Dugan house, on Bridge St., for the purpose of receiving surgical assistance more conveniently than he could at home. Mr Mapes is an old settler at Montrose where he has many friends who hope he may soon recover and return to their midst.

—"Consistency, thou art a Jewel," is brought forcibly to mind, ever and anon, when we gaze upon the disappearing forms of several of our neighbors bound for Minneapolis with a load of produce for sale; and again when we behold them in the distance drive rapidly home, as if they feared someone would see what their wagons contained; and, more especially, when we listen to the wonderful display of eloquence pouring from their lips, as between drives they condescend to visit Delano, to get their mail, and to entertain crowds with their firm belief that "Protection for the Home Market" is just the thing. "Practice what you preach."

—People who are obliged to live within their own premises for a few weeks on account of quarantine for contagious disease, are not always prepared to have everything as they would like to. Friends on the outside often take great pains to send "sympathy" to the afflicted. This is all very well but often times a good meal of victuals nicely cooked, in some other house than the one quarantined, would be much more acceptable. We are glad to know that a few of our benevolent ladies have allowed their sympathies to take on this more tangible form and that a few afflicted ones and their watchers have had the pleasure of dining quite sumptuously on nice, nutritious dishes while they were made to remember that their friends outside had not entirely forgotten them. "A friend in need is a friend indeed."

—The Matter boys held a dance in the City Hall Monday evening.

Handed In.

Miss Mary Smarslick came home from Minneapolis, Monday, to spend the rest of the winter.

A dance was given to Mike Nowelvg on Monday evening.

Ernest Otto made St. Paul a business visit, this week.

Personals.

F. F. Chancellor made one of his periodical drives to Minneapolis this week.

Del Young left Wednesday afternoon for Minneapolis where his wife is under the care of a physician.

D. R. Farnham, of Rockford, was a GAZETTE caller yesterday. He says he thinks the financial question an intricate one, and hard to solve.

John Cunningham visited Minneapolis early in the week and returned home Tuesday in the face of the blizzard. He says it will be the last time he will drive down in the winter.

Notice of Caucus.

A Democratic caucus, for the town of Franklin, will be held in Delano, on Saturday, March 7, to nominate a township ticket.

Com { HERMAN OTTO. CLARK STURMAN. JOS. BAUMAN.

Delano, Feby. 18, 1896.

County Cullings.

Measles is reported at the county seat, while Howard has scarlet fever and Delano diphtheria.

The article on Primary Election Law by Senator Culkin is timely and to the point. Hunt up your law supplements for '95, compare notes and figure out how the caucus must be run and see that it is done correctly.

If you want a man nominated for an office be at the caucus and see that your man gets as many votes as possible. Don't allow the opposition to nominate another friend against him, dividing your strength, while they consolidate on one and elect him by a plurality. Watch this catch in the new law.

Why don't the Wright County Printing Syndicate, the Tribune-Eagle-Journal-Times-Herald-Quintette Sheet, tell us something about the whack up contract for county printing? They seem to be a unit, not only in doing the county printing, but in keeping strictly mum.

Just wait until County Auditor Lamson, who used to set type, gets to scratching off the headlines, and taking the fat out of the county printing bills, and the Herald Times-Tribune Journal Eagle, which is supposed to set everything "solid," will give us a specimen of their harmony.

That was a great old roast the Herald recently gave Mr. Mattson, the County Treasurer. But, for some reason or another, these republicans appear, on the face of things, to think the Swedes are getting more than their share of the offices. Ole seems to suit the majority of Wright County voters quite well, howsomeyer.

Politics are really simmering quite lively now. Office hunters are abroad in the land; they are seeking notoriety by pulling wires to hoist themselves and theis friends into all the petty village an township offices that they can; later on they expect in this way to appear among the prominent men of the county and to succeed in landing a candidacy for some lucrative position where, after election, the county will have to support them. Be on your guard. Don't allow all the chronic cases to come to the front this season.

The Republicans are figuring on a sure thing this time in Wright County. Consequently many a bitter fight is on. They sing quite loudly; but there are many, very many discords; lack of harmony makes the song quite disagreeable to the choirists themselves. There is Lamson they say would like to go to St. Paul to spread himself among the honorables, next winter; but then there is Ole Mattson who is handling the finances of the county, and he is from Lamson's part of the county, Cokato, and it would never do to have two "Sons" from that part of the county at once, so soon after the Annandale affair of two years ago; the Herald has published a character for the independent Ole almost equal to that earned by Knute Nelson, at Elbow Lake, when he was around electioneering. We are of opinion that it was kind of fortunate for the Herald editor that he was away, when Ole paid his subscription; and presume that should Ole be seen pointing for the Herald some time soon, he would be met with the announcement that "the Editor is out." But then such is politics and Ole's sinch on the Treasury is pretty solid, and vigorous measures must be resorted to in order to oust him so that the Lamson track may be clear. Rice and Dare and Craig of course will be in for another term, unless it be the latter, who has served a second term, already. For Auditor perhaps Thomas Hillier has the inside track; For Register of Deeds, Edward Nagel has a new cushion on the seat, so soon. For Judge of Probate, County Attorney, Superintendent of Schools and a couple of County Commissioners and Clerk of Court there probably will be such a racket as to jar the entire slate; and result in the nomination by our Republican friends of a poor ticket. In case this is the result, if the Democrats do what they should do they will have another winning chance. Politics are getting considerably mixed and the Democrats seem to be laying low and waiting for some boss to tell them how to proceed. They should get a move on them; get the old Democratic wagon onto the road and give a fellow a chance to get in. Don't wait for pointers, but begin to give a few. Tell the people that Democracy means free trade, free schools, free money, free speech, free press, and a free country, "equal rights for all and special privileges for none" and while the G. O. P politicians are quarreling over offices, we will be capturing voters with our principles.

Among Our Exchanges.

McKinley and Allison would make a wonderful team. Two terms under them and we would then be ready for Mr. Allison at the head.—Delano Eagle.

There is a tremendously strong McKinley sentiment in Minneapolis which is going to make it hard work for C. K. Davis to get delegates from that district.—Wright County Times.

On Wednesday, Congressman McCleary of this state, having borrowed Mr. Towne's maps and charts, which the Duluth orator courteously loaned, made a speech in reply to Towne's bimetallic address of a few hours ago. And thus we see Minnesota Republicans in Congress fighting each other on the financial issue.—St. Cloud Times.

Two more cars of live stock were shipped from our village this week. J. B. Dally sent out one, Tuesday, and Lewis Bros. left with the other, Wednesday. It is one of the good signs of the times that the supply of live stock shows no present sign of dimunition.—Annandale Post.

"Billy" Cochrane will be retained as deputy in the Clerk of Court's office. It is understood that "Billy" Culkin exacted a promise from Vorse for Cochrane's retention before he would take the job of ousting O'Leary. There's nothing like these little amenities in politics. The two "Billies" understand each other perfectly.—Waverly Tribune.

The New York Times tells of one man whose life was saved by a cigarette. The story while a little shaky may be taken as a fact without destroying the belief that the case is the one single exception to the rule that cigarettes kill everybody else who smoke them.—Duluth News Tribune

The Republican party gold-bugs have made a great ado about the issuing of bonds by President Cleveland, and yet both the House and Senate republicans refuse to pass a law to prohibit a further issue of bonds by the president.

Great is fraud, humbug, deception and party chicanery by statesmen in pantalets.—Waseca County Herald.

Editor Hogue announces that if he does not receive his long expected pass from the Great Northern R'y Co., soon, Jim Hill will suffer from a severe roast through the columns of the Review. It does look rather shabby in Jim after the way the Review upheld the R. R. Co. during the strike. Mr. Hogue being the only man in town that we know of who did not express sympathy for the laboring men.—Swift County Monitor; Murdock Village Items.

Senator Davis' boom, be it great or small grows better and larger every day. The west is beginning to cut some figure in politics and statesmanship and it is full time that a president were chosen outside of the usual circle. The west has shown enthusiasm for eastern men till the complement should be now repaid in kind, and it looks as if it might be. We have the candidate for presidential honors and forty years of steadfast voting of the gold Republican principles, should give us a position and standing not to be easily beaten.—Atwater Republican.

What strikes the "old man of the Herald" as very singular is the silence of the four gold-standard papers of Waseca county upon the refusal Grover Cleveland to use the nearly three hundred million dollars of idle silver which he had amd still has in the treasury instead of creating a thirty year bonded indebtedness of two hundred and sixty two millions, simply for the benefit of the gold gamblers of the Rothschilds syndicate. Suppose a farmer owed a note of $200 and had $200 in silver in his house to pay it with. But the holder of the note should say: "I don't want the silver, I want gold. You go mortgage your farm for $200 in gold." And the simple farmer should go borrow the gold and give the mortgage. Wouldn't every man consider such a farmer an idiot—fit only as an inmate of an asylum for imbeciles? "Of course." And yet the republican and democratic gold standard papers consider us a "silver fanatic." Oh, Lord! what fools some mortals be.—Waseca County Herald.

To Democrats.

The time is again at hand when we should turn out and express our faith in our principles by taking part in the caucuses; the preliminary meetings We should do our best to see that only good men go, as delegates, to conventions. Then will we be doing what we can toward nominating a pure ticket; a ticket of men on whom we can rely; men who believe in Democratic principles and who will do what is right to advance them. Men who will do "anything to get elected, whether it is right or wrong" should be relegated to the rear; and only those who will work fearlessly and faithfully and honestly, placed on the ticket.

People generally have tired of having a few old timers congregate in private and prepare themselves credentials as delegates to go to county conventions, there to ratify a picked out slate of delegates to the State convention, and under the new law the caucus must be carried on in such a manner that the most timid need not fear to do his duty and vote for his choice.

Now is the time! The caucus is the place! Be there! Don't fail! Send your choice for delegates! On what kind of a ticket is nominated and what principles they stand for, will depend this year, more than for a long time, the result of county politics, unless people are induced by fair means or foul, to vote against their own interests. Be at your caucus!

DASSEL had a fire on Sunday evening. The Anchor says the entire village had a narrow escape. As it was L. W. Leighton's store, C. B. Nelson's shoe shop, J. O. Bartlett's barber shop, Anderson Bros.' meat market, F. M. Boyer's residence and Dr. Sherwood's office were burned. An explosion of a can of powder occurred, injuring Charles Penny, Jos. Bogert, Wm. Veryalen, Mr. Boyer, C. W. Sedham, E. E. Edminster.

A Hot One.

The Republicans of the Sixth Minnesota congressional district have called their convention to meet after the St. Louis convention and they intend that whatever candidate they nominate shall stand squarely upon the Republican national platform. If the St. Louis convention adopts a sound money platform, young Mr. Towne will be compelled to get over on to it or forego a renomination. This is only fair. He cannot expect to pose as a Republican while repudiating the national platform.—Minneapolis Tribune.

No Liquor at Parties.

Special Telegram to the Tribune.

WINONA, Minn., Feb. 25.—Deputy Internal Revenue Collector W. D. Belden has written for special information to the head offices in St. Paul regarding the liability of societies selling liquor in their halls at social dances to a special liquor tax. He received word to the effect that such societies are liable and announced his intention of rigidly enforcing the law in the matter, which, heretofore, has been openly broken in Winona.—Minneapolis Tribune.

BURRIAL OF WASHINTON.

Extract From a Paper Published in the Year 1800.

This being the day set apart for the observance of the anniversary of the birth of George Washington, the clipping which follows will be both appropriate and of interest. It is from the Ulster County Gazette, published at Kingston, N. Y., and we take it from a copy of Jan. 4th, 1800, which we recently referred to as being framed and hung up in Guth & Ash's barber shop. The paper is a valuable antiquity and being the first issue after the burial of Washington, one side bears heavy mourning rules. The account of the funeral is as follows:

WASHINGTON ENTOMBED.

GEORGE TOWN, Dec. 20.

On Wednesday last, the mortal part of WASHINGTON the Great,—the Father of his Country and the Friend of man, was consigned to the tomb, with solemn honor and funeral pomp.

A multitude of persons assembled from many miles around, at Mount Vernon, the choice abode and last residence of the illustrious chief. There were the groves—the spacious avenues, the beautiful and sublime scenes, the noble mansion—but, alas! the august inhabitant was now no more, The great soul was gone, His mortal part was there indeed; but oh! how affecting! how awful the spectacle of such worth and greatness, thus, to mortal eyes, fallen!—Yes! fallen! fallen!

In the long and lofty Portico, where oft the Hero walked in all his glory, now lay the shrowded corpse. The countenance still composed and serene, seemed to depress the dignity of the spirit, which lately dwelt in the lifeless form! There those who paid the last sad honors to the benefactor of his country, took an impressive—a farewell view.

On the ornament at the head of the coffin, was inscribed SURGE AD JUDICIUM—about the middle of the coffin, GLORIA DEO—and on the silver plate,

GENERAL
GEORGE WASHINGTON.
Departed this life on the 14th Dec.
1799, Æ t. 68.

Between three and four o'clock, the sound of artillery from the vessel in the river, firing minute guns, awoke afresh our solemn sorrow—the corpse was removed—a band of music with mournful melody melted the soul into all the tenderness of woe.

The procession was formed and moved on the following order:

Cavalry, Infantry, Guard, } With arms reversed.
Music,
Clergy,
The General's horse with his saddle, holsters, and pistols,

Cols.	Pall Bearers	Cols.
Simms,	Corpse,	Gilpin,
Ramsay,		Marstiller
Payne.		Little.
	Pall Bearers

Mourners,
Masonic Brethren,
Citizens.

When the procession had arrived at the bottom of the elevated lawn, on the bank of the Potomac, where the family vault is placed, the cavalry halted, the infantry marched toward the Mount and formed their lines—the Clergy, the Masonic Brothers, and the Citizens, descended to the vault, and the funeral service of the church was performed. The firing was repeated from the vessel in the river, and the sound echoed from the woods and hills around.

Three general discharges by the infantry—the cavalry, and 11 pieces of artillery, which lined the banks of the Potomac back of the vault, paid the last tribute no the entombed Commander in Chief of the Armies of the United States and to the departed Hero.

The sun was now setting. Alas! the son of glory was set forever. No—the name of WASHINGTON—the American President and General—will triumph over DEATH! The unclouded brightness of his Glory will illuminate the future ages!"—Mankato Free Press.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

Tourists, Ranches, Fruit, San Gabriel, Mountains, etc. etc.

HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

The season of visitors and tourists to the Golden State is now at its heighth. The hotels, boarding houses, railroads and livery men are having a flourishing business at present. The annual influx of tourists and pleasure and health seekers is one of the reliable sources of revenue to the people of Southern California, climate being one of their commodities which must necessarily be utilized in its original location, being untransferable, and consequently there are many places in the cities and towns provided for the entertainment of the traveling public, in the shape of hotels, boarding houses, restauants, furnished and unfurnished rooms and houses to rent, furnishing accommodations to strangers in any shape. People can get meals and lodging at the same place, or meals at one place and lodging at another, or, by renting rooms or houses, can go to housekeeping the same as at home.

Numerous tourists are to be seen visiting advertised objects of interest, some of which are: Alhambra, San Gabriel, Sunny Slope Ranch, Rose Ranch, Baldwin's Ranch, Sierra Madre, Mt. Lowe and other points. Several of these places are grape producing ranches, each having its winery, wine making establishment, and aside from the interest in the wine product, especially to those who have a fondness for the juice of the grape, they possess no more attractions than other broad California acres. The Baldwin Ranch is a large tract of several hundred acres upon which various kinds of fruit are raised, including the grape, having its winery adjunct. But the tract obtains its greatest interest from its proprietor, who is known in sporting circles as "Lucky Baldwin." At these places wines are sold to the tourists by the bottle or by the case, large or small to suit the convenience of purchasers. On these ranches and on adjacent lands large orange and lemon orchards are to be found, now laden with the golden fruit.

San Gabriel, besides its wine product, is a place of historical interest. It is an old Spanish settlement and is the location of one of the best preserved of the old Spanish Missions, which was erected in 1771, whose chime of bells are still to be heard calling the devotee to prayers, Here was also located a Spanish fort about the time of the erection of the Mission. A cactus hedge which formed the outside boundary is all that remains of the fort.

Sierra Madre village is at the foot of the Sierra Madre Mountains and is regarded by many physicians as a very suitable place for people afflicted with pulmonary troubles, being in a position and at an elevation to possess the most favorable conditions of the atmosphere for invalids- The place is not so convenient to the traveling public. It is some distance from R. R. communication, and is reached only by stage coach, livery outfits and private conveyance. At Sierra Madre begins the trail over which, by means of burros the tourists ascend along the sides and through the canyons of the Sierra Madre Mountains to the top of Wilson's Peak, an elevation of over 9.000 feet. The trails are narrow, necessitating riding in a single file.

Most of these places can be reached by rail but many tourists prefer travelling to points of interest by livery outfits, which affords a greater opportunity to enjoy the scenery and obtain more of the beneficial effects of the climate. Carriages with seats for four with driver is much in use, but the most fascinating outfits are the tally-ho coaches, with driver and trumpeter and drawn by four and sometimes six horses. These coaches are of various designs and colors, no two being exactly alike. Many of them are contructed with a square like body with scalloped sides having upholstered seats capable of holding three persons on top of each scallop. Other tally-hos consist in part of the old fashioned stage body with seats inside and on top extending forward and back of the body, having a place for baggage in the rear, all appareutly in imitation of foreign stage coaches, such as we read of in Dickens and other writers of romance. These coaches are to be seen regularly every morning moving briskly along the streets of Pasadena and Los Angeles accompanied by a bugle call and stopping in front of hotels and soon they are filled with tourists, all in anticipation of a day's enjoyment and start off promptly at a brisk gait accompanied by the inspiring notes of the trumpet or bugle or sometimes the long old time farmer's dinner horn.

Mt. Lowe Hotel and observatory is well patronized. The place is reached by tally hos, which convey tourists to the foot of the incline railway, and also by electric and steam railways, which terminate at Altadena, a suberb of Pasadena, from where they are conveyed by the Mt. Lowe Electric cars to the foot of the incline, and up the incline by the electric cable cars to the hotel where entertainment of the tourists is provided. From the hotel there is an electric car which conveys tourists further up the mountain, connecting with a burro outfit, by which the ascent to the top of Mt. Lowe is completed; an elevation of over 5,000 feet being thus attained.

From the hotel and other points on the mountain tourists have a view of the vast expanse of country, the cities of Pasadena and Los Angeles and other towns, lying between the mountain and the Pacific ocean and of the ocean itself, including some of its islands, Catalina and others lying 20 or 30 miles distant from the main land.

The weather. There has been but little rain since Jan 21. The temperature has not varied much up to Feb. 16 On the last date, highest was between 85 and 90, lowest about 40. On the 17, today, the temperature is about the same. It seems as if we are about to enter on a warmer period.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feby. 21, 1896.

Senator Hill is on the right tack in his attacks upon the abuse of the right of petition to Congress. It has been made a cheap way of getting notoriety for this or that organization to send out thousands of printed petitions to be signed and sent to Senators and Representatives with the request that they be presented to Congress, Knowing that when so presented the titles of the petitions and the purpose for which they are sent would be read in open session and printed in the Record and in many newspapers. Senator Hill proposes to at least partially reform this abuse by having the petitions handed to the clerk of the Senate who will put them on file, instead of their being formally presented by Senators, as now.

The republicans are still unable to do anything with their tariff bill. Senator Carter, who voted against taking it up the other day has given notice of his intention to move that the bill be sent back to the Finance committee for further consideration. The matter was brought up at a joint caucus of republican Senators and Repaesentatives, held last night, but nothing was decided upon.

The McKinley men declare the sudden epidemic of candidacy fever among republican Senators and ex-Senators is nothing more or less than an attempt to make a combination of the field against McKinley, and there is apparently foundation for the declaration. The Quay-Platt-Reed combine seems to have become afraid that McKinley might get nominated on the first ballot if they didn't cut up the vote. They found plenty of willing tools in the Senate, where McKinley has not one single sincere friend, and the vote will be cut up.

Senator Vest, of Mo, is not one of the professional "funny" men of the Senate, but he knows how to raise a laugh with the best of them when he wishes. An instance showing this fact was given this week. Mr. Vest was making a few remarks when Senator Peffer got up and began to address the chair. By the time Senator Vest had turned his eyes on "his whiskers" Senator Sherman was also on his feet and addressing the chair. "Mr. President," shouted Senator Vest several times without attracting the chairman's attention, and then asked if he might make a parliamentary inquiry. That caught the chairman's attention, who at once said: "The gentleman from Mo., will state it." Mr. Vest then said with much solemnity: "I believe I was addressing the Senate, and had the floor, but it seems that I have no longer got it. If I can't get it in any other way, I rise to a pralimentary inquiry to find out how I lost it." A titter ran around the Senate. Mr. Sherman apologized for his interruption. Mr. Peffer sat down and Mr. Vest proceeded with his remarks.

Secretary Morton's dinner to President and Mrs. Cleveland, this week, has been widely discussed on account of the original manner in which the table was decorated. A big plow made of red carnation was the center piece of the table, and upon each side of it were hay stacks made of yellow spun sugar, under which were piles of vegetables and farm implements all made of sugar. At each of the four corners of the table was a wheelbarrow made of candy cabbages, containing confections in the shape of vegetables and fruits. The ices were served in candy hay wagons, and the punch in little cups made to imitate apples, peaches and pears, and the individual dishes for stewed terrapin were china terrapins. This was the last of the formal cabinet dinners for this season.

Mr. C. P. Huntington can talk a Congressman weary on the benefits of his proposal to extend the debt due the government from the Pacific Railroads one hundred years at 2 per cent, but when it comes to giving substantial information as to the actual workings of the roads he is about as poor a witness as could be found. Senator Morgan is proving himself a thorn in the side of Mr. Huntington, by driving the railroad magnate into a corner with his pertinent qudstions, but about all Mr. Morgan has yet been able to show is that Mr. Huntington could tell much that would throw light on the subject if he would. Washington is fairly swarming with Huntington lobbyists, determined to buy every Congressional vote that is purchasable, either with money or other commodities, and to bulldose, aye and even to blackmail, those who stand out against their persuasions. A man who know, I think, says private detectives are shadowing the movements of every Senator and Representative who is known to oppose Huntington's scheme, for the purpose of getting evidence which can be used to control his vote. Some of the Congressmen who have indicated friendliness to the Huntington scheme are living higher that ever before in their and it isn't costing them a cent.

CORRESPONDENCE

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

Some of the papers are booming Senator C. K. Davis, of Minnesota, for President, and the Keeley cure Law of this state as a step towards reform. Mr. Davis may be all right, but I think the Keeley cure law is a blot upon the Statute books and should be repealed. Under this law the County Commissioners of any County it the State may advance to any inebriate drunkard in their county the sum of $100. to be used to pay for the treatment of Keeley cure. The recipient to give his note to the County Commissioners --the recipient to pay it back if he wants to or leave it unpaid if he wants to. Such a law may be morally right but it certainly has no legal foundation.

The weather begins to look very much like spring and if the fine weather continues seeding will be here before long.

Wm. Mills Jr. and wife drove to Buffalo today.

The population of Independece is increasing fast. O. Nelson has two new boys, twins, born 14th present month. A. Batdorf and wife have a girl two weeks old.

George Taylor and family of Minneapolis has moved on to the George Hoisington farm.—The Hennepin County book agents have broken out again. They have sent their bills to quite a number of men in Independence and Greenwood, but they can just as well put it down in their book that those men will never pay them a cent. If it is fun or fight they want they can have either or both.

MARRIED. in the Town of Independence, on 22nd present month, by Rev. J. N. Potter, Frank Styner to Cora Ditty. May peace and prosperity be their portion.

The farmer's mass meeting at town hall, Armstrong, on Monday eyening of this week was quite interesting but the crowd was rather small. We expect there will be another in a month or six weeks.

Earl Hoisington and E. N. Wright drove to North Rockford today on business.

Quite a good many Independence people attended the old settlers meeting at Delano last Saturday. All report a good time.

R. M. Miller made a business trip to Minneapolis yesterday.

It is not settled whether they will build a creamery at Maple Plain or not; they will know in a week or ten days.

WHAT YOUR THUMB TELLS.
Square Type.

The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such people a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, books, art, and fiction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent chromo-picture of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1896. The cost of this superb work of art was $5,000; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so prolific and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Philosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine. In every one of its numerous departments, which cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronicling every fact, fancy, and fad of the day, Demorest's is simply a perfect Family Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthlies. Send in your subscription: it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York. Though not a fashion magazine, its perfect fashion pages, and its articles on family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those possessing the Feminine Type of Thumb, which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft nail, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits which belong essentially to the softer sex, every one of whom should subscribe to Demorest's Magazine. If you are unacquainted with its merits, send for a specimen copy (free), and it will admit that seeing these THUMBS has put you in the way of saving money by finding in one magazine everything to satisfy the literary wants of a whole family.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO.

THERE are 37,000 women telegraph operators in the United States, and the number is constantly growing.

IF the brain can be photographed it may reform some of the back numbers when they see the character of their thinking framed and hung on the bedroom wall.

EDISON and Tesla have nothing to do nowadays but make new discoveries. They have discovered almost everything except the foundation of life—and what comes after this life.

NOW THAT the X rays have become so popular among scientists, it will not be out of place to mention that the X raise is very popular among those who work for a living.

EDISON has patented more than 600 inventions, but the unhappy householder in the suburbs still has to shovel off the sidewalks after every snowstorm in the same old way.

A REPUTABLE lawyer who has examined the claims of the Anneke Jans heirs, advised a "lineal" descendant of the good old Dutch lady of New York to take a good cigar for his share of the inheritance.

WILLIAM WALDORF ASTOR has "bounced" the British editors of his London Pall Mall Gazette, because they would not follow out the policy he dictated for the paper which he owned, and constantly indulged in "sneers and disparaging comments upon America."

IT is estimated that 90 per cent. of the tea used in this country is adulterated by plumbago, prussian blue or willow leaves. People who are not over-particular will be surprised to find that a decoction of hayseed tastes exactly as good as most tea and does not cost so much.

BY chance it has been discovered that even the most delicate tracery of petals of flowers can be reproduced in metal. During the trial of a new fuse the other day, a small leaf fell between a dynamite cartride and an iron block on which the cartridge was fired. As a result a perfect imprint of the leaf was left on the iron.

IN New York state they have become disgusted with coroners. They will probably be abolished by the legislature, and in lieu thereof reputable physicians and the police will make the preliminary investigations. The physicians are to be appointed by the courts, to serve for a term of six years, and to be paid fees for actual service.

OHIO is far in the lead of all other states in the number of colleges with the authority to confer the usual degrees. It has 38 of these institutions, or seven more than Pennsylvania, ten more than Illinois, 15 more than New York, nearly three times as many as Indiana, more than three times as many as Michigan and more than four times as many as Massachusetts.

IN one of the letters of Grui Patin, written in 1645, the learned bibliophilist says: "It is true that there is here an Englishman, the son of a Frenchman, who proposes to make carriages that will roll from Paris to Fontainebleau without horses in a day. The new machine is preparing in the Temple. If it should succeed, there will be a great saving in hay and oats, which are at present extremely costly."

THE election of Senator Frye, of Maine, as president pro tem. of the senate suggests the fact that only once has a New York senator held this honor, and that was as far back as 1798, when John Lawrence was elected. Perhaps this is due in part to the frequency with which New York has held the vice presidency. Eight different citizens of New York have been elected vice president, serving in all 25 years and a few months. Only once has New York held the speakership, and that was in 1825, when John W. Taylor was elected.

COMPUTATIONS and anlyses made at the Normal school in Chicago lead to the conclusion that 448,000 tons of "dust" fell upon the city during the recent snowstorm, and that about 88 per cent. of it was pure sand. So it is fair to presume that the stuff came from the far west, and was carried in the air for many hours before being distributed here. The total quantity thus taken must have been enormous, as the area on which it fell extends from west of the Mississippi to Indiana, and from Wisconsin to Illinois.

DR. CYRUS EDSON'S consumption cure, the formula of which has been given out, seems to be doing the work. The doctor says: "To such practicing physicians in good standing as will follow my directions to the letter, I shall be glad to send the fluid for purposes of experiment." The reports from those who are taking the cure are almost uniformly favorable. Of course no claim of restoring lung tissue is made and only the test of time will show the exact value of the formula. To exterminate this most frightful of diseases would be the crowning achievement of a wonderful century.

AMERICAN readers are now furnished by a local Turkish authority with what purports to be an official list of outrages. The total number killed is given as 39,234, and the number of destitute as 94,770. The account is authoritative, and the details are more sickening than the bare aggregate, as they show the number of persons burned to death, the number who perished from hunger and cold; the number of women outraged; the number forcibly married to Moslems, etc. It is a record that no civilized people will be proud of in these closing years of the nineteenth century.

IF the National Divorce Reform league were to issue a circular to Romeos and Juliets setting forth the fact men and women experience entire changes in their likes and dislikes, in their character and amiableness, in their judgment, and what not, usually at seven-year periods in the early part of their lives, the reform league would be administering an ounce of preventive worth several tons of its cure. In other words, if people in general, and lovers in particular, knew half as much at 20 years as they know when they reach the age of 40 there would of a certainty be fewer divorce cases.

BILL NYE DEAD.

Passes Peacefully Away at His Home Near Asheville, N. C.

Asheville, N. C. Feb. 24.—Edgar W. (Bill) Nye died at his home, 12 miles east of this place, Saturday afternoon. His wife, two sons and two neighbors were present at his bedside when the end peacefully came. Ten days ago he had a stroke of paralysis, from which he never fully recovered consciousness.

Edgar Willis Nye, or "Bill" Nye, as he is much better known to his friends and the public, was born in Shirley, Piscataquis county, Me., August 25, 1850, but at the age of two years, according to his own story, he took his parents by the hand and led them to the west.

They went to Wisconsin, and there, on the banks of the St. Croix river, young Nye was brought up on a farm. He received an academical education at Fall River, Wis., and in 1876 went to Wyoming territory, where he studied law, and was admitted to the bar.

There, as he says, he practiced law in a quiet way, "although frequently warned by the authorities not to do so."

He had plenty of leisure time on his hands, which he used in writing a Sunday letter for the Cheyenne Sun at the rate of one dollar a column. In one of his humorous autobiographical sketches Mr. Nye says that that sum, which amounted to nearly $60 a year, so dwarfed his returns from his law practice that he decided to take up newspaper writing as a profession, and accordingly moved to Denver, where he obtained a position on the staff of the Denver Tribune.

He corresponded from Denver for the Salt Lake Tribune. Later a new paper was started in Laramie called the Boomerang, after a favorite mule owned by Nye, and which he called "Boomerang" because he never knew where it would strike. At the time Nye edited the Boomerang it was published over a livery stable. A sign on the door instructed callers to "twist the tail of the gray mule and take the elevator."

The Boomerang was quoted all over the country and Nye began to get his reputation as a humorist of note at that time. The paper was not a financial success, but it was the foundation for the fortune which Nye afterwards made as a humorist.

Like many humorists, Mr. Nye was a man of almost womanly gentleness of disposition. His amiability was never clouded, and his good humor was as spontaneous as it was good-natured. He never forgot a friend. In later years his writings and lecturing brought an income of over $30,000 a year, and he will leave a moderate fortune to his widow and children.

Mr. Nye was married in 1877 to Miss Fanny Smith, of Chicago. With her and their children Nye lived happily for a long time on the banks of the St. Croix, and they went with him to New York city and made home bright on Staten Island. Of late years, when he was not going about the country on lecturing tours, Nye has passed most of his time at his country place near this city.

Some of the experiences of his life on this farm are among his quaintest and best efforts. Of his appearance all that is necessary to say is that he "looked like his pictures," and there is hardly a man, woman or child who reads newspapers who does not know them by heart. Perhaps the most famous of his humorous writings was the letter to the president of the United States accepting the postmastership at Laramie City. That letter was commented upon in seriousness by the London Times, and the comment was, perhaps, as funny as the original letter, when all the circumstances are taken into consideration.

FOUGHT IN MEXICO.

Fitzsimmons Knocks Maher Out in Less Than One Round.

Langtry, Tex., Feb. 22.—It took Robert Fitzsimmons just 90 seconds Friday afternoon to defeat Peter Maher and become the heavyweight champion of the world. The fight took place in the bottoms of the Rio Grande river on the Mexican side, a mile and a half distant from the Langtry depot. The blow by which Fitzsimmons knocked Maher out was a right-hand hook on the jaw.

The fight was sharp while it lasted. Both men were confident, Fitz so much so that he seemed a little careless. Peter seemed a trifle nervous and anxious. Fitz took the aggressive from the call of time and forced Maher toward his (Maher's) corner. There Maher made a stand, led, fell short and clinched. Maher led twice after they had been broken away by the referee, landing lightly on the chest. Fitz smiled as he evaded the blows. Two clinches followed, then Fitz led with his left, landing lightly. He quickly followed with a short half-armed swing, with his right landing squarely on Maher's left jaw point. The Irishman fell upon his back. His head hit the floor with a thump, his eyes rolled glassily. Maher made a gallant effort to get upon his feet when time was called, but after getting half way to a recumbent position he fell back and still had his head on the floor when time was called, and the decision was awarded to the Cornishman.

When the train of sports arrived from El Paso at 2:30 there was no evidence that anything unusual was about to occur. The excursionists from Eagle Pass and other points had been belated, and only some 50 residents of the country about had gathered at the depot. One company of the Texas rangers guarded at the depot, while the remainder went down to the bottoms on the Texas side, but not the slightest effort was made to interfere with the sports in any of their movements.

Waller a Free Man.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Secretary Olney received a cablegram Friday from Ambassador Eustis announcing that Waller, the ex-consul to Madagascar, has been released from jail. It is expected that Waller will join his family in the United States. As Waller is entirely destitute of means, Ambassador Eustis has been authorized by Secretary Olney to provide him with transportation to the United States. He has been in prison for nearly a year, having been arrested by the French authorities on the 5th of March last in Madagascar and afterward being kept in confinement in the military prisons in France.

Train Wrecked and Burned.

Waterloo, Ind., Feb. 25.—Early Monday morning a west-bound Lake Shore freight train broke in two 12 miles east of this city and the two sections collided. Ten cars of coal oil ignited, and the flames spread rapidly, doing great damage in destroying surrounding property. All traffic was suspended for hours.

VICTIMS OF DYNAMITE.

Over One Hundred Persons Believed to Have Perished in the Transvaal.

Johannesburg, Feb. 21.—Details are reaching this city of what is probably the most disastrous dynamite explosion on record in any part of the world.

Thousands of people have been rendered homeless by the terrible calamity over 100 persons are believed to have been killed, some 200 or 300 men, women and children have been severely wounded, and many others have been more or less injured.

Viedendorp, the scene of the calamity, is a suburb of Johannesburg. In it are huddled members of the poorer classes of whites—Malays, Kaffirs and Chinamen—who subsist for the most part by doing odd jobs about the place, which is a railway transfer station for the mining districts of the section.

Among the freight cars standing on the tracks at Viedendorp were eight trucks loaded with dynamite. As evening was approaching there was an explosion near the freight depot, so awful in the intensity of its force that the ground for miles around was convulsed as if by an earthquake, houses rocked and fell, masses of iron, earth, stone, wood and human remains were hurled skyward, the windows of almost every house in Johannesburg were broken, and people were blown through the air like straws before a gust of wind.

The explosion had torn a hole 200 feet long and 80 feet wide over the spot where the eight trucks of dynamite stood but a few minutes before. The whole of that quarter of Johannesburg was literally blown to pieces.

On the ground were blackened shapes of human remains, limbs, heads and trunks, scorched and torn. The victims were mostly Malays, Kaffirs and Chinamen, the whites being in a minority at Viedendorp, but, in spite of this, quite a number of white people, including six girls, are among the many victims of this terrible calamity.

AN OBNOXIOUS NEWSPAPER.

Mitchell (S. D.) Residents Burn Its Plant, Then Pay for It.

Mitchell, S. D., Feb. 25.—Saturday evening the many business men of this city met in an indignation meeting, their heap of indignation being directed towards R. H. McBride, editor of the Mitchell Mail. For the past four years McBride has, through his paper, acted as a free lance and has, it is stated, heaped a great deal of abuse and ridicule on leading citizens and various enterprises of the city. From this meeting a committee of seven men was selected to wait upon McBride and offer to buy his outfit, he to thereupon leave town. McBride agreed to answer the proposition Monday morning. Monday the committee called on McBride with the money to pay for the material, but he was absent and the committee took the entire outfit into the street, sprinkled it with resin and set it on fire. The act was accomplished in broad daylight and some of the most prominent citizens were at the head of the movement. McBride left town Monday in a buggy for parts unknown.

Before taking the summary action noted, the committee appointed to negotiate with McBride, being unable to find him, appointed one of its number to act as the editor's agent, and turned over to him sufficient cash to pay for his plant. This ostensibly lawless act at the hands of citizens is approved by nearly everyone as a justifiable act of a long-enduring and patient people. This act is another link in the tragedy of this paper's editor, Bob McBride. A story of blasted hopes, ruined lives and the display it is said of the most malignant efforts to ruin business men is mixed up in the case. The history of the immmediate cause of this act of the citizens of Mitchell is briefly told.

STRIKE STILL ON.

Garment Workers at Chicago Hold a Big Mass Meeting.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—The strike of the cutters and trimmers is still on in full force and there is no prospect of arbitration. The manufacturers claim to have many men at work, but will not say how many or in whose shops, while the strikers assert that as fast as men are imported to take their places they are captured by the union pickets and soon after initiated into the organization.

An immense mass meeting of male and female garment workers, organized and unorganized, was held Monday night, 3,000 attending to show their interest in the struggle against the manufacturers. Resolutions were given unanimous and strong-voiced approval, indorsing the stand taken by the Cutters' and Trimmers' union, pledging the support of all garment workers, declaring the action of the manufacturers was a conspiracy to reduce wages below the decent living point and to break up the clothing unions in the city, citing the successful fight made against the sweating system in New York and declaring all organized garment workers would refuse to make up clothing cut by non-union men. About 6,000 of the 30,000 garment workers of Chicago are organized and a large number of the unorganized enrolled their names for new unions after the meeting.

VICTIMS OF FLAMES.

Seven Died at Baltimore in a Burning Residence.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 24.—A fire in the fashionable district of North Baltimore about eight o'clock Sunday morning was the cause of seven deaths, and sent a feeling of horror into hundreds of homes in the city, where most of the unfortunate victims were well known and highly respected. The fire started in the basement of 1806 North Charles street, the residence of James R. Armiger, one of the best-known men in the city. The list of the dead is as follows:

James R Armiger, aged 55; William B. Riley, his son-in law, aged 38; Richard Riley, aged 4; Marian Riley, aged 2; James Chamberlin, aged 3; Mrs Marian Chamberlain, aged 30 and Harold Manuel, aged 50. Mr. Armiger was an importer of diamonds and fine jewelry and did a big business in this city and throughout the southern states. For 30 years he had been one of the best-known merchants of the city.

Will Be Married April 6.

New York, Feb 25.—Gen. Harrison and Mrs. Mary Dimmick will probably be married on Easter Monday, April 6, by Rev. Dr. John Brown, of St. Thomas' Protestant Episcopal church. On Saturday Dr. Brown received a note from Private Secretary Tibbott asking him if he would be at liberty on April 6 to perform the marriage ceremony. Dr. Brown replied that he would be very glad to do so.

NOTABLE CELEBRATIONS.

The Birthday of George Washington Widely Observed.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The national capital was wholly given over Saturday to celebrating the 164th anniversary of the birth of the city's founder and in whose honor it was named. There were imposing military parades extending along Pennsylvania avenue from the capital past the white house, morning and afternoon, in which all the District of Columbia militia participated. The cycle corps, with a day's rations and 24 rounds of cartridges, demonstrated the adaptability of the bicycle to military purposes by throwing a skirmish line ten miles up the Potomac river, where a sham battle was held. Troop A, of the local militia, rode to Brightwood, four or five miles from the city, returning in time for the afternoon parade. On Capitol hill a distinguished audience gathered in the senate chamber to hear the president pro tempore of that body, Senator Frye (rep. Me.), read Washington's farewell address, and the National Daughters of the Revolution closed their fifth continental congress with commemorative exercises in which many patriotic societies took part. The Oldest Inhabitants' association held an impressive ceremony in honor of the day, and the Legion of Loyal Women also commemorated the anniversary by appropriate exercises.

All executive departments were, of course, closed.

Philadelphia, Feb. 24.—The anniversary of the birth of George Washington was more generally observed in Philadelphia on Saturday than has been the case for many years. The most important feature was the conference held in the headquarters of the Universal Peace society by prominent advocates of arbitration, for the purpose of discussing the feasability of the "creation of a court of arbitration for the peaceful adjustment of difficulties that may arise between the United States and Great Britain."

Letters were read from President Cleveland, and Secretaries Smith and Morton, and Postmaster General Wilson, and a number of addresses were made.

London, Feb. 24.—The Anglo-American arbitration commission has requested the publication of the following cablegram sent by the committee to the chairman of the arbitration demonstration held in Philadelphia Saturday:

"Heart greetings to our American kinsmen who are celebrating Washington's birthday. We join with you in doing honor to your national hero by advocating fraternal union through a permanent court of arbitration for the peaceful and honorable adjustment of all differences arising in the English speaking family.

"(Signed) Rt. Rev. Brooke Foss Westcott, bishop of Durham, Lord Playfair, Very Rev. F. W. Farrar, Dean of Canterbury, Sir John Lubbock, Lady Henry Somerset, Mrs. Fawcett, Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, William R. Cremer, Dr. Parker, pastor of the city temple."

Chicago, Feb. 24.—Chicago Saturday observed the anniversary of Washington's birthday in a manner more notable, perhaps, than ever before.

In 13 places and under the auspices of the Union League club exercises were held, 12 of them being churches or school buildings, and one a theater, the Auditorium. At the latter the address of the day was made by Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, of New York.

The high school exercises were begun at ten o'clock in the morning and in each instance the principal address was delivered by an able college man who was induced to contribute to the success of the occasion by the Union League club.

New York Feb. 24.—The 164th anniversary of Washington's birthday was celebrated in New York city Saturday. Business was suspended and flags were flying. At sunrise the first distinct acts of honor in memory of the Father of His Country took place. There was the usual ceremony of raising the United States flag at the Battery. Following the custom which has prevailed for many years, the national flag was also raised on old Fort Fisher, at the northern end of Central park, at the same time the Battery celebration took place. No business was transacted on any of the exchanges and all public buildings were closed as far as the transaction of ordinary business was concerned.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 24.—There were a number of celebrations in Baltimore commemorative of Washington. The first in importance among those held during the day was the exercises of the Johns Hopkins university at McCoy hall. The university at the same time celebrated its 20th anniversary. The chief feature of the exercises was the address by Hon. Andrew D. White, ex-president of Cornell university, now an assistant with President Gilman on the Venezuelan commission. Dr. White was introduced by President Gilman. The doctor prefaced his address with a few remarks concerning the Johns Hopkins university, and then turned his attention to "The Diplomatic Relations of the United States."

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 24.—Washington's birthday was Saturday observed more generally as a holiday than ever before in Pittsburgh. Business was practically suspended. The only public display was by the Junior Order American Mechanics. The parade was the best and largest attended the organization has yet made in Pittsburgh in celebration of the birth of the first president. A number of G. A. R. posts also participated in the street demonstration.

NEGROES FOR AFRICA.

Four Hundred to Sail for Liberia from Savannah, Ga., February 27.

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 25.—A special train left here Monday night over the Central railway of Georgia for Savannah carrying two baggage-car loads of boxes, trunks and other baggage, and between 200 and 300 negroes from Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi and Texas, en route to Monrovia, Liberia, Africa. The negroes go under the auspices of the International Migration society, whose head office is in this city. The steamer Laureda has been chartered and will leave Savannah February 27 for Africa, carrying in all about 400 colonists from the south to Africa. The negroes leaving are jubilant over their prospects, notwithstanding reports were received that some of the members of the first colony met with bitter experiences.

Confirmed.

Washington, Feb. 25.—The senate in executive session Monday confirmed the following nominations: John Harlow, of Missouri, and William G. Rice, of New York, to be civil service commissioners; William M. Baldwin, of New York, to be third assistant secretary of state.

THE FIGHT IS ON.

There is an intense rivalry between the watermelon and tomato growers as to who can produce the earliest. Salzer's Earliest Watermelon ripened in 1895 in 52 days. That record is to be beaten, and Salzer pays $100 to the winner! Then on tomatoes the record on "50 days the Earliest Tomato" in 1895 was 68 days. That's to be beaten, and $50 paid. Salzer challenges the world to produce earlier melons, tomatoes, cabbages, radishes, peas or sweet corn than he offers. Get his mammoth catalogue. There is money in it.

IF YOU WILL CUT THIS OUT AND SEND it with 12c. stamps to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will get free their great catalogue and a package of the yellow rind watermelon sensation. (K)

IN ABSENCE.

When do I want you most?
Why, dear, at morn;
When first I wake and realize another day is born!
When the first sunbeams on the sill shake out their golden fringe,
And all the sky is tender yet, with dawn's dull rose atinge;
When every fluted blade and leaf with fairy gems is strung—
Then is the time I want you most, because the day is young!

When do I want you most?
Why, dear, at noon;
For these enchanted meadows smile as if it still were June,
A hundred fields of blossoming flax are blue as when I came,
The oriole flashes up the sky in narrow lines of flame,
When the white roads are drenched with sun, and pine-woods sweet the air—
Then is the time I want you most, because the day is fair!

When do I want you most?
Why, dear, at night;
When, in the stars that rise for both, I read your love in light;
When memory tells its rosary, and days you did not share
Slip silent on the silken string, like beads without a prayer!
When fireflies swing their elfin lamps to lead my longings on—
Then is the time I want you most, because the day is gone!

A NIGHT OF TERROR.

BY GEORGE H. HOSEA.

When 15 years old I was one of a crew of three that manned the little 28-ton schooner Ornament, which lay moored in Monhegan harbor—a deep, narrow strait between the islands of Monhegan and Manana, Maine. The entrance is from the south, and is unobstructed, while to the north the passage is barred by a rocky islet called Smutty Nose. This is separated from Manana by a narraw passage on the westerly side called "Drunken Gut." The harbor is fairly good shelter, except when the wind is from the southeast.

At daylight on the morning after our arrival at Monhegan there was a stiff breeze, with rain from the southeast, and by noon it had risen to a heavy gale. All day coasters, traders and fishing vessels ran in till about 20 sail were in harbor when night fell.

They were anchored as near together as they could be, and yet swing clear of each other. This compact gathering would be well enough in a smooth harbor; but on little Monhegan, exposed to the increasing gale, with night coming on and the probability of a heavy sea running into the strait, the prospect looked serious. Should a vessel part her cables or drag her anchors, collision with those to leeward of her would be inevitable, and the result of collision might be disastrous.

When darkness came the gale's fury increased. The unobstructed sea rolled into the narrow harbor in huge billows that dashed against Manana or Smutty Nose, or raged as breakers on the reefs about Drunken Gut. The vessels, hampered by their anchors and unable to rise freely on the surges, strained at their cables, plunging and rolling wildly, while nearly every wave toppled its crest upon their decks or swept them from stem to stern.

About nine o'clock, when the gale seemed at its height, a little craft that had been anchored all day just on our port bow dragged her anchors. Her crew, like some others, had sought safety on shore long before night. Swinging to our broadside, she began to pound against us and to break into pieces.

Her bowsprit snapped, her bulwarks crushed in fore and aft, her masts went over her taffrail. At last, plunging from the top of a big sea, we crashed down upon her forward deck. Her windlass-bitts gave way, and off she went, broadside to the wind, till she was lost in the gloom and rain.

Anxiously we crouched by the windlass, the captain's hand almost constantly upon either one cable or the other, that he might detect the first vibratory motion, indicating that the anchors were being dragged over the rocky bottom. But they seemed to hold securely. Our danger was of another sort.

I was crouching in the lee of the foremast to shelter myself from the wind and spray, when I heard the captain suddenly shout:

"Up, up with you, boys, quick! There's a coaster adrift, coming right for us!"

Through the driving rain, sure enough, came a big schooner stern first, wildly swinging to and fro, now toppling on a crest, now wallowing down in the hollow depths. Her gunwales almost rolled under, and her mainboom, free from its lashing, swayed madly from side to side.

Just as we were receding from a rolling swell she crashed into us and snapped our bowsprit. Then she hung square across our bow.

"Quick! quick! Give me the ax!" cried the captain.

In a moment he severed both cables at the windlass, and we were drifting with the gale. No vessel lay directly astern of us. The captain's hope was that we might not only go clear of the coaster, but drive upon a small, sandy beach at the end of Smutty Nose. But the heave of the sea and the slant of the wind drove us to one side, and we went upon the rocks instead.

There was a shock, a grinding crash as she struck. Then we seemed to stop; and now the sea broke over us in fury.

"To the dory, boys! The schooner will go to pieces!" shouted the captain.

Without much difficulty we got the dory into the water to leeward. Jack, my shipmate, flung his clothes bag into the stern of the boat, while I threw a coil of small rope into her ere I tumbled in myself. There was but one pair of oars. These the captain took, and began to pull toward Manana.

Away from the lee of the schooner we were exposed to the full fury of the gale, and the course to which we were compelled kept us in the trough of the sea. Every moment it seemed as though we must be swamped, and in spite of all that we could do we were drifting rapidly toward Drunken Gut.

Suddenly a tholepin broke. Before another could be put in the place we were afoul of the standing rigging of a sunken vessel, the dory almost on her broadside, and we in imminent danger of being washed overboard. But clinging instinctively to the uppermost gunwale, we succeeded in righting the dory and working her clear of the wreck. Again we were adrift indeed, for we had lost an oar, and now had but one.

Our destruction now was apparently but a question of moments, for if we escaped the reefs and boiling surf upon one side, we were almost certain to be dashed against the iron sides of Manana upon the other.

I was in the bow, peering ahead, when the hull of a vessel suddenly loomed up almost directly before us, and apparently at anchor. While the captain endeavored to keep the dory headed for her, I bent one end of my coil of line to the painter ring. Then grasping a bight in my hand as the dory grazed the schooner's sides, I made a spring for the rail and climbed on board. Then I caught my line round a cleet, checked the drift of the dory and brought her alongside.

We soon found that the schooner was deserted. Her crew had sought safety on shore. We thought ourselves exceedingly fortunate that their vessel had been in our way.

But we had been upon the deck scarcely 20 minutes when the captain startled us with the announcement that the vessel was rapidly filling. It was evident that she had dragged from the harbor, and first striking upon the reef, had swung to her present position.

While the captain searched for a spare oar, I grasped the line by which I had fastened the dory and was horrified to find it slack. No dory was there—the rope which had held her trailed away astern and was lost in the darkness. Our last hope seemed to have departed.

But no—as I peered through the gloom I caught sight of a boat attached to a long warp that trailed over the taffrail of the schooner. It was a seine boat. We quickly drew it up and got into it.

Our drift in the dory had carried us considerably to the leeward of Smutty Nose, so that in our present position the force of the sea was much broken. As we crouched beneath the gunwale of our new refuge, momentarily expecting to see the abandoned schooner go down, a light from Smutty Nose gradually shone out over the waters.

We saw that a fire had been kindled upon the island. Down at the water's edge people were moving about among the rocks. In a little while a boat seemed to leave the shore and drift slowly toward us.

As her erratic movements seemed to indicate that she had no one aboard, but was drifting at the will of the wind, I attached no special significance to her appearance, though I glanced toward her occasionally. Yet nearer she came, sometimes directly toward us.

At times a heave of the sea would throw her far to one side, then she would seem to linger a moment, to start off anew in our direction. Half dazed from exhaustion, I watched her with flagging interest until she was close at hand. Then I saw the captain reach out and grasp her by the gunwale and hold her fast alongside.

He shouted for us to get into her. No sooner had we all obeyed than she started swiftly for the shore. Then I perceived that a long warp led from her to Smutty Nose and that the people there were pulling us toward them.

Owing to the direction of the current the boat could not be dragged back to the point from which she started, and we struck the outer edge of the wide reef of rocks. It was nearly low tide, and, though the sea did not break upon the reef, every wave that rolled through the narrow passage boiled up over it in a swelling flood, submerging the rocks many feet, to subside again, leaving them entirely bare.

To run this gauntlet was our next trial. Waiting until a sea retired, we started over the slippery, weed-grown rocks and ran as fast as we could until an incoming wave overtook us. Then we flung ourselves flat upon the reef while the flood boiled up over us, clutching the rockweed with both hands and clinging to resist the terrible undertow backward.

When the reflux left the reef bare again we rose and ran once more. Four times the flood passed over us. Then, breathless, bruised and half dead, I felt a grasp upon my collar and I was dragged up out of the grip of the sea—safe at last.—Youth's Companion.

A Troublesome Plant.

A few years ago, while on a visit to Colombia, a New Orleans man saw and admired a water hyacinth. He brought some bulbs home and grew them in tubs in his front yard. In about two years patches of the flower appeared in the Bayou St. John, which connects New Orleans with Lake Pontchartrain. In another year the bayou was full of it, so that navigation was impeded. Now all the canals near New Orleans are overrun and covered up with the invading flower. Great masses of it are floating in the lake, rivers running into the lake are choked with it and it has traveled a hundred miles to the westward of New Orleans. It grows enormously, spreads like rabbits in Australia, chokes all the bayous and streams it gets into and is a tremendous nuisance, the limitations of which are not in sight. In Colombia it is a harmless, flowering plant that grows in tubs, but in Louisiana the conditions suit it and have developed it into the most flourishing and obstinate pest.—Chicago News.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS.

After the Railroads.

There seems to be a well-defined scheme to destroy as much of the Omaha railroad bridge property at Mankato as is possible in a given time. On Sunday the brakes on two flat cars on the spur track loaded with stone were unloosened and they started down the grade at a rapid pace, crashing into some box cars, and making kindling wood of one of them. The two watchmen at the bridge work were surprised at 4 o'clock in the morning by finding the boiler of the piledriver engine dry and the flues burned and cracked from the fire. They had left their work a few moments to enjoy a chat in the contractor's shanty a few paces distant, and in their absence somebody quietly opened a plug and let all the water out of the boiler. The fires had been banked and there was no natural cause for the diabolical job.

Menage Coming Back.

Louis F. Menage is coming back to Minneapolis. This is the information which the Hennepin county commissioners have received from a source which they deem thoroughly reliable. In fact, they are so impressed with this belief that at a recent meeting they rescinded their offer of a reward of $5,000 for his capture. Their idea in doing this is to prevent unnecessary expenditure of the money. Should the offer remain in effect while Menage was returning, openly and above board, some over-zealous person might take it into his head to secure the arrest of said Menage, and also to secure the $5,000.

Application Denied.

The officials of the Duluth land office have denied the application of Alex McDonald to contest the homestead entry of A. L. Larson, to lots 3, 5 and 6, in section 30, township 63, range 11. The grounds upon which the desired privilege of contesting the entry made is that an application by the state of Minnesota to contest the lands described as lots 3 and 5, is now pending before the commissioner of the general land office. Under the circumstances Receiver Ryan and Delegate Taylor did not consider it was within their jurisdiction to grant the application of Mr. McDonald.

He Cooly Walked Out.

Dan Ryan, one of the nerviest burglars in the state, sustained his reputation, when he cooly left the prisoner's box in Judge Jamison's court in Minneapolis and walked out of the building and is now in hiding, the authorities know not where. He had been taken to the court house with a batch of eleven other prisoners, and while the deputies were keeping the crowd back from the railing and had their attention engaged in this manner, he picked up his cap and gloves, carelessly sauntered out through the judge's private office and escaped.

Republican State Convention.

The republican state convention to select four delegatas at large to the St. Louis convention and nominate electoral ticket of nine members will be held in Minneapolis Tuesday, March 24, beginning at noon. The basis of the representation will be the same as that for the state nominating convention in 1894, which will give 1,151 delegates, five at large from each county and one for each 200 votes, or major fraction thereof, cast for Nelson for governor in 1894.

He has gone to the depth of 94 feet and fine specimens have been brought to the surface. Mr. Lindquist says that he will have an expert from Iowa to investigate the find, and if it proves to be what it now indicates he will realize well on his farm, which he bought about two years ago.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Graham Pudding.—Take one cupful of graham flour, one cupful of sweet milk, one of molasses and one of chopped raisins; add one teaspoonful soda, stir and stand for three hours.—Housekeeper.

—Egg Gruel.—Beat the yolk of an egg with a tablespoonful of powdered sugar, add a teacupful of boiling water, then stir in quickly the beaten white, season with a dash of nutmeg.—Orange Judd Farmer.

—Common seashore sand will greatly improve the appearance of old velvet and remove all the dust. Sprinkle the velvet well with the fine sand and then brush until none remains, always brushing the pile the wrong way.

—Mend your gloves with fine cotton thread instead of silk. The silk is apt to cut the kid. In mending gloves turn them inside out and sew them over and over. If there is a tear in the glove set a piece of kid under it and secure it with a few stitches.

—To make use of sweet, insipid and tasteless apples stew them and mix them with stewed cranberries in the proportion of one part of cranberries to two parts of apples. Not quite as much sugar will be required as for the cranberries alone. Strain them through a colander, and serve cold with meats or fowl.

—Breakfast Fritters.—Two eggs, beat well, two cupfuls of buttermilk or sour milk, a little salt, a half teaspoonful of soda, and flour to make a batter stiff enough to drop from the spoon. Have a skillet of hot lard and drop in small spoonfuls and fry a light brown. They are nice and light. For a change you can put in some chopped meat or oyster for each fritter, for those that like oysters.—Western Rural.

—Walnut Cake.—To be put together as above. One and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of butter, whites of four eggs, two cupfuls of sifted flour, one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, three-quarters of a cupful of new milk, one cupful of walnut meats. If English instead of shell back, break the pieces, as they are rather large to use whole. Be sure that no bits of shell get in with the meats. I have found that to leave out half the butter of any recipe leaves a good batter for nut cake.—N. Y. Observer.

ALL HAIL THE FICHU.

It Is the Most Fascinating Adjunct to a Woman's Toilet.

There is at last a tendency to disregard the fascinations of the huge sleeves, and many of the most picturesque evening gowns which are now emanating from the best Parisian ateliers show the tight sleeves trimmed just above the elbow with three obtrusive frills. This is, of course, specially suited to the Watteau style of dress, and the effect of bareness, which would otherwise strike us from the absence of the extreme fullness on the shoulder, may be counteracted by the double frills on the full fichu, which is the legitimate addition to gowns of this period. On serious consideration—or, at least, as serious as the festive season permits me to give anything—I am tempted to swear that the fichu is the most becoming article of attire ever invented. It may, if worn with tact, conceal or reveal feminine charms—or want of them. It has a grace all its own, and there is scarcely an occasion to which it may not be adapted. You may wear it in the summer over a cotton gown crossed over the bust and tied at the back into a bow with long ends. It will impart a measure of elegance to the simplest of frocks. You can buy it in white mousseline de soie and tuck it into an embroidered corselet, providing it with a simple skirt of silk or satin, when it will offer itself as suitable for wearing at the small dinner, or you may choose for its service chiffon and frills of old lace, and drape it round with decolletage of your white satin gown, permitting it to show the top of your shoulders, to fasten in the front with a bow and ends to reach to the waist, completing the effect with large satin sleeves and a full white satin skirt, and perhaps a single rose set in the front of the knot which holds the bow. I promise you the general effect will be voted alike by your dearest friends and your dearest enemies "perfectly charming." As further inducement to worship at the shrine of the fichu let me casually point out the fact that it will adorn the dressing gown, and that this form of decoration for the top of the nightgown is unrivaled.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

WARM FEET.

They Are Essential to Health—Proper Covering for the Feet.

You will never be in good health and never do your best work if your feet are constantly cold. Grave diseases of the throat and lungs are caused by cold feet alone, and these troubles are always aggravated by a frigid condition of the lower extremities. If proper footwear does not give relief, consult a physician, for the chances are the system is "run down" and radical measures are necessary. In nine cases out of ten, however, the foot covering is to blame, either because of its shape or its material. Save in warm weather, and for low-cut shoes, leather, as ordinarily prepared, has serious objections. It lacks two prime qualities—porosity and capacity for absorption—being in this respect too much like rubber. No foot can remain either comfortable or healthy if kept in a perpetual bath of its own emanations and excretions. Leather, especially that of the more porous varieties, may be tolerated for the outside, but for cold weather it should always be lined with woolen cloth, or, better, with wool felt. In fact, for all cold climates and for winter wear in all climates where there is any winter, a footgear made from all wool felt approaches the ideal. According to modern notions, any illness in one part of the body may be occasioned by some irritating cause far removed from the seat of the trouble. Just how this is cannot always be clearly explained, but that such connection does sometimes exist is beyond dispute. In the matter under discussion, if the nerves of the whole body are irritated by a tight shoe, or the extreme coldness of the extremities makes extra demand upon the blood supply, there is neither nerve force nor blood enough left for other functions.—Vocalist.

A Simile in Smoke.

There's all sorts of grades of tobacco plant. The best comes from Havana. There's all sorts of grades of sarsaparilla plant. The best comes from Honduras. If you want cheap tobacco, all right—provided you get value for your money. Cheap tobacco's not as good to smoke—but it don't cost as much.

If you want cheap sarsaparilla . . . But you don't want it. Of course you don't. You are paying for the best. To pay for the best and get anything but Honduras sarsaparilla is like paying for Havana cigars and getting Pittsburg "Stogies." There's only one sarsaparilla made exclusively from the imported Honduras plant. That's Ayer's. Just keep it in mind that you are paying for Honduras sarsaparilla when you are paying for the best; but you don't get what you pay for unless you get Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Any doubt about it? Send for the "Curebook."
It kills doubts but cures doubters.

DELANO DIARY

—Quite a little wheat is still being marketed at this point.

—Saturday, March 7, will be the regular monthly Delano Fair Day.

—Our lumber merchants and others are stocking up for spring trade.

—The Bruggeman building is again vacant, the family that have been living there having moved away.

—Hay, as we predicted last fall, is now more plenty than most people expected and meets with slow sale.

—Maple syrup has not yet appeared on our streets, but with such weather as we have been having it will soon come.

—Coming. Lew Johnson's Plantation Minstrels. They are well recommended by the papers where they have been.

—The Delano Furniture Company can now furnish you with a fine baby carriage. Call and examine the new brakes.

—Read the Advertisement of the Northwestern Agriculturist and $1.60 worth of seeds and the GAZETTE all for $1.50.

—Bicycles are being hauled out of their winter quarters and oiled up for use. Some of them have already taken a few spins about town.

—The chemistries have finally arrived and the High School expect to be diving into the mysteries of things in general about next week.

—Washington's Birthday was observed with the usual dinner and entertainment at the City Hall. Everybody seemed to enjoy the occasion.

—If the fine weather keeps up the farmers will be apt to commence seeding next week. Something a little out of the usual run of things in this latitude.

- If you want to have fun attend the entertainment of Lew Johnson's Minstrels, at the City Hall tomorrow Saturday night. People's popular prices.

—Read the interesting letter from Hon. B. F. Christlieb, who is wintering in California and then remember that our Minnesota winter this time compares favarable with that of the Pacific Slope.

—W. H. Mapes, who has been suffering for the past few weeks, with erysipelas and gangrene of the feet, had his right leg amputated below the knee on Tuesday. He now has hopes of a speedy recovery of his usual health.

—One of the High School Sophs came to grief Wednesday night, while chasing a schoolmate, on the west side. His breeches were torn and a severe wound made on his leg. He says when he goes to Congress he will try and have a law made that there shall be no barb wire fences.

- -From accounts in Minneapolis papers Otis L. Billings has been arrested for perjury, and released on bail, while Assistant Claim Agent Howard and Attorney Dodge of the G. N. road and Ernest Otto, of this place, are left with records to clear.

—Several sick folks are reported this week. The Camerons are better, except Mr. C. Albert Johnson is on the mend. Joseph Cramer is quite poorly yet. Jimmie Wharton is nearly well. The weather is fine for sick as well as for well people.

—The oldest inhabitant can't remember a winter to compare with the present one for mildness. Not even Ill Dyer, the weather prognosticator, knows of anything like it. And the old croaking about going South so often heard in cold weather seems to have left the minds of the most exacting rheumatics.

--Some one dumped a dead hog over the river bank near Borsch's store a few days ago. The Health department of the village had to order its removal at the village expense. There is a severe penalty for throwing dead animals into streams, and it would be better and might be cheaper for people to bury such things than to leave them where they are offensive or injurious to the health of neighbors.

--After reading accounts of the terrible epidemics of typhoid fever and diphtheria from impure water at Duluth and other places it ought not to be a hard matter to get our citizens to clean up their premises ond alleys as early as possible this spring. Several lots in the rear of houses on River Street need attention, as the water runs onto the vacant land reeking with offensive washings of other lots it becomes the best kind of a germ producer.

A Sad Accident.

On Friday last a sad accident happened in the home of David Quady near town. While the father and mother were away from the house getting a load of hay, their five year old son, Robert, was shot and instantly killed by his brother Eddie, aged seven years. The killing was done with a shot gun with which the children were playing. It seems that the gun had been left where the children could get it, but the shells for it were in a cupboard so that the children would have to use a chair to get them. The father and mother were gone from the house about an hour and or their return found the little boy lying dead on the floor. It is thougt that he was trying to blow into the muzzle of the gun when it was discharged by his brother. The older boy, Eddie was very much frightened and it was thought best not to question him too closely until his fright was over. So that we can only conjecture as to the actual way the accident happened. It is said that no shot marks can be found about the room although the back of the child's head was completely blown off. The parents of the child wish to thank their friends and neighbor for their kind aid and sympathy in this awful hour of sadness. The GAZETTE extends sympathy and hopes that no more such fatal accidents may occur in our community.

County Cullings.

Conventions are already being called. If you are patriotic in the least degree you will attend, if possible your party's caucuses and conventions and do what you can to aid in turning the balance in favor of your theories of a good and free government, OF the people, FOR the people and BY the people.

A Republican County Convention for the county of Wright will be held at 11 A. M. on Thursday, March 19, at Buffalo, to elect delegates to the State Convention and to the Congressional Convention. The Primary election for the election of delegates will be held in all the election districts in the county, Tuesday, March 17, polls open from 3 to 5 P. M. Under the new law town and village committees to give six days notice.

The Old Settlers association at Buffalo voted to hold a meeting on the third Saturday in June, at which time the citizens of the village will entertain all the old settlers that come. This is a move of the right kind. Old people who have lived here since their youth can travel to Buffalo at that season of the year and will be glad to again clasp the hands of many who were their neighbors years ago but who they have not seen for ten or twenty years. Washington's Birthday will be observed by Buffaloites just the same.

Washington's Birthday.

Saturday, the 22nd, was an ideal day. There being no snow, people came on wheels. The surrounding towns and the country was well represented. Many from Hennepin county attended. The City Hall was filled to overflowing with interested participants in the enjoyment. After a sumptuous dinner, with hot coffee for all, the exercises of the day were had.

President Lindsley made a very few opening remarks, followed by a song by Misses Haffner and Schaffer.

F. A. Barth, of Watertown, one of the oldest settlers in the country, represented Delano's acting mayor, who was sick and did not attend. Mrs. A. Fassett, of Rockford, read an interesting essay.

The Oration was made by Prof. Charles S. Hawker, who filled the very high expectation of his vast crowd of hearers.

Misses Young and Murphy and Messrs. Freeman and Kæmmer then rendered a song.

F. F. Chancellor was next on the programme with an able speech. well delivered, followed by an instrumental duet by Mr. and Mrs. Davies. Encored.

Dr. Catlin made a brief speech, followed by a recitation by Miss DeKay and a song by Misses Young, Murphy and others.

J. H. McGary next addressed the audience, followed by another song.

A recitation by Miss Erma Wilder, a speech by Dr. Fassett, and a song by the St. Peter's School children completed the exercises.

Things passed off smoothly and everybody enjoyed the meeting. Friends who had not met for years found each other here. And a general feeling of equality, not always found, seemed to permeate the gathering. It was an occasion long to be remembered as a sunny spot in the lives of all present.

Officers for the ensueing year were elected as follows:

President,—George P. Schaffer.
Vice President,—J. W. McDonald.
Sesretary,—T. J. Catlin.
Treasurer,—Tiff Hitsman.

DIED.

SOCHA.—In town of Franklin, on Thursday, Feby. 27, August Socha, aged 34 years. Deceased was a member of the Franklin Band.

MAPES. In Delano, on Friday, Feby. 28, William H. Mapes, aged 51 years, 4 mo.

OBITUARY.

Mr. Mapes was an old settler in Wright County He has been an active business man at Montrose, where he was buying wheat for Cargill Bros. lately. He leaves a wife and two sons to mourn his death. He has been afflicted for the past fifteen years with a tape worm, and for the past five or six weeks has had erysipelas and gangrene in his feet. He visited St, Luke's Hospital in St. Paul but could receive no encouragement, and returned home and then to Delano where he had his leg amputated, last Tuesday, in hopes of saving his life. After having been under the influence of ether the worm seemed to trouble him more than before. Although his limb appeared to be healing nicely, on Friday morning he grew worse and died before daylight. The funeral will be held at Montrose on Sunday.

Card of Thanks.

We would most respectfully tender our thanks to the kind friends and neighbors who so freely assisted and consoled us in our late affliction, the death of our little Robbie.

CHRIST BEFORE PILATE.

Pilate stood on that blood-stained pavement,
Pleading for our Saviour's life:
With pallid cheeks, as he gazed on the throng
Of that cruel, surging strife.

What shall I do with this innocent man?
No wrong in him I see.
Crucify him, they loudly cried.
And nail him to the tree.

Pilate's heart within him sank,
But, as that message came from his wife,
One more appeal, in THOUGHT, he said,
Though it be at the risk of my life.

That grand appeal was forever lost—
The prophecies must be fulfilled.
Washing his hands, I am FREE, he cried,
On YOU, his blood be spilled.

Boastful Peter, now where was he?
TREMBLING, like a child.
While Pilate bold, like a warrior of old,
Defended Christ all the while.

Peter denied the Saviour thrice,
And went to heaven, we tell:
While Pilate pled for our Saviour's life,
Some SAY, he went to hell

In taking the nature of our God
Loving, kind, and true.
Did he scorn Pilate's kind intent?
Would he do the same with you?

Thus, Jesus of Nazareth, was led away,
And each anguished step he trod.
Was but the fulfilling of
The prophecies of God.

WE are in receipt of The Observer, printed at Portland, Conn., a scientific monthly of neat and attractive appearance and full of good things from the scientific world.

SOME members of Congress and others, are objecting to the statue of Pierre Marquette, presented by the state of Wisconsin, remaining in Statuary Hall, Washington. It is said to be a fine peice of workmanship.

OUR Republican newspaper neighbors are having a terrible time about Congressman Towne. Two years ago they boosted him into office, and by his eloquence he seems able to cope with the whole grist of them.

THE Oratorical contest, at Hamline, is said to have been the best yet held and resulted in the selection of T. H. Wilkinson, of St. Peter, for first place and A. H. Tasker, Hamline, second place. They will participate in the State contest to be held in Minneapolis, in April.

Hon. W. H. HOULTON, of Elk River, was elected Superintendent of the St. Cloud Reformatory, by the board of managers at their meeting, Wednesday. Mr. Houlton formerly represented our legislative district, in the State Senate. He will doubtless make a good man for the place.

THE Republican Review, of Nashville, Tenn., Vol. 1, No. 1, with the names of H. A. Hasslock, Publisher, and Jno. W. Stone, Editor, was received this week. It is neatly gotten up and is a live paper even if it is advocating Republican doctrine in a Democratic stronghold.

THE Independent Democrats of St. Paul have taken time by the forelock and placed in nomination for Mayor, the Hon. O. O. Cullen. In case the balance of the ticket suits them no further nominations will be made: in case it does not a full ticket is to be nominated after the other conventions are held.

SINCE Secretary Carlisle's conferences with the bankers and financiers result only it placing a larger bonded indebtedness on the country, it might be well for him to consult with a few of the individuals who, by daily toil, will have to help pay the interest on these bonds. They may suggest something better than bonds.

STILL the candidates come for a place at the head of the Republican State ticket. Now, Moses E. Clapp and W. E. Lee are added to the list. The first is an ex-Attorney General, while the latter is ex-Raformatory Superintendant at St. Cloud. If the candidates continue to flock after the standard they will soon be in the majority.

JUST now, while the money question is uppermost in the minds of all, and people ars seeking education in this line, comes to our table a pamphlet of 111 pages neatly gotten up, which gives a history of Money, Banking, Stocks and Bonds, which is exceedingly useful for reference. Bankers, Stock dealers, and other persons directly interested in finance, wishing a free copy are requested to address Jas. E. Taylor & Co., 55 Broadway, New York. The book is well worth having.

THE Van Dusen Elevator, A 2, in Minneapolis, was burned with nearly a million bushels of wheat, on Monday.

EVERY little while we read of Secretary Carlisle holding a meeting with the bankers and monied men of the country, to devise ways and means of restoring the $100,000,000. limit of gold on hand in the Treasury, and the result is always about the same. More bonds are issued, and the people are called upon to pay more interest. Since the Republican Congress came into power the same thing goes on, and now seems likely to be repeated again, in the near future.

And yet we are told that we now are, and have been since 1873, under a gold standard. That silver was demonetized then, by Congress. If this is so; if we are attempting to do business under a gold standard and are running behind every few months requiring the issuing of more bonds it is about time for us to get back onto the old standard; to get two wheels to our financial cart; we don't seem capable of learning to ride the unicycle; the gold dollar is too small, and there is not enough of them.

Presidential Possibilities.

No man can say positively, as yet, who will be the candidates for President and Vice President, in the campaign now hastening on. Neither is it known what the main issue in the battle will be over.

Republican candidates are plenty; they seem to think it matters not what the questions to be settled, all that is necessary for them to do is to get their names, by some hook or crook onto the tickets of the G. O. P., and they can sail complaisantly down the turbid stream to the White House.

Democrats seem to be waiting until they see what the Republicans do at St. Louis. If the McKinley crowd wins out, and the Protection theory is made the leading issue, with a plank that can be read to suit any view on the financial question, it is altogether likely that the leading monied Democrats will try to make a platform with a gold standard, for the leading issue, and smother down the tariff question all they can. And will likely nominate Carlisle or some one favoring a gold standard. In case things are patched up in this way the People's Party will stand a good show of getting a big following, if they announce as the principal planks of their platform, free trade and bimetallism.

If the Republicans should conclude to pronounce in favor of a gold standard, and to let the tariff alone, of course Tom Reed, or C. K. Davis or almost any candidate would fill the bill who was willing to run, on a sure thing as they would call it. Then the Democrats might surprise themselves and friends by pronouncing in favor of Bimetallism and Free Trade, which, with a good ticket, would catch a large majority of the disaffected Republicans, as well as hold together their own ranks, and stop the chances of haying a third party sweep everything clean. Now is the time when our Democratic statesmen want to be careful and do what is best for the country, and the voters will see it and fall into line all right.

Everybody is tired of being fooled with theories, and are ready to grasp hold of facts wherever they find them.

If the old parties wish to hold their voters they must advance their doctrines, plant their standards firmly and honestly on the platforms that express the views of the party, platforms that mean something, and resolve to carry out what they promise and nominate men who will adhere to the principles they believe in, and are elected on.

Money Standard.

The great majority of voters in the United States seem to be against a mono-metallic standard, whether it be gold or silver. A few, apparently those interested in making wealth by handling money, are for a gold standard alone. But thinking men; men who are not dependent on the business transactions; upon the gambling institutions of our country for their living; and men who labor, and toil for what they have, and like to haye their pay in good hard cash; in money that is good anywhere they are apt to spend it, favor a bimetallic standard; favor the gold and silver of their youth, and of our country since its foundation; and of other countries for centuries gone by. Some of the gold bugs tell us that if we have both metals we will soon loose our gold and have "mono-metallism;" have nothing left but silver; that our country would then be a "silver country." If this is so, if the country would come to mono-metallism, and that is what the one standard folks want, why do they find falt? Why don't they vote for "Free Silver" and put the country on a single standard basis if they wish it, and think that will do it? Why be so particular about whether the single standard be gold or silver, if a single standard is what they want?

But, they tell us, we must adopt the gold staudard because England has it; and then we must put a Chinese wall of Protection Tariff around our country so we can't spend our gold there. We must not have silver because Mexico has, and yet we must try to cater to the trade of Mexico what we can. How absurd the arguments appear when placed beside of each other. What foolishness.

Again we are told that we must keep a pile of gold in the Treasury to issue money on. We already haye a pile of silver, why not use silver as well as gold to redeem our bills?

How can any one expect to have more money to handle, if the government can't keep her gold surplus up when there is some silver to help, after the country is entirely rid of the white metal? Would it not be better to have both metals used to their fullest extent as money than to do so big a credit business? We mean for the average citizen of our country. Of course some men who liye by counting over other people's money and having all they possibly can, stick to their fingers would have to seek other employment.

Then there is the great hue and cry about the "endless chain," the greenbacks. It has been said that they were made use of to draw the gold out of the Treasury. They should be paid in either metal, and white coin should be worth as much as yellow, and if this proviso was lived up to it would be. As for their acting as an "endless chain" they are no more so, even as used, than are the notes of other people. If Uncle Sam pays out Greenbacks, it is for value received, and the person taking them is entitled to haye his pay in the coin of the country. If he takes paper money; Uncle Sam's promise to pay in coin, whenever he comes, or the banker accumulates a pile of notes and comes for coin, he is entitled to it, and instead of the Government being out anything by the transaction it is gainer to the amount of interest saved while the greenbacks were in the hands of others. Had Uncle Sam enough gold and silver to pay his bills instead of giving out his notes; or, rather, had Uncle Sam done like other people do, scraped together his gold and silver, coins, bricks, seignorage and all, and handed them out, for his debts, as he went along he would not be pestered with these moneyed Syndicates every few days. What earthly use is there in having $100,000,000. in gold piled up, most people don't know just where, paying interest on bonds issued to get it, and a big lot of unclaimed silver laying around the Treasury vaults, while the people can't get enough of either metal, or even of both together, to make a decent jingle?

Besides the Peoples Party and the Free Silver Party, there are many Democrats and Republicans in favor of the "dollar of our dads," and many more who favor an international bimetallism. Most of these will oppose a gold standard. On the whole, it looks now as if it will be a very hard matter for both the old parties to adopt a gold standard platform, and if they do, as it the people will rise in their might and yote it down.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feby. 28, 1896.

President Cleveland is not worrying over the silly criticism in connection with the recent arrests of Cuban fillibusters. Only those ignorant of law make these criticisms. As well might a city or county officer refuse to serve a warrant which has been sworn out against a criminal as for U. S. officials to refuse to arrest fillibusters when they are pointed out by the Spanish minister in the act of taking their departure from the United States in defiance of the neutrality laws. Should this government refuse to make these arrests Spain would be in a position to claim enormous money damages from the United States, and the claim would be allowed by any international court. Let this be remembered by all. The arrest of known fillibusters is not a matter of sympathy but of dollars and cents. The President is fully aware that most of the people of this country sympathize with the Cubans, and there is little doubt that he does, too, but he is too honorable a man to let that interfere with his duty. He has the interest of the United States to look out for first. It is altogether probable that after Congress shall have finished its speech making about Cuba and decided in what form its opinion shall be expressed that President Cleveland will have his say in the matter, and less that his say will meet the approval of the country.

The democrats of the House are a unit in opposing the resolution censureing ambassador Bayard, because they agree with the report made by the minority of the House committee on Foreign Affairs, that Mr. Bayard has done nothing to deserve censure. But this is election year and fairness and justice count for nothing when the republicans think they see a chance to make political capital. However, they may find the adoption of this resolution to be a boomerang.

The democratic Congressional committee elected its old officers, Senator Faulkner, of W. Va., chairman, and Lawrence Gardner, of Washington, secretary, and appointed a committee of five, of which Representative Hutcheson, of Texas, was made chairman, to select members of the committee from those states which have a solid republican delegation in Congress. At the joint Congressional caucus which named the members of the campaign committee, the sentiment was almost unanimous that the democrats have more than a fighting chance to elect a majority of the next House, and the members of the campaign committee are going to work with the intention of doing so if possible.

It has been claimed that a majority of the present House are members of the A. P. A. Whether this be true I cannot say, but there is no longer any doubt that a majority of the House are dominated by the A. P. A. This was fully proved by the fight made upon the appropriations for Catholic charitable institutions in the District of Columbia, and again this week by the vote of the House prohibiting the payment of any of the money carried by the Indian appropriation bill to Catholic Indian Schools.

Democrats have known for some time that the House tariff bill was dead, but it was not until the Senate again this week, voted down a motion to consider the bill that the republicans would believe it was a real sure enough legislative corpse. But they have no doubts about it now. Even Dingley, Czar Reed's man who posed as its author, now admits that it is dead beyond all power of resurection. Its death in the Senate merely saved President Cleveland the trouble of vetoing it, as he would certainly have done had the Senate passed it.

A democratic rainbow is in sight, between the split of the silver and anti-silver republicans, while has had an excellent effect upon the members of the democratic party in Congress. It has been known all along that this split would have to come, but it was not generally expected until the St. Louis convention. It has come now and the words used by Senators Teller and Carter on the silver side and by Senators Sherman, Morrill, Platt and Aldrich on the anti-silver side were of such a nature that it is likely to be permanent, unless one or the other side makes an abject surrender which is not likely.

Unless Mr. Thomas Reed shall see fit, in the interest of his Presidential boom, to prevent it, it is likely, from the action of committees, already determined upon, that this Congress will provide not only for a material increase in our navy, but for the beginning of a comprehensive system of coast defences.

Damage Suit Against the Midway Minute Men.

A $10,085 damage suit was brought against the Midway Minute Men in the District Court, on the 27th by C. O. Anderson, for damage to his business and peace of mind. This action is brought against Charles M. Benham, Geo. S. Innis, Frank W. Buswell, S. L. Howell, Daniel W. Doty and H. A. Campbell, for conspiracy for hiring spies and malicious prosecution, injuring his business and keeping him under arrest for several hours. The defendents are all prominent, respected residents of the Midway District, men above reproach. We have no idea that Mr. Anderson will collect as damages $10,085 or 85 cents. L. J. Dobner is complaintant's attorney.—The Interurban.

True Hospitality.

While no very considerate person will make an unsolicited visit! yet it often happens that under a misapprehension of our situation, and sometimes through lack of thoughtfulness, friends will write proposing to visit us at most inopportune times. Many of us feel under such circumstances that all our plans of work should be sacrificed to receive the visitor, and we accordingly abandon what domestic projects we have in mind, turn ourselves and our households into confusion, for days and, unhappily, sometimes, weeks, we devote ourselves to the entertainment of our guests under the feeling that we are at least showing proper hospitality, however grudgingly in our hearts we do it.

It would surely be much fairer toward one's friends and more just to one's own household to say frankly to such visitors that it is not convenient to receive them. Any reasonable person would appreciate such honesty. But even if it should not be quite understood, or liked, it is much less apt to have unpleasant results than an enforced hospitality which, however well meant, is almost sure, sooner or later, to be felt, and would certainly cause a guest more discomfort than a kind refusal in the beginning.—From "Modern Hospivality." in Demorest's Magazine for March.

MINNIE'S BUTTER BEST.

North Star State Takes Three of Four Prizes.

Elgin, Ill., formerly the queen of buttermakers, has surrendered the palm to Minnesota buttermakers, who captured three out of four prizes at the recent buttermakers' convention at Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Thomas Milton, of St. Paul, took the grand sweepstakes and silver trophy for the best tub of separator butter made in the United States.

The Belle Plain creamery, operated by the Milton company, received second honors, and medals in the same class.

The Mabel creamery, of Mabel, Fillmore county, received second premium on gathered cream.

Never before has a single state taken such honors, and the compliment is peculiarly great in view of the fact that there were 500 competitors, representing every dairy state in the Union. The award confirms the verdict of the trade, which has for a year paid one-half to one cent per pound above the market price for the Minnesota product.

Dairy Commissioner Anderson says that the increase in the product of Minnesota creameries and the improvement in quality are due to the laws prohibiting the sale of oleomargarine, butterine and such products in the state.—Globe.

Railroad Land Taxation Convention.

Pursuant to the unanimous action of a mass meeting of citizens of Aitkin county, held on the 17th day of December, 1895, a non-partisan convention is hereby called to meet at Aitkin Minn., at 10 o'clock a. m. on Tuesday, March 17, 1896, at the court house in said village, for the purpose of devising ways and means of opening a campaign on the merits of the Anderson bill (to tax unused railroad lands) with a view of bringings about its ratification at the polls next November. To this convention we invite the citizens of our northern counties to send five or more delegates each, irrespective of party, and to that end request that the chairmen of the several county committees of such counties jointly call a convention in their respective counties for the purpose o selecting such delegates.

Woman's Column.

BY WRIGHT COUNTY W. C. T. U.

Under the heading "Wanted: More Penitentiaries," the New York Voice has the following editorial in its last issue:

Iowa's mulct law is bearing its legitimate fruit.

Under it the two penitentiaries of the state haye become so thronged with inmates that new room is absolutely required.

These two institutions are located at Fort Madison and Anamosa. A few days ago Warden Jones, of the Fort Madison penitentiary, came down to press the case before the legislature. At his request a meeting was called of the executive council and the penitentiary committees of both houses of the legislature. It was decided that a committee of five should at once visit the penitentiaries and take action. Governor Jackson was made chairman of the committee. Warden Jones said that something must be done to relieve the pressure. Even now the officers are forced to transfer convicts from one penitentiary to the other in order to find room for them. A carnival of murders, rapes and assaults has set in, and costly murdar trials are now in progress all over the state.

A little study into the penal statistics of the state taken from the official penitentiary reports of the past ten years reveals the cause of all this trouble.

During the four years 1886, 1887, 1888 and 1889 William Larrabee was governor and the prohibitory law was enforced with vigor. The result of this was a marked decrease in the census of the penitentiaries. Here is the average number of convicts for each of these four years: 1886, 697; 1887, 668; 1888, 597; and 1889, only 575, a decrease of almost 18 per cent, in four years.

Then came the four years of nullification under Governor Horace Boies, and the tide flowed the other way. The first year of his administration: 1890, the average bobbed up to 588, in 1891 the average jumped to 631, in 1892 another jump to 659, and in 1893 to 728 an increase of nearly 29 per cent.

But here the situation became acute and the wise legislature resolved to "regulate" things by passing the mulct law.

Here is the way they "regulated" it. The first year under the mulct, 1894, the number of convicts sprang up to 847 and for the year 1895 just closed the average reached 947, and now the officials shout for more cell room.

If this rate of increase is kept up during the other two years of Governor Jackson's term of office, the rate of increase for the four years will be more than 46 per cent. Almost twice as many convicts are in Iowa's penitentiaries under the mulct law as during the period under enforced Prohibition.

A VERY odd wedding occurred a few days ago at the residence of Rev. Mary T. Whitney in Boston The groom was Rev. Carl G. Horst, the pastor of the Second Unitarian church of Athol Mass., the bride was Miss Emily Aitken, of Boston, and the officiating minister was Rev. Martha C. Aitken, mother of the bride. Cases where a father marries his daughter are not infrequent, but this is, perhaps, the only instance on record where a mother has married her daughter.

IT is announced that the much talked of Li Hung Chang, who has been named as a Chinese envoy to St. Petersburg, will visit this country on the return trip No doubt the Chinese statesman will be an object of much curiosity on the part of Americans, especially if he brings along his yellow jacket, his peacock feather and all the other decorations which were taken from him and restored so frequently. And he will get a warm welcome because of the courtesy he so generously showed to Gen. Grant when the latter was visiting in China. Americans are not ungrateful.

He has committed to memory every chapter in the Bible except two. A NORTH DAKOTA man has evolved the idea that potatoes can be used as fuel, and after getting a red-hot fire he puts them on to keep it going. If the fire is hot enough to dry them out they will burn, and some enthusiastic newspapers see in his experiment a new use for Murphies, and a price regulator for the grower. If any man can invent a way to make water burn and give heat he may be able to get around the 85 per cent. of that article in the average potato and then he might as well save the 13 per cent. of starch that will be left, and buy coal with it. There certainly is no economy in this fuel.

In the house resolutions were presented declaring it to be the sense of congress that a state of war exists in Cuba; that the insurgents be given the right of belligerents, and that it is the sense of congress that the government of the United States use its influence to stop the war, if necessary, by intervention, and pledging the support of congress. In the house the bill authorizing the governor and local officers of Arizona to lease the educational lands of the territory for school purposes, which was vetoed by the president, was passed over the veto by a vote of 198 to 38. Senator Allison's (Ia.) credentials for the term beginning March 4, 1897, were presented. In the house the struggling patriots in Cuba were eulogized and sympathized with in a two hours' debate and the resolutions by the house foreign affairs committee favoring the insurgents were adopted as a substitute for those of the senate by a vote of 263 to 17. SPAIN APOLOGIZES.

Frenzy of the Barcelona Mob Deprecated by the Government.

Stars and Stripes Trailed in the Dust and Torn to Tatters—Expressions of Regret Reach Washington—Reparation Will Be Made.

Barcelona, March 2.—The fever of indignation and hate against the United States which seems to have taken possession of the heart of all Spain over the action of the United States senate in recognizing the provisional government of Cuba as belligerents, and in calling upon President Cleveland to use his good offices with Spain to secure the independence of Cuba, culminated in violent scenes here Sunday and an attack upon the United States consulate.

Madrid, March 2.—Dispatches from Barcelona state that an attack has been made upon the United States consulate in that city, notwithstanding the fact that the building was guarded. During the day a procession comprising 10,000 persons, headed by four republican members of the chamber of deputies, paraded through the principal streets of the city as a demonstration against the action of the American senate. A strong guard had been placed about the American consulate in anticipation of trouble. As the procession passed it there were some derisive cries and cat-calls. The crowd tried to force its way into the building, but the police and gendarmes succeeded in driving them away, but not until they had been forced to charge upon the mob with drawn sabers.

Strong Protest.

While this trouble was going on, the main body of the procession continued its march to the town hall, where the leaders of the demonstration handed to the mayor a strongly-worded protest against the action of the American senate, and also against the speeches that had been delivered therein on the Cuban question; it being declared that some of the speakers had grossly insulted Spain and the Spanish government, in defending Cuban bandits and outlaws.

Stoned the Consulate.

Subsequently a great crowd assembled in the Plaza Cataluna, and a number of patriotic speeches were delivered. The crowd became greatly excited by the burning oratory of the speakers, and after the meeting had broken up, a large number of those who had listened to the words glorifying Spain and denouncing the United States proceeded to the American consulate, where they gave vent to their patriotism by stoning the building, much to the damage of windows thereof. As in previous mob demonstrations in Barcelona, the police were almost impotent to disperse the rioters, who did about as they pleased.

Stars and Stripes Dishonored.

In the evening there was another outburst of disapproval of the United States and all things American. This time it took the form of publicly dishonoring the American flag. The rioters had purchased somewhere a large American flag, which, after it had been dragged through the streets, was pulled to pieces amid cries of "Long live Spain," and "Down with the Americans." There is still much excitement in the city.

After this outrage on the American flag, the mob became more violent, and a proposition to make a further demonstration against the American consulate was speedily acted upon. The mob proceeded to the consulate, in the meantime arming themselves with stones. Arriving at the consulate a perfect volley of missiles was directed against the shield over the doorway bearing the American coat of arms, which was battered almost to pieces. The mob in some way became possessed of several American flags, which were destroyed amid ribald jests and expressions of contempt for the nation they represented.

Mob Dispersed.

The situation was becoming more and more threatening, when reinforcements for the guards at the consulate arrived in the shape of a detachment of mounted gendarmes. The crowd was ordered to disperse, which they sullenly refused to do, whereupon the gendarmes charged them with drawn swords and put them to flight. Several of the rioters were injured by being trampled on. Until a late hour the boulevards were thronged by an excited crowd singing the "Marseillaise" and patriotic Spanish songs.

Bitter Feeling in Madrid.

Popular feeling here is bitter against the United States because of the action of the senate in adopting a resolution favoring the granting of belligerent rights to the Cuban rebels. As stated in the dispatches Saturday night, the stock market here responded to the excitement, and there was a material decline in purely Spanish and Cuban securities. In view of the financial difficulties under which the government is laboring, this is a most unfortunate time for Spanish securities to decline in value.

Preparing for Trouble.

The action of Admiral Berenger, minister of marine, in ordering the speedy preparation of six warships and some of the naval reserve vessels of the Spanish trans-Atlantic company for dispatch to the Bahama channel meets with hearty approval. It is very evident that, despite Prime Minister Canovas del Castillo's declaration that if President Cleveland should be compelled to indorse the action of congress it would not provoke an international conflict nor interrupt the friendly relations existing between Spain and the United States, the government is doing its utmost to prepare against any possible contingency. In addition to the warships Petayo, Vizcaya, Oyuendo, Maria Teresa, Lepanto and Alfonso XIII., the ministry of marine has ordered that several torpedo boats, and one torpedo catcher be made ready for immediate dispatch in the event of the United States acknowledging the Cubans as belligerents.

Acting under instructions from the government, no group of persons is allowed to approach the United States legation or the house occupied by Minister Taylor.

Quiet in Havana.

Havana, March 2.—There has been absolutely no outward demonstration of feeling against Americans here. The city is remarkably quiet. Marquis de Palmerola, secretary to the governor-general, speaking for the government, said that no manifestation would be permitted. The authorities were prepared to check any disturbance. They would follow the example of the central government and would prevent any gathering of the people to protest against the action of the American senate, should such a gathering be attempted. The marquis further said that after the action of the senate upon the belligerency question, and the meaning of belligerent rights were perfectly understood, it would be seen that there was nothing to affect the present friendly relations between Spain and the United States. Strict neutrality for the present would be maintained.

PROMPT TO APOLOGIZE.

Complete Reparation Is Offered for the Insult at Barcelona.

Washington, March 3.—A cablegram from our minister to Spain, Hon. Hannis Taylor, received early on Monday morning, informed Secretary Olney that the Spanish government had promptly disavowed any responsibility for the unfortunate riot at Barcelona on Sunday, during which a mob made a vicious assault on the American consulate. In addition to an expression of deep regret over the occurrence, the government offered to make complete reparation. Secretary Olney laid the dispatch before President Cleveland early Monday morning and on his return to the department he gave it to the press. The dispatch follows:

"Minister of state has just called to express deep regret that mob has insulted Barcelona consulate—breaking windows—and offered complete reparation. He informed me that government on its own motion had taken every precaution to guard legation and my residence. I have asked no protection."

Prior to the receipt of the dispatch, messages reporting the assault on the Barcelona consulate had been received from both Minister Taylor and Mr. Herbert Bowen, the consul at Barcelona. Senor Depuy de Lome, the Spanish minister, also was informed of the news and he waived ceremony and called on Secretary Olney at his residence Sunday to express, in advance of instructions, the regret of his government over the occurrence. These indications of the desire of the Spanish government to make every amend for the insult on the consulate were carefully considered by the president and Secretary Olney at the conference Monday morning. They were convinced that no affront had been given for which the government was responsible and it is understood that Secretary Olney has sent a dispatch to Minister Taylor instructing him to make known to the Spanish authorities the appreciation of this government of their prompt disavowal of the insult.

The incident is believed in official circles to be practically ended with Spain's repudiation of any responsibility for the attack of the mob and her evident desire to do all that is possible to make amends satisfactory to the United States.

The Senate Resolutions.

Washington, Feb. 29.—By a vote of 64 to 6 the senate of the United States put on record Friday its views and policy in relation to the existing revolution in Cuba. All through the debate there ran a hardly concealed contempt for the power of Spain. The resolutions as passed by the senate are as follows:

"Resolved, By the senate (the house of representatives concurring), that in the opinion of congress a condition of public war exists between the government of Spain and the government proclaimed and for some time maintained by force of arms by the people of Cuba, and that the United States of America should maintain a strict neutrality between the contending powers, according to each all the rights of belligerents in the ports and territories of the United States.

"Resolved, further, That the friendly offices of the United States should be offered by the president to the Spanish government for the recognition of independence of Cuba."

The six senators who voted against the resolutions were Caffery (dem., La.), Chilton (dem., Tex.), George (dem., Miss.), Hale (rep., Me.), Morrill (rep., Vt.) and Wetmore (rep., R. I.).

Concurrent Resolutions in the House.

Washington, March 2.—The house Monday, after two hours' spirited debate under the limitations of a suspension of the rules, by a vote of 263 to 17, agreed to (in lieu of the resolutions adopted Friday by the senate) the concurrent resolutions reported last week, by its committee on foreign affairs, declaring that, in the opinion of congress, a state of public war exists in Cuba, the parties to which are entitled to belligerent rights, and between which the United States should observe a strict neutrality. They further declare that congress believes the only permanent solution of the contest is in the establishment of a government by the people of Cuba, and that it is the sense of congress that the government of the United States should use its good offices and influence to that end; and that the United States should be prepared to protect the legitimate interests of its citizens in Cuba, by intervention, if necessary. The last of the series of resolutions reported by the committee, pledging the support of congress to the president in carrying out the foregoing, was stricken out, it being thought unnecessary, being covered by the others.

A "joint" resolution had been proposed, but was abandoned on assurances from the white house that the president was friendly to Cuban belligerency.

Those voting in the negative were: Messrs. Atwood (rep., Mass.), Black (dem., Ga.), Boutelle (rep., Me.), Cobb (dem., Ala.), Culberson (dem., Tex.), Elliott (dem., S. C.), Gillett (rep., Mass.), Grout (rep., Vt.), Harrison (dem., Ala.), McCall (rep., Mass.), Moody (rep., Mass.), Russell (dem., Ga.), Simkins (rep., Mass.), Tucker (dem., Va.), Turner (dem., Ga.) and Wright (rep., Mass.)

Stanford Case Decision.

Washington, March 3.—Mr. Justice Harlan in the supreme court of the United States Monday afternoon announced the decision of the court in the case of the United States vs. Jane. L. Stanford, executrix of the late Senator Stanford, in favor of the executrix. This was a suit brought in the United States courts in California to recover something over $15,000,000, Stanford's proportion as a stockholder of the Central Pacific Railroad company, of the alleged liability of the corporation to the United States for bonds advanced to it by the government where the decision was also against the United States.

The father, the oldest daughter, Rosamond, aged 13, and his four-year-old child, Della, are already cold in death.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS.

Cathode Rays.

A third and successful test of the cathode rays was made at Winona. The objects to be photographed were fastened to wooden holders containing sensitive plates. On the first holder, which was 10 inches from the Crooke tube, were fastened a razor, in a leather case; a pair of spectacles, also in a leather case; a block of wood, an inch thick, into which had been driven pieces of zinc, steel and antimony; a block of aluminum, 6x4 inches in size and 1¼ inches in thickness, and a piece of paper, covering a strip of magnesium. To the second holder was strapped a frog, at a distance of nine inches from the light. Another holder held a small fish, a foot from the light, and to the last plate was attached the right hand of Prof. Freeman.

The frog plate was very satisfactory. The bones of the animal showed quite plainly. The other plates wese developed latter, and as the exposure was of great duration, it is hoped that these results will be most satisfactory.

More about Game Laws.

An intersting question has arisen in regard to the slaughter of game and fish in the Indian reservations in this state. A company has recently been formed which contemplates the sale of fish from Leech Lake, which is within the reservation. The idea was to secure from the Indians some of the privileges which they have, and thus accumulate a marketable quantity of fish. The Indians, however, are supposed to fish only for their own use, and whether they have any assignable privileges is a question. The respective rights of the federal and state governments to control the fish and game in reservation limits may be tested in the courts, as Executive Agent Fullerton, for the state, announces that he will seize the fish whenever found in the state, under the very general section 24, which gives the commission its present leverage on offenders against game preservation.

A Clear Title.

The last obstacle to a clear title to the new capitol site has been removed. John M. Miller has deeded to the state for $10,200 part of block 22, Wabasha street addition to St. Paul. The capitol commission had some trouble in securing this property at the rate paid for the balance of the site, and went so far as to petition the district court of Ramsey county for the appointment of a commission to condemn the property. The land has now been secured at the terms considered fair by the capitol commission and some property owners think that the price paid is quite low.

Too Many Cigarettes.

The baneful effects of too much cigarette smoking were borne in upon the habitues of Judge Holt's court in Minneapolis when John Kelly, a youth of 20 years, clutched at "the incorporate air." Young Kelly lives with his mother at 110 Sixteenth avenue north and during the past nine years has tarried long with the cigarette. According to his mother, Mary Kelly, John's gray matter has become softened by this practice and he is not always filial in his conduct. He is a slave to moods, one of which is to thrash his ma tri-weekly.

Ship Building.

The Wolvin syndicate of Duluth has closed a contract with the Chicago Shipbuilding Company for another very large steel steamer. It is to be delivered at the opening of navigation in 1897, and will be 406 feet keel, 48 feet beam ond 28 feet deep. She will be practically a duplicate of the steamer Zenith City, built by the Chicago company for the same people, and will be constructed from the same model. It will have a capacity on 18 feet for about 6,500 gross tons, and is the third of the Duluth syndicate's fleet.

No Liquor at Parties.

Deputy Internal Revenue Collector W. D. Belden has written for special information to the head offices in St. Paul regarding the libability of societies selling liquor in their halls at dances to a special liquor tax. He received word to the effect that such societies are liable and announced his intention of rigidly enforcing the law in the matter, which, heretofore, has been openly broken in Winona.

An Odd Affair.

A unique social club gave a very exclusive party at Labor Temple, Minneapolis. It was the Menassa Club, membership in which is limited to negroes with white wives. The club is a result of the ostracism white wives of colored men have to contend with on the one hand and their dislike of colored women on the other. About 40 people attended.

News in Brief.

Game Warden Stevens of Detroit, arrested Geo. Acales, of Hunter, N. D., charged with illegally catching fish in Spirit lake, Minn.

T. R. Hubacheck has been removed as assignee of the Irish-American bank, of Minneapolis, and Judge Stephen Mahoney appointed in his stead under bonds of $600,000.

Theodore Pettit and Lack Culp were arrested upon the charge of attempting highway robbery near Buffalo.

A new county road, a short cut to Red Lake reservation, is being constructed from Red Lake Falls. The new road was laid out by the county commissioners in view of the opening of the reservation.

Maria Ricks, the noted window smasher arrived in Winona and was immediately taken in charge of the officers and committed to the county jail. Later she was shipped to Rochester and while on the train broke a glass in the toilet room. The Rochester officers sent her on her way to La Crosse and she passed through Winona again. She is the same woman who caused such a sensation in South Dakota recently by saying that she had been incarcerated in the Jamestown asylum and by telling of the cruelties she had been subjected.

The Winona board of trade will reorganize as a commercial club.

SOME DAY.

Some day, dear heart, it may be far or near,
Perhaps at bright'ning morn or dark'ning night,
Some calling voice will faintly catch my ear
And rouse within a strangely dread delight.

And friends will ask, perchance, with quiv'ering lips,
As they may hear, at times, a stifled moan,
And I shall long for touch of finger tips,
Some loving hand to warmly clasp my own.

Perhaps in my distress you'll not be near,
The snows may lie above you, cold and white;
The voice I love so much I may not hear,
Unless in spirit whispers through the night.

Death never comes for naught, and I shall die—
Some day it will be so—it comes to all;
And will you, list'ning, hear my faintest cry,
Returning answer to my feeblest call?

Another's hand may gently stroke my hair,
And close my eyes and watch while life endures;
But, Oh! my soul shall wander everywhere,
With ceaseless, longing cry in search of yours!

Then if the first you go the way alone,
Will you not waiting, list'ning ever be?
And when you hear the old, familiar tone,
Along with Heaven's morning, come to me?

A WHITNEY GIRL.

BY KATHERINE BATES.

"After all, she looks best in Nan's hat."

"No, she doesn't. Nan's needs a little more loose hair around her face; as long as hers won't curl, she had better wear Peg's broad one that sets well down on her head."

The girl who stood before the glass trying on her sisters' hats turned impatiently. "Good gracious!" she said. "What earthly difference does it make just how I do look? If only you girls could make up your minds that I am real down homely, life would be a good deal simpler for us all. Every time I am asked anywhere we go through all this, and no one cares two pins how one of the Whitney girls looks!"

The four older sisters looked very uncomfortable. "Don't talk like that, Jennie," Peg, the oldest, said, at last.

"Well, it is true," Jennie answered. "You never had the sort of times other girls have, did you? I know Nan and I never had any attention shown us from the time we were chosen last to play games at school up to now, when we are only asked to moonlight picnics and surprise parties by the boy who makes up his mind to go too late to get any other girl. I suppose it was the same way with you, and Liza and Sue."

The five women stood and looked at each other. They were all tall and painfully thin, with prominent cheek bones and sunken eyes. Their mother had died of consumption, and it was confidently expected in the neighborhood that the girls would eventually "go off" as she had gone. Jennie was less pale and thin than the others; her eyes, though deepset, were blue, not gray, and her hair had a slightly reddish shade to it, which made her look more positively alive than her sisters. They had thought her pretty, had reveled in the belief that she was popular, had rejoiced that she seemed gay and happy. Liza had once called Peg's attention to the merriment of her laugh. "I declare," she had said, "she laughs right out just the way I have always wanted to all my life, only there never was any reason big enough to justify it. I am glad she and Nan don't have to scrimp quite as we did." Jennie had never before spoken as to-day, and now was heartily ashamed of herself.

"I don't know what made me say all that," she said, apologetically, looking at the pained faces. "Of course I am glad to be a Whitney, and we have plenty of good times if we are poor and plain."

"Yes," said Liza, "and the Whitneys have always been respected in the church here. Grandpa and pa were both respected highly, and each was superintendent of Sunday school five years, you know."

"Yes, of course they were," said Jennie. "Tremendously respected—so it does not much matter that we girls aren't—well, what the Springer girls are."

"Thank heavens!" said Liza, "we aren't as foolish in our talk as they are."

Jennie wore her own hat when she went that afternoon with Jim Russell to the basket picnic over by the river. She put on the freshly-ironed linen lawn that had been Nan's the summer before, pinning it at the neck with Peg's pin which had Grandma Whitney's hair in it.

"Clothes look just like me," she muttered to herself, "and like Peg and Sue and Nan and Liza."

It was a long drive to the bluffs. Usually when Jennie went to picnics with one of the boys she made an effort to be "sprightly;" to-day the unwonted bitter streak had mastery of her and she sat in almost utter solence, even when other buggies passed them with gayly laughing Springer or Brown girls in them.

"He might have asked one of them if he'd wanted a lively time," she thought; and then remembered that he probably had, and had then asked her to show some one was glad to go with him.

Jim, too, was very quiet. He drove carefully over the deep ruts in the road, his whole attention apparently centered on doing as little injury as possible to the springs of his buggy. As they came near the end of the six-mile drive he suddenly turned to her.

"Jennie," he said, "I have always liked you first rate, as you know. Do you suppose you could ever love me enough to marry me?"

She stared at him, dumfounded. Was one of the Whitney girls having a proposal! Another feeling succeeded the surprise and she looked away quickly, while the color rushed to her pale cheeks. Before she had time to speak they turned a corner and found themselves surrounded by the picnickers.

"Come along," called Bess Springer. "You are the very last. Hurry up and tie your horse, and let's climb the bluffs before supper-time."

The sisters were waiting to talk it all over with Jennie when she got home. After her speeches of the morning they hesitated about questioning her, but she sat down by the kitchen table where Peg was finishing the ironing, and told all about it.

"Yes, a very good supper. We spread it on the grass beneath the big elm tree. The only trouble was that there were too many black ants. We had lots of good cake and fried chicken. Mrs. Woods' lemon pies and your cookies, Sue, were the best things." She did not tell that when the cookies were passed, after several rich cakes, Bess Springer had exclaimed: "Cookies! Oh, yes, from the Whitneys!"

"Was the river pretty?" asked Nan; she had never been to a bluff picnic.

"Oh, yes, real pretty, and everybody enjoyed climbing the bluffs. The Brown girls were afraid they were going to fall, and made lots of fun." She rose, went to the shelf where the bucket of water stood, and drank little sips aimlessly from the tin cup.

"Hurry and get your drink and tell us what happened besides supper and climbing the bluffs," said Nan, impatiently.

Jennie turned and faced the sisters. "On the way over," she said, quietly, "Jim said he loved — liked me, and wanted me to marry him."

Peg dropped her iron. They all gazed silently at Jennie. Through Peg's mind passed a vision of Jennie in a two-story home of her own on the next farm, a nice parlor with tidies on every chair—tidies made by Jennie's sisters—sweet little children about the place, always clamoring to go over and see their aunties. Her thoughts traveled so rapidly that before the silence was broken one of these children had grown into a very pretty girl, who stopped on her way home from picnics to tell her dear old aunts what a lovely time she had. They knew she had been the belle of the picnic, though she was much too sweet to mention the fact. Liza's voice dispelled the vision. Liza was always the first to speak.

"You dear girl," she said, "I just know you will be real happy. Jim was always a good boy."

"I am not going to marry him," said Jennie.

"Jennie! why not?" The four asked the question together.

Jennie hesitated. "Well," she said, "I am not set on it; and I suppose I am liable to have consumption some day, and perhaps I ought not to get married."

"That's silly," said Sue. "Because mother had it is no sign you will. You have never had any cough to speak of."

The others began their protests, but she interrupted them.

"Consumption hasn't got anything to do with it," she said. "I wanted to think it over—proposals being sort of new to me, you know—so I went off by myself down by the spring under the bank for a minute or so after supper. Bess Springer and Tom Johnson were there, and I heard Bess telling how Jim proposed to Sally last night and was awfully cut up because she would not have him. So it was not much of an offer after all, you see. Good-night, girls."

As she turned to leave the kitchen she stopped for a second by the ironing board and laid her hand on Peg's shoulder. "Peggy," she said, tenderly, with her voice trembling a little, "there certainly never was as good a man in all Missouri as pa—unless it was grandpa."—Midland Monthly.

A FUNNY BATTLE.

One Woman Against a Company of Trained Soldiers.

M. Paul Deroulede, a French poet who has recently achieved success, was captain of a company in the service of the Versailles government of national defense, in 1871. At one time he had to lead his company against a street barricade in Paris, raised by communists.

Some signs of resistance had been observed behind. As Deroulede marched his men on, a woman sprang to the top of the barricade, aimed a Chassepot rifle at the leader, and fired.

The soldiers ducked their heads, but no one was hit. They marched on. Deroulede in advance. He smiled, eying calmly the woman, who levelled her gun at him and fired again. Once more no one was hit. On went the soldiers steadily, their captain smiling, the woman on the barricade continuing to charge her piece and to fire each time as nearly as she could at Deroulede.

Presently, however, the soldiers were on the barricade. The woman threw away her gun and stood with folded arms. She was one of the petroleuses—the famous fighting women of the commune. Deroulede looked behind the barricade to see who else was defending it. No one was there; the woman was alone.

Then the captain took off his cap, bowed low to the woman, and said very politely: "Madame, I regret exceedingly that I am unable to congratulate you; but really, in view of your marksmanship, I cannot!"—Youth's Companion.

A Man of Foresight.

Senator Kyle's secretary is a canny Scot, Macfarland by name, who has a dry sense of humor. Recently he injured his thumb, and the matter became so serious that he went to a surgeon. He was told that he would have to undergo an operation.

Macfarland consented to stand the operation. He was ready to have it performed then and there. The physician asked him whether he wished to take chloroform or ether.

"Will it make me lose my senses?" asked the Scotchman.

"I should say so," said the doctor.

Macfarland deliberately thrust his hand into his pockets and began to count out his change.

"There's no hurry about the money," said the doctor; "you can count it out to me after the operation is performed."

"But you said it would make me lose my senses to take chloroform or ether, didn't you?" asked Macfarland.

"Certainly," said the doctor, "it will make you unconscious."

"Then excuse me," said Macfarland, with a twinkle. "I'de rather count my money now."—Washington Post.

Watch Monopoly in Switzerland.

Switzerland proposes to have a state match monopoly. The monopoly is not for profit, but is merely the pretext for the total suppression of the manufacture of phosphorous matches, an industry which means painful disease and an untimely death to the poor work people engaged in it. The horrors of the phosphorus disease are as revolting as those of leprosy.—Chicago Chronicle.

It is regarded as probable that the latter of these bills will pass.

ASSASSINS ON FRENCH ROADS.

Novel Suggestions for Avoiding Dangers of European Travel.

The assassin in the railway carriage is causing some alarm in France just at present, and the recent attempt on the life of M. Freulon in the Nancy-Paris express has made the nervous traveler cry out for more protection. The remedies, however, suggested by the public, namely, the frequent patrolling of the trains by additional guards, and the adoption of carriages with central couloir, as in Switzerland, are either impossible or inexpedient. A further suggestion from "a father of a family" seems hopeless. He proposes that the company shall place in each compartment a box containing a large loaded revolver. The aggressee, when hard pressed, pushes an electric button, opens the box, snatches up the pistol, and proceeds to make fireworks. This general uneasiness caused an amusing scene near Naples the other day. An attache from one of the foreign embassies was returning home from a fancy dress ball, which he had attended as Mephistopheles. A suspicious individual, who had entered the compartment with him, demanded assistance, and became very threatening. The attache said nothing, but cast off his wrappings and towered over the aggressor a flaming Mephistopheles with horns and hoofs. The man's theological notions seem to have been badly mixed, for he dropped on his knees and poured out a long confession of his sins. Mephistopheles as confessor is an original role. At the next station he dismissed him with the medieval formula: I nunc anima anceps—into the hands of the police. —Pall Mall Gazette.

MORE VALUABLE THAN GOLD.

Some Metals of Greater Value Even Than the Glittering Yellow.

Gold is commonly considered the most valuable of metals, because it is the most precious of the metals produced in sufficient quantity to be in common use. There are, however, several rare metals that are much more valuable than gold. Gallium, for example, is quoted in the market at $3,000 an ounce avoirdupois. Traces of it occur in some zinc ores, tons of which must be worked over in order to obtain a trifling quantity. Gallium is a very remarkable substance. At the ordinary summer temperature of 86 degrees, Fahrenheit, it becomes liquid like mercury. The latter becomes solid at 39 degrees below zero. Most costly of all metals, save only gallium, is germanium, which is quoted at $1,125 per ounce. Rhodium is worth $112.50 an ounce; ruthernium, $90 an ounce; osmium, $26 an ounce and palladium, $24 an ounce. The last is about equal in value to gold. These metals are of no great commercial importance. Most of them are mere curiosities of the laboratory, having been discovered originally by accident, incidental to the analysis of ores. It has been suggested that some of them might be coined, but the supply of them is too uncertain. Iridium is utilized to some extent for making instruments of delicacy which must have the property of not corroding. It is observed from "iridosmin," a natural alloy of iridium, osmium, rhodium, platinum and ruthenium. This extraordinary mixture of rare metals is white. Much of it is found in washing for gold in the beach sands of Oregon. It resists the action of all single acids. Its only important use is for tipping gold pens.—Information.

Learning a Foreign Language.

Some interesting statistics might be collected on the effect upon linguistic power and accent of the possession of a musical ear. It would seem that a person with a good ear for music would be more rapid in the acquirement of a foreign tongue and, having acquired it, would possess a more perfect pronunciation of the sounds than would a person not having the same ready musical gift. Similarly such a person would be quick to attain the dialect of the country in which he might be living and adapt his speech to the brogue or provincialism with which he found his ears surrounded. The greater rapidity with which Germans, Poles and Russians learn the English language is surely not to be accounted for merely by stating that their own more nearly resembles our language than does that of the French or Italien. A Greek, for instance, learns English in about half the time it takes an Italian to acquire French, and a Russian will speak French, English and German in the same period that a Frenchman will acquire a mere smattering of the two latter.—Pearson's Weekly.

A HOUSEWIFE'S TRIALS.

Mrs. Marshall Tells How She Suffered.

Had Several Attacks of Rheumatism—Doctors Failed to Relieve Her—How the Disease Was Conquered.

From the Press, Appleton, Minn.

Of all the ordinary diseases to which humanity is heir, there is, perhaps, none more general or more painful than rheumatism. The Press having learned that Mrs. Mary A. Marshall, a well-known lady of Appleton, Minn., this city, had for some time past been a sufferer from this complaint, and that she had found a remedy which not only gave almost immediate relief, but which effected a complete cure, and believing that the dissemination of a few facts regarding it would perhaps be of interest and benefit to many of our readers, interviewed the lady upon the matter. The reporter found Mrs. Marshall at her pleasant home busily engaged in performing her household duties in a manner which did not in the least indicate rheumatism, and secured from her the following statement:

"It is about a year and a half ago that I first experienced these attacks of rheumatism. As they became more frequent they became more painful, and while I used the prescriptions of several doctors I failed to find relief. About a year ago I noticed in a paper a testimonial as to the effectiveness of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and was so impressed by the statements made therein that I determined to try them. My husband accordingly sent for a supply of six boxes, and I am free to say that before I had used two boxes of the pills I became aware of a change for the better. I continued to improve until to-day, I am as free from all traces of rheumatism as I was before these attacks. I can also truthfully say that aside from speedily and effectually curing the rheumatism the pills have done me a great deal of good in generally renovating the system, purifying the blood and relieving those numerous little ailments to which women are most commonly addicted."

Mr. Marshall was present during the interview and was sincere in his praise of what the pills had done for his wife, believing them to have been the sole and direct cause of her relief.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are considered an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

BICYCLE SADDLE NEEDED.

Physical Complaints Which the Present Style Inflict Upon Riders.

A well-known physician, who has given some attention to the bicycle and has learned how to ride one, although not yet a regular rider, says, according to the New York Tribune: "I don't mean to buy a bicycle until I am able to get a correct saddle. To get that I believe I shall have to invent one, and I am seriously thinking of setting about it as soon as I get the time. This is a matter to which I have been compelled to pay attention, because many of my patients are bicycle riders. The wonder in my mind is that more injury is not caused by the use of improper saddles. Most saddles are constructed on a radically wrong principle and throw the weight of the body just where it ought not to be. There is one saddle quite widely used for which the claim is made that it is constructed on correct physiological principles, but that is true to only a limited extent. Still, it is a start in the right direction. A bicycle saddle should be cut out in the middle and provision should be made for the weight to rest on the sides. I am not sure but that some contrivance whereby the two sides of the saddle might move up and down with the motion of the legs will not prove to be the correct solution of the problem."

HOW TO LIVE LONG.

Marriage Is the Prescription of a Distinguished Berlin Physician.

Some curious figures have lately been made public by a celebrated Berlin physician, which seem to point to the fact that if a man wants to live long and preserve his health and strength he ought to marry. Among unmarried men between the ages of 30 and 45, says Spare Moments, the death rate is 27 per cent. Among married men between the same ages it is only 18 per cent. For 41 bachelors who live to be 40 years of age, 78 married men triumphantly arrive at the same period. The difference gets all the more marked as time goes on. At 60 years of age there are only 22 bachelors to 48 married men; at 70 there are 11 bachelors to 27 who were married, and by the time they reach 90 the married men are three to one, for there are nine of them to every three bachelors! And yet, in the face of facts like these, we still find men daring to remain single! It really is as much as their lives are worth, if they only come to think of it. Men may talk of their lives being shortened by domestic worries and anxieties and cares. That is all rubbish. Statistics must tell the truth, and these statistics of the Berlin doctor say that the man who is a bachelor stands in far greater risk of a shortened span.

Stop, Thief!

Stop a small malady, which is stealing your strength, before it outruns your power to arrest it, and recover what it took from you. The safest and promptest recuperator of waning vitality is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which renews vigor, flesh and nerve quietude because it restores activity to those functions whose interruption interferes with general health. Use the Bitters for dyspepsia, malarial, rheumatic and kidney complaints and biliousness.

DELANO DIARY

—James Vicks' Sons, Rochester, N. Y., have long been known as a thoroughly reliable seed firm.

—The Post Office has been newly papered and now looks more cheerful than heretofore. J. M. Borrill did the work.

—Lew Johnson's Minstrels, at the City Hall, Saturday evening, drew a good sized audience which enjoyed the fun hughly.

—Misses Kimball and DeKay have rented the rooms lately occupied by the Misses Clark, on Third and Bridge street, and will keep house.

—Rev. Farber is holding protracted meetings at Montrose. Rev. Tabor Davies occupied the M. E. pulpit in his absence, Sunday evening.

—If you want a farm Journal for one year, and $1.60 worth of garden seeds, and the GAZETTE one year, send us ONE DOLLAR AND FIFTY CENTS IN ADVANCE.

—The W. C. T. U. column appears this week in the GAZETTE. Note what a contrast in the penitentiary business in our neighboring state under different laws.

—Notices have been posted for the annual Village election to take place in the Council room from nine to five o'clock on Tuesday March 10. Don't forget to vote.

—A caucus of citizens irrespective of party affiliations is called to meet at the City Hall in Delano on Saturday evening March 7, to nominate candidates for village officers.

—The BUFFALO GAZETTE, the Northwestern Agriculturist and $1.60 worth of seeds for $1.50. The seeds are from Salzers house and are warranted by the Agricultural Co.

—Mayor George W. Bolton, of Delano, wouldn't sound very bad. George is a good fellow and would make a good mayor all right. And his name has been favorably mentioned.

—On Wednesday night the worst snow storm of the winter set in; though the weather was not cold and but little snow fell, Thursday what is known as a disagreeable day to be out.

—Test your garden seeds by planting a few of each variety now, before you are ready to make garden, and don't be caught making a fine large garden with a large amount of seed that will not grow.

—If you want a good Mayor, and good Councilman, and good Justice, Constable and other officers; men who will do their duty, you know who to put in and who to put out; it is not necessary to do more than to call your attention to the matter. Help elect such men as will suit yourself.

—The sociable given by the M. E. Ladies, at the City Hall, Thursday evening, was well attended, an enjoyable occasion, and netted about $7. The literary programme was well received, Miss De Kay, being encored, gave "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," by James Whitcomb Riley.

—The Financial statement for the village of Delano appears in this week's Eagle. It places the receipts for the year at $5,871.73; of this amount $3,500 was for saloon license. The disbursements for the year are given at $5,849.11. The offices of village Recorder, and Treasurer seem to be the best paying of any.

Democrats in each town and village should look up the new election law in the law supplement, of 1895, and then see to it that the proper notices are given and the primary elections are carried on as directed. Somebody may fail to get an office after they have been electid, if it turns out that blunders have been made.

—The quarantine that has been in existence here for a few weeks past, has now been raised. Little Jimmie Wharton the last to be afflicted with diphtheria, has so far recovered as to be able to associate with other people again, and the house has been disinfected, and the card removed from the outer wall.

--Vile talk, on the streets, has been so much indulged in lately as to have become a nuisance, of more than usual proportions. Last week a man of prominence was brought before a Justice of the Peace and fined; but this week the same kind of language, beneath the dignity of respectable citizens, was to be heard again. There is a law against such things and the village officers should promptly arrest those indulging in them. It certainly does not advertise our town favorably, nor set a good example to the rising generation. Let it cease.

—We have received a beautiful, illustrated catalogue from The Jewell Nursery Co., of Lake City, Minnesota, the oldest and largest nursery in the Northwest. Their catalogue is very complete, containing full descriptions, instructions for planting, pruning; and care of stock. They also enclose a list of collections of flowers and bedding plants that are cheap enough to be in the reach of every one. They also grow Seee Corn and Seed Potatoes, comprising the latest and best varieties. Their references are A No. 1. Read their ad. in another column and mention this paper when writing them.

—The Democratic State Convention has been called to meet in St. Paul, June 11, to elect delegates to the National Convention at Chicago.

—In selecting village officers it would be well to see to it that men who have lived here for some time have at least a majority of the places. Occasionally it may happen that man who owns no property and who has not lived in our village long enough to become acquainted would be the best man for a certain position; but it certainly reflects no great credit on our villagers to have a majority of transients for officers.

—From the city papers we learn that on account of the non-appearance of J. H. Wendell, an important witness for the state, in the case of State vs. O. L. Billings, to have been tried Wednesday, in Minneapolis, the trial was postponed until Friday, March 6. Also that another case was brought against Mr. Billings and the Judge asked to allow it to be tried first. That looks as if the prosecution is not anxious to proceed with the one brought in the first place. Give Billings fair play gentlemen, at all events.

Personals.

George Florida, of Rockford, was in town Wednesday.

John Mager, of St. Cloud, visited friends here this week.

William Stanly was on the sick list the fore part of the week.

Mrs. M. J. Mulford left Saturday for a week's visit to the cities.

Prof. Wharton, of the Eagle force, visited Minneapolis, Saturday.

Miss Lottie Halgren, of Watertown, visited Delano friends Wednesday.

Miss Grace O'Hair, of the "U" is home on a visit during a short vacation.

H. Galley, of Royalton, was in town this week on business and visited old friends.

John Blaisdell, of Minneapolis, was up Tuesday, looking after his Wright County farm.

M. A. O'Hair attended the O. L. Billings case in Minneapolis, Wednesday as a witness.

Sheriff Carpenter was an early visitor to Delano Monday morning looking for a couple of escaped prisoners.

Ten members of the I. O. O. F. lodge of Delano, attended the funeral of W. H. Mapes, at Montrose, Sunday.

Dr. E. E. Shrader, of Watertown, returned this week from a visit with his brother Dr. J. S. at Sheboygan, Wis.

E. F. Webster, of Fargo, N. D., agent for the R. G. Dunn Merchantile Agency was interviewing our citizens Saturday.

Joseph Hehn, left Monday for Spokane, Wash. He took with him one of the finest tool chests ever seen in these parts; his own manufacture.

Mr. Cullom, of Minnetonka, who is a member of the "U" law class canvassed our Village this week for an interesting book. Kings of eth Platform and Pulpit.

Hans Hanson, who has been at the Sherwood Stock farm, in Iowa, for the past sixteen months, returned to his old home with Wm. Stanley last Saturday. He reports six inches of snow in Iowa when he left.

Miss Cora McCarter, who has been visiting with her sister, Mrs. Davis, has returned to her home in Hamline. She has been teaching during the winter at Harrison and stopped to see her sister on her way home.

County Cullings.

The board of County Commissioners will meet at Buffalo, on Wednesday, March 11.

August Moline, of Woodland, was taken in charge by Sheriff Carpenter on Sunday, on charge of insanity.

Wright County deserves to be represented in the Good Roads Convention. Nothing tends more to the prosperity of a comunity than do good roads.

On Sunday evening when returning from supper to the jail, in charge of Deputy Bryant, two prisoners, Messrs. Culp and Petit, of Smith Lake, separated, and dodging among the trees, in the Court House grounds, eluded the deputy and succeeded in effecting their escape. Sheriff Carpenter Deputy Grant and others spent a sleepless night in search of them.

Be out to the caucus and help nominate the best possible ticket and then attend the election on Tuesday and vote for the men who will attend to town or village affairs as nearly right as they can. Don't sit at home and let others do the nominating and electing and then growl because the worst sticks in the town are in the offices, and things are running all wrong.

The oldest settler knoweth not when the newspapers were so terribly, deathly quiet concerning the county printing. When that astute legal gentleman, or land title shark gets ready to put in a few licks for his own interest perhaps things will change, and the war will open up all along the line. Why don't the Quintette Syndicate for Wright County printing say something?

The "rank and file" of the democratic party of Minnesota intend and expects to "set down" on "bossism" in the party at the next State Convention. That style of politics has almost ruined the party organization in this State and it is time a new leaf was turned, and we hope Carver County will take the initiative step in this direction at its next County Convention. Will our local leaders be equal to the task.--Valley Herald.

The case of Czech vs. G. N. R. R. for damages, was tried at Buffalo and a verdict of $3,000. rendered in favor of Czeck. Now there is war on between the attorneys and others, and some ugly charges have been made against parties on both sides, including several Wright County men as well as officials of the G. N. Bribing jurymen, or attempting to do so, is a very bad thing. And if anybody is found doing so, and no pains should be spared to find them if they are guilty, the whole posse of wrong doers, whether it be G. N. officials, lawyers, jurymen, or others should suffer the penalties for such offences. Hints have been made before of crookedness and it is time such talk be stopped by having things right in the eyes of all men, as near as possible.

—Village Caucus at the City Hall tomorrow night. Be there!

Wright County should be represented in the good roads convention soon to be held.

Notice of Caucus.

Notice is hereby given that a caucus for the Town of Franklin, will be held on March 7th at 1 o'clock P. M., in Swedeback & Erickson Brick Building, Delano, for the purpose of nominating Town Officers.

BY ORDER OF COMMITTEE.

Among Our Exchanges.

There appears to be no objection to Mr. Boies standing on a free silver platform so long as he adheres to his determination not to seek or accept any office.—Globe.

Senator Sherman seems to be developing into a revenue-tariff man. He declared Tuesday that he is ready to yote for a duty on tea or coffee or both. Good! Why not an additional beer tax also?--N. Y. World.

Here's a pointer for the organizers of the new bar association. A Spokane judge has recommended the disbarment of a lawyer for lying, but whether personally or professionally does not appear.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Fairmont Sentinel: "There is one thing certain. If the gold bugs run the Republican party the Republican party will be on the run." That is right, Frank, they will both be on the "run;" but what will you bimetallic fellows do? Run with them? -Waseca Herald.

The Republicans seem to be greatly astonished to learn that President Cleveland may call an extra session of Congress if the present session ignores financial legislation. The President should do that very thing. Republicans knew exactly what was wanted when they were out of power, and now that they control Congress they wish to sneak out of the responsibility by doing nothing.—St. Cloud Times.

The Pioneer Press refers to the vote of the five silver Republicans in the Senate on the motion to take up the tariff bill as a disgraceful perfomance and to the Senators themselves as renegades. Things have reached the stage in this country that when a senator or other legislator refuses to be controlled by monopoly and combinations of wealth he is marked for doom. How do you like this, fellow freemen?—Moorhead News.

The political pot whose surface has been unruffled throughout the county for a long time, now begins to show signs of more or less agitation, and the people are beginning to ask themselves if this or that officer has proved faithful to the pledges made his constituents while soliciting their votes in the last campaign. It is becoming more and more apparent that the tendency to break away from party lines is increasing, and although the average voter is not saying much, he is thinking a good deal and there may be some surprises in store for some of our politicians who imagine they have a "cinch" on their positions.—Sherburne County Times.

The action of the Sixth District committee in calling the convention to select delegates for the national republican convention to meet at Aitkin on Monday, March 13, is certainly illadvised and unfortunate. In the first place Aitkin is not a suitable place to hold a convention with nearly 225 delegates. The time is also most unfortunate. The county delegates will have to leave their homes on Saturday to enable them to be there. This will also apply to the southern part of Wright and western part of Stearns county The time of meeting should certainly be changed to some other date. If it is not we predict a very slim attendance and much dissatisfaction.—Wright County Times.

The nomination of O. O. Cullen for mayor by the Independent Democrats derives its chief inportance from the high character of the gentleman thus put in the field. Mr. Cullen is one of the most patriotic and public spirited of our citizens. He has had a large experience in municipal affairs, having for many years been a member of the city council, and his influence, in the main, has been on the side of good government. The Democratic party could not do better that endorse his nomination. In that case, if the Republicans should fail to put up an equally worthy candidate, they would be pretty sure to elect him. But as it is more than likely that the Republicans will nominate a candidate entirely acceptable to their party and to the taxpayers of the city, the public would have the satisfaction of knowing that the contest would result in the election of a good mayor whichever of the two was successful.—Pioneer Press.

Load of Dead Porkers.

Some Weeks ago Gus M. Johnson, a young farmer who lives at Montrose, Minn., brought into the city a sleigh load of dead porkers, which he intended disposing of with a handsome profit to himself. He arrived late in the afternoon and put up at a cheap hotel for the night, leaving the hogs in the yard. That night he had rosy dreams of a golden hue. He saw himself the possessor of untold wealth, the nucleus of the vast fortune being the receipts of his prospective sale of dead pig. He envied not the good King Midas and his golden touch He arose early in the day, the effect of the pleasant dreams still lingering in his memory, and hastily he repaired to the yard to hie himself away to the market place where he expected soon to place shining silver dollars in the pockets of his jeans in exchange for the succulent grunters. But, alas! during the night some person, prompted by dishonest motiyes, had removed the mine of wealth and Gus' dreams of a prosperous future faded like the mists before the early morning sun.

The police were notified and finally located the meat in a St. Paul butcher shop, No. 387 Edmund street. The proprietor, one Michael Stoffels, knew not the person from whom he had made the purchase, having never seen him before.

Now, for the sequel: Las week Stofels had a case in the district court and while there was surprised to see the seller, a defendant in a horse stealing case. He recognized him at once and immediately informed the authorities of his discovery. As a result, Daniel Berndgen is now charged with grand larceny and the grand jury is investigating the case.—Penny Press.

OLD FARMER BROWN'S LAMENT.

It is queer how we are living, in this 1896.
The hard times we are having, and what got us in this fix.
As I look back o'er days that have gone bye,
When I got a dollar for my wheat. can you tell the reason why?

Evry thing that I did rais was allers good de mand,
When all at once things took a turn, and left us where we stand.
And now I get but half the price fur my wheat an' rye;
Potatoes cannot sell at all. can you tell the reason why?

I've got no edgercation, fer I never went ter school,
But I know some one is to blame fur this, don't take me fur a fool.
Some say that it was cleveland; that's what I hear 'em cry.
But republicans called the House tergether. can yer tell the reason why?

They said they hadn't money ter run this nation right;
And called on the banks ter help 'em, an' gave us such a fright;
The people drawed their money out, for fear they would run dry,
When Uncle Sam was backin' 'em. can yer tell the reason why?

McKinley framed that sugar bill, ter help us farmers out.
It seemed it was so fur a while; it did beyond a doubt.
But merchants got tergether, on a combination sly,
And now we pay almost as much. can rer tell the reason why?

They are talking o' furin things. of what is wrong and right.
But us fellers what stays ter hum don't seem ter be in sight.
I fought in ther army, saw men around me die.
Why does Uncle Sam neglect us so; can yer tell the reason why?

We send men to congress, for to make our laws;
I think there's where the trouble is, I think that's where's the cause.
One man he wants a tract o' land, to Uncle Sam does try,
He gets it granted, cuts his pine—can yer tell the reason why?

When old Abe, he run the thing, twas fur the int'res' o' the nation;
And now it's run by men for gold; it just beats all creation.
Look at what they are doing, Sir! and ye can see with half an eye,
They oppress the poor' and help the rich. and that's the reason why.

SHALL YOUR BOY GO?

You vote for license, sir, you say;
O do you ever think
Of the dreadful school your vote sustains,
Who vote to license drink?

Have you ever stood by the gay saloon,
With its foully tainted air?
Have you ever watched with curious gaze
The feet that enter there?

Ah sir, you know who enter there.
Our brightest, fairest boys,
The dearest hope of a mother's prayers,
And the chief of a fathers joys.

They are going in for one harmless glass,
Perchance for a friendly game:
When men like you sustain the cause,
Do you think the boys are to blame?

They are coming out with poisoned breath,
And slow unsteady tread—
But not the boys who entered there,
They have left us these instead.

They are hurrying on with quickened pace,
To lives of crime and woe;
They are filing down to drunkard's graves;
Are you willing yours should go?

Ah sir, you know the picture true,
You know the fatal end;
You have seen the way the victims go:
Have you boys you would like to send?

THE chime of bells has been placed in position in the new Hennepin Co. court house tower. And Minneapolis is now claiming the largest chime in the world, weighing 30,000 pounds and costing $10,000.

THE Republican Congress has been in session all winter, will some one kindly tell us, if they can, what they have done to relieve the country from the fearful depression that struck it about the time the McKinley bill went into effect?

GOLD Standard Republicans voted with gold standard Democrats to put Carlisle into the U. S. Senate from Kentucky the other day. If it should win they would of course try to aid in making him President. The motto of the gold bugs seems to be anything to elect a gold bug, never mind his other views even on the Tariff.

OHIO and Iowa Republicans in conventions recently held have declared in favor of bimetallism, in rather an indefinite way; but whoop it up strong on "Protection." Should the National money plank be no plainer than are these State resolutions, and the Democrats make the mistake of having a money plank equally obscure, then look out for a massing of the bimetallists in earnest.

REPUBLICANS from a number of states have favorite candidates of their own for President. This enables the party leaders to have time to ascertain the sentiments of the convention before a test vote comes on. Minnesota has Cushman K. Davis; Ohio, McKinley; Indiana, Harrison; Illinois, Collum; Iowa, Allison; Maine, Reed; New York, Morton; W. Virginia, Stephen Elkins; Nebraska, Manderson; Pennsylvania, Mat Quay.

THE new law makes it obligatory on political parties to print notices of primary elections in the papers. Thus the notices are made legal notices, and should be paid for at regular legal rates. Some of the papers are already putting themselves on record as favoring this innovation, among them the St. Cloud Journal Press, of which Alva Eastman, President of the State Editorial Association, is Editor, The editors are to blame themselves if they do this work free.

THE Chicago Times-Herald has pointed out the necessity of having Vice Peesidential candidates come up to the Presidential standard, especially this year. It is claimed that owing to the probability of a silver party developing considerable strength, no candidate for president may be elected by the electoral commission, and the House will have to elect a President and possibly, from recent developments it may also fail, when the Vice President who would be elected by the Senate would succeed to the Presidency. Vice Presidential candidates should always be men who would make good Presidents.

IOWA'S Republican convention passed some resolutions part of which reads "It is this contrast between Republican competency and Democratic incompetency that will carry the Republican party back to power."! Where, oh where is the contrast?

WE are glad to know that the Daily Princetonian, the official organ of Princton College, says that the burning of a Spanish flag at that institution "was simply the action of a few idle students for their own idle amusement." Perhaps the offences of a similar nature in Spain could be traced to a similar source.

Appreciation of Gold.

For several years we have heard of the depreciation of silver. Is it not a fact, that instead of a depreciation of silver, we have an appreciation of gold? When we compare the prices of the products of our farms and labors, and of silver, since its demonetization, with the price of gold, is it not more just, and fair to say that gold has appreciated than to say silver has depreciated?

If we take our pay in silver, at the prices we are told silver is worth, do we not receive equally as good prices for our wheat, corn, potatoes, horses, hogs, etc., etc., as we did a few years ago? Is not then, silver worth as much as it used to be? When measured by what we have to sell, are not the present prices just about as much below the present price of a gold dollar, as is the price of silver below that standard?

When silver was on an equilibrium with gold did we not receive $1. per bushel for wheat? Now when silver is demonetized, and really, as a commodity, worth only half its former value, isn't our wheat in the same fix? Then, is it not more fair to say, since our farm products have kept pace with silver, that silver is worth what it always was, and that measured by what we get for our grain, silver expresses now, the standard dollar's worth?

This being the case hasn't gold appreciated in value? If you want to get gold and you must give two bushels of grain, or two dollars worth of silver, to get one of gold does it not look more in accordance with the usual run of things to say that gold has appreciated? Is it not nearer right to say gold has appreciated than it is to say that the price of everything else has depreciated?

Since gold has been made the standard of money, and silver, nearly one half our former money, has been made nothing but a commodity, has it not affected the gold in the same way that corn would be affected in case our country had just enough oats and corn both in about equal quantities, to feed all the horses in the country, and some buyer would come along and buy all the oats? In that case the corn would have to be stretched out to take the place of the oats, and there would be some poor looking animals. The price of corn would appreciate. Nobody would go around trying to make people believe that the price of oats had depreciated; but all would readily admit that the price of corn had raised. When silver is taken out of our money system don't in require a fearful stretching of gold to go around; and don't gold appreciate?

Inconsistancies.

Why insist on an international money while maintaining a Protective tariff around our country?

If a silver dollar costs 50 cents for the material to make it of, why not use paper, which would be much cheaper?

If free coinage of silver will bring the country to mono-metallism, why do the gold standard men fight against it so hard, while claiming a single standard is what they want?

Is a gold standard better than a silver standard, if it must be a single standard?

If our country has run for a century, more or less, on a bimetallic system, why can't it continue to so run?

If with gold and silver both as standard money people are poor, how can they expect to become richer when either metal is deprived of its money value?

Why need the U. S. Government pay interest on gold for the purpose of keeping it on hand?

Oratorical Contest.

In speaking of the Hamline Oratorical Contest recently occurring, the Interurban quotes from the winner of first place as follows:

T. H. Wilkinson spoke on "Our Nation's Defense." A few of his words were:—"Our government has not depended on Egyptian mystery nor Roman power. It is not founded on usurpation nor on conquest. It rests on things older, and broader, and firmer—the equality and brotherhood of man; the supremacy and omnipotent. Our fortress is not in armies nor navies that destroy man, but we have built colleges and libraries and public schools as our protection." Mr. Wilkinson was easy and dignified upon the stage and his oration received the first place in the contest.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 6, 1896.

President Cleveland is once more showing the country that when he beleives he is right he will not be swerved by either Congressional majorities or adverse public opinion. This time it is the Cuban question upon which his opinion is directly contrary to that of a majority in Congress, which has declared by the adoption of a concurrent resolution, in favor of recognition of the Cubans as belligerents and of taking steps toward the independence of Cuba. Before the House and Senate had decided upon the wording of that resolution a statement was given out by Secretary Olney showing that, in the opinion of the President and his Cabinet, the Cubans were not entitled to recognition as belligerents, and making it plain that the President would not willingly accord them that recognition until he thought them entitled to it.

Mistakes have been made before by President Cleveland and some of his most ardent admirers think that he is making a mistake in not acting in accordance with the concurrent resolution against which a total of only 23 votes were cast in both branches of Congress, and which they believe to represent the sentiments of a large majority of the citizens of the United States. But whether one thinks the President right or wrong in this matter it is impossible not to admire the moral courage of the man who can stand up in the face of public opinion and Congress and say "I will not do this thing because I do not believe it the right thing to do."

While the President can ignore the concurrent resolution, Congress can compel him to carry out its wishes if it can get two-thirds of both the House and the Senate to vote for a joint resolution expressing those wishes, because that number of votes will be sufficient to pass the same over the President's veto, which would make it a law. Some think that this will be the final outcome of the matter, but they are merely guessing; there is nothing in sight to indicate it.

According to those who know all the circumstances, the sending of the Father Marquette statue to the Statuary Hall of the Capitol building by the State of Wisconsin was the result of a political play made by a republican candidate for his party's nomination for governor of Wisconsin, away back when the late "Jerry" Rusk was governor of that State. This would-be candidate introduced a bill in the State legislature providing for the sending of the Statue of Father Marquette to Washington by the State and succeeded in having it passed, arguing with the republican members that it would catch Catholic votes for that party. When the bill reached Gov. Rusk he declined to sign it, and would have vetoed it had not this would-be candidate persuaded him that it would be good politics to sign the bill, and then assured him that he would see that the statue was never made. But this would-be candidate not only failed to get the coveted nomination but he lacked the power to prevent the statue being made, and today it stands in Statuary Hall, one of the most artistic statues there. The A. P. A. has demonstrated its ability to control the present republican House, and its original programme was to have that body adopt Representative Linton's resolution against allowing the statue to remain in the Capitol, but so many republicans who live in districts where Catholic voters are numerous have shown that their defeat would be certain if that programme was carried out that party pressure has been brought to bear upon the leading A. P. A. men in the House and the programme is held up, for a time, if not for good. All the lessons of European history are forgotten by those men who are trying to use religeous prejudice for partisan political purposes, and even the more recent lesson that broke the heart of James G. Blaine. When religious denominational lines shall be drawn in political parties, if such a calamity shall ever befall this country, the death of the republic will be near at hand.

The debate on the resolution to seat Col. Dupont as Senator from Delaware is on, and may last ten days or longer. The republicans are much disturbed over a rumor that the populists will join the democrats in voting down the resolution.

Senator Jones, of Ark., who has just returned from a visit home, says the reports that the silver sentiment was dying out in that section are entirely without foundation. On the contrary, he says, it is getting stronger all the time.

Senator Allen, of Nebr., expects to be chairman of the Senate Committee that will investigate the last Alabama Senatorial election, if his resolution, which has by a partisan vote been reported from the committee on Elections, be adopted. But that "if" is a formidable one, in view of the attitude of the democratic Senators towards this unconstitutional resolution.

INDEPENDENCE, March 10, 1895.

MR. EDITOR: This article will be made up largely from other men's sayings and opinions, found in books, papers and periodicals of today, giving an exposition of the times in which we liye.

First, we read in Daniel, 2nd and 3rd chapter and onward, of Nebuchadnezzar, who was king of the Babylonian monarchy, long before the Christian Era, and during his short reign of only two or three years he made an image of gold that was three score cubits high, and its breadth was six cubits, and he set it up in the plain of Dura, for his subjects to worship. But there were three of his subjects, (Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego,) who put in a protest and would not bow the knee to this god of mammon. Now we find it these latter days that there exists the same disposition in the hearts of men to build a god of gold, or of making gold their God. The only difference between King Nebuchadnezzar and the money Shylocks of today, HE builded his God toward the heavens, while THEY extend theirs from sea to sea; from continent to continent. They have no bounds. They have no guide. Their conscience is like a rubber string; it will stretch or contract at their will. The head officials of this government and their subordinates have said to the people of this country "At the time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, etc., ye fall down and worship the golden image that Grover and those other fellows have set up." $100,000,000 of gold in the vaults of the Government for bankers, bondholders and the money aristocrats of this country to speculate on, and bring down the poor of this country to beggary and pauperism.

"O for a faith that will not shrink,
When oppressed by many a foe."

Mr. Sherman gives the names of seventy persons whose aggregate wealth is $2,700,000,000, an average of over $37,500,000. each.

Chauncey Depew says that fifty men control the finance of this country and dictate its legislation, It is said the total number of mortgages in this country is 9,000,000, one to every seven inhabitants. Total number of millionaires in this country, 4,700; people out of work, 3,000,000; tramps, 500,000; ex-Union soldiers in the poor house, 60,000; bondholders, none.

Now, Mr. Editor, it's a plain fact to every intelligent man and casual observer that a very few men of this country are getting the major part of the wealth of this country into their own hands. James A. Garfield truthfully said "Whoever contracts the volume of money in any country is absolute master of all industry and commerce."

The divergence between the commercial and coinage value of silver is the result of legislation and not from any other cause. Daniel Webster said "Liberty cannot long endure in any country where the tendency of legislation is to concentrate wealth in the hands of a few." It seems to me this has been the chief aim of most all legislative bodies in our country during the last 30 years. If money and legislation are only for the few, then the words of Thomas Jefferson sink into insignificance when he says "All men are created free and equal."

For many years the price of farm produce has gone up and down according to the price of silver bullion, Silver is now going up and so is wheat and corn; and why a man in this country who is running a small business, depending upon only domestic trade, crys out against free silver is more than my brain is able to imagine. Silver is the poor man's money; always has been from the days of Abraham until now. If the time ever comes (and if a person can judge anything by what they see and hear, I believe it will) that all money in this country is retired except gold and national bank notes, then this country will be an aristocratic syndicate composed of the men high in authority, chief politicians, bankers and bond holders, and all the poor will have left as a heritage will be the right to live and the privilage of making their obeisance to the money lords of this country. I could give and say much more on this line but it is not necessary but would ask you again, Mr. Editor, where we are living.

This country fostered and perpetuated the institution of slavery for many years but it was finally wiped out at the cost of millions of money and the giving of the best blood of our country as a ransom for that ungodly heritage. But we have a much larger elephant on our hands now than then. It is said that the "love of money is the root of all evil." Money makes and unmakes at the will of the holder. It buys our law makers, builds up iniquity in all forms, and what it will not do would take more than a Socrates to tell.

The people are now looking forward to two great political conventions, which are to come off in a few months, one a republican, the other one a Democratic. Their platforms will dictate to the people a policy by which they are to be governed for a period of years. They should come out making strong declarations of what policy they intend to pursue; but I fear they will straddle the fence so their policy could not be traced with a pack of bloodhounds. Then they can play good Lord good Devil as the case may be, 'most always playing good Devil.

But our Saviour said when here on earth "Occupy until I come." So the laborer, the mechanic, the man of all work, and especially the man behind the plow must keep in the harness early and late, for it is the plow shear and the woodman's axe in the hands of the husbandman that has changed the face of continents and marked the course of civilization.

THE accession of Queen Victoria to the throne of England took place on the 20th of June, 1837; the proclamation of such event on the day following.

JUDGE JACKSON, of Denver, rules that a woman must take off her hat in the theater. What! After she has paid $20 for it? That is just like a man.

THE new cable line between France and the United States will be welcome. Who knows that we may not be missing other war scares because of a lack of facilities to transmit the news.

THE comet has drifted by the point where there is any further danger of collision. Any erratic comet that attempts to ride on the earth's scorcher track will get its tubing punctured and its front forks broken.

ONE hospital sperintendent says that a healthy baby should cry three or four times a day at least, and from ten to fifteen minutes at each time. These periods are often slightly exceeded without causing alarm except to the neighbors.

NOT even the "Complete Letter Writer" furnishes a more satisfactory rule for beginning a letter than the Rockefeller way. The statement of President Harper, of the University of Chicago, that the millionaire's letters always begin with "Inclosed find check" makes about everybody anxious to open a correspondence with our wealthiest and most generous fellow-citizen.

THE people of Florida have learned the folly of putting all their eggs in one basket. As a result of the devastating frosts a year ago, the residents of that state, who have heretofore devoted themselves entirely to fruit raising, are turning their attention to manufacturing. Several manufacturing plants have recently been established, and more are projected.

THE most recent naval reports show that the crews on board our war vessels now comprise a larger proportion of American citizens than has been the case for many years. This is assuredly a gratifying fact. The Yankees are unexcelled as sailors, gunners and fighters, and when Americans man our ships we may rest assured that they will do their full duty when called upon.

THE city of Boston has become the leader of the high license procession. Innkeepers of the first class must pay $2,000 license; retail dealers selling over a bar must pay $1,900 and grocers selling by the bottle must pay $600. A new license for bottles of liquor, $500, is established. It is said that 60 hotels, 700 saloons and 100 grocers will pay the new elevated price for continuing in business.

THE following problem has been sent in for solution. Anyone who enjoys chasing a squirrel around a stump to see if he goes around it may pass a pleasing quarter hour with this:

A man found a ten-dollar bill. He paid the grocer and took a receipt. The grocer paid the money over to the real estate agent for rent. The agent paid the ten-dollar bill to the man who owned the property, who happened to be the man who lost the bill. He deposited the bill in the bank, and it was returned to him as counterfeit. Was there anything gained or lost in this series of transactions?

GEN. SCHOFIELD in a recent interview stated that the general impression that the powerful modern engines of war would cause enormous slaughter is a mistaken idea. "War, to-day," he says, "so far as human life is concerned, would be more humane than it ever was, but on the other hand, would be terribly destructive to property. Cities would be destroyed as well as ships and fortifications, but men would fight more under cover and at longer range."

CURFEW laws seem to have been tried first in Kansas; at least they are most common there and in Missouri; but they are quite common in Nebraska, Iowa, Dakota and Minnesota, including some cities of several thousand people each, but no very large city. The usual form of a curfew ordinance is to provide for a bell to be rung at eight o'clock in winter and nine o'clock in the summer, after which minors under 18 or 16 years of age are "taken up" by the marshal, unless accompanied by their elders.

CAPT. CHARLES KING, the soldier-novelist, returns from a visit over seas and tells a Milwaukee paper that in the three days he spent among the military of London he found no talk or feeling of hostility towards this country, but, on the contrary, a general opinion that a war between the two nations was impossible. He noted that at a guard mount of the Grenadier guards the band played Sousa's "Liberty Bell March," and says that "it is a remarkable thing that they should drill to the music dedicated to the bell that rang the knell of George III.'s dommation over the colonies."

MISS BYRD WATKINS, of Topeka, Kan., has the distinction of being the only woman train dispatcher in the United States, and the responsibility of such a position attaches no little importance to the young woman who holds it. Miss Watkins is stationed at Junction City, on the Kansas division of the Union Pacific railway, a through line from Kansas City to Denver, and its branches, the Junction City and Fort Kearney branch, from Junction City to Concordia and Belleville; the Solomon City branch, from Solomon City to Beloit, and the Salina and Southwestern branch, from Salina to McPherson.

JUST such a law as that offered in a bill by Senator Hoar should long ago have been enacted, not applicable alone to the District of Columbia, but to every state of the union. Under its provisions foreigners cannot marry American girls in the district without a certificate from the minister of the country from which they come showing that an American marriage is recognized by its laws. It is not unusual for these foreign adventurers in search of rich American girls to get clear of them as soon as their money is exhausted on the plea that the marriage is not legal in their own country.

ITALY IN A FERMENT.

The Defeat at Adowa Brings on a Cabinet Crisis.

Crispi Compelled to Relinquish Premiership—Marquis di Rudini Succeeds to the Position—Populace Is Aroused.

Rome, March 6. — Long before the hour of opening the chamber of deputies, enormous crowds of people thronged the vicinity and practically surrounded the building. As time went on, the crowds increased and the excitement of the populace grew more intense. The streets in the vicinity of the chamber were patrolled by troops, who experienced difficulty in making their way through the packed thoroughfares. The members of the ministry in proceeding to the chamber, evaded the crowd as much as possible.

The sitting of the chamber was of the wildest character, the uproar beginning as soon as the chamber was called to order. Signor Crispi announced the resignation of the cabinet, which announcement was received with prolonged and passionate applause. The members of the extreme left shouted insults at Signor Crispi, but the premier preserved his temper, and when he was enabled to obtain a hearing declared with great firmness that the ministry, until the nomination of their successors, would retain office and maintain public order.

EX-PREMIER CRISPI.

In announcing the resignations of the ministry in the chamber of deputies, Signor Crispi stated that the resignations had been accepted by King Humbert.

The sitting of the chamber ended in great disorder. Meanwhile the crowds outside were shouting, cheering, cursing, hissing, howling and groaning.

Thursday night the demonstrations against Signor Crispi became more energetic, and the outlook was very threatening. Great crowds gathered in the streets, and socialists and radical orators, mounting steps, boxes or anything that would lift them above the level of the mobs, passionately harangued them, pointing out that all the evil that had befallen Italy came from the maladministration of the present cabinet. The prime minister and his supporters were violently assailed, and the crowds were worked up into a condition bordering on frenzy. At this point the police, in force, intervened and broke the meetings up, not, however, without great difficulty.

Later a crowd marched to the residence of Signor Crispi and made a demonstration before it. Every opprobrious term in the Italian language was hurled at him, but no attention was paid to the crowd by those in the house. Then the mob marched to the offices of the newspapers that support the government and shattered the windows with stones, bricks and clubs. In driving the rioters away, several policemen were quite severely injured.

The disturbance caused by the news of the great disaster and the consequent display of indignation against the government has been greatly increased by the calling out of the army reserves of the class of 1872, which calls 80,000 additional men into active service. The great majority of these reservists are married men whose families will be deprived of their chief or only support for an indefinite period. Thus at Milan and other places serious rioting has occurred when the reservists prepared to obey orders and in many cases they have been prevented by force from leaving their towns. Railroad cars have been demolished, rails torn up and telegraph wires cut and the police have been beaten and stoned into helplessness. The soldiery have been attacked, the bayonets have been freely used and men and women, frenzied with wrath, have thrown themselves on the naked steel of the troops. Large numbers of arrests have been made, the troops everywhere are either confined to barracks or occupying the streets, and night has been turned into day by torchlight processions, indignation meetings, riotous demonstrations in public squares and in front of many of the government buildings.

More Riotous Demonstrations.

Rome, March 7.—There was a renewal Friday night of the riotous demonstrations here against the government. The mob smashed the windows of several buildings and stoned the police. During the melee revolvers were fired and 13 soldiers and policemen and two rioters were wounded.

At Pavia a mob tore up the railway, preventing the departure of trains. They also cut a number of telegraph wires. The rioters then proceeded to the prefecture of police and smashed all the windows in the building. The police fired into the mob, and it is reported that many were wounded.

The greatest excitement prevails everywhere, and reports of disorders come in from all directions. Excited radical socialist and republican socialist members of the chamber of deputies were seen in Rome amid crowds of people, crying: "Long live Menelik! Long live anarchy!"

At Pisa Thursday the students, believing that several batteries of artillery which were leaving the place were to start for Africa, marched in a body to the railway station, shouting "down with Crispi," "give us back our soldiers," etc.

A mob at Milan marched to the railway station Thursday evening and smashed the windows of that building, which they took possession of, in order to prevent the departure of troops, which it had been reported were about to start for Africa. The report turned out to be unfounded, but that did not have the effect of quieting the mob, who continued to occupy the station.

The troops finally made an assault upon the building and drove the students out. After the stations had been cleared the disturbances were renewed in the streets and kept up until two o'clock in the morning. In the many scuffles which occurred several soldiers, policemen and civilians were injured. A large number of arrests were made.

The prefect of Milan Friday morning issued a proclamation forbidding the people to gather in crowds, or to march in procession. A mob gathered in Parma Thursday evening which the police tried to disperse. The mob attacked the police with stones, whereupon the police fired a volley over the heads of the crowd. The mob, believing that the police were firing into them, scattered in every direction in great haste.

Gen. Ricotti Forms a Cabinet.

Rome, March 9.—There was much difficulty found in the task of forming a new ministry. Sig. Saracco declined the responsibility, while an attempt to form a Saracco-Rudini combination equally failed. King Humbert conferred with Gen. Ricotti at seven o'clock Sunday evening and charged him with the formation of a cabinet. Gen. Ricotti yielded the premiership to Marquis di Rudini and himself assumed the portfolio of war. The cabinet as formed will be:

Marquis di Rudini, premier and minister of the interior.
Gen. Ricotti, minister of war.
Senor Perazzi, minister of the treasury.
Admiral Racchia, minister of marine.
Sig. Guicciardini, minister of finance.
Sig. Granturlo, minister of justice.

The calling out of the reserves of 1872 has revealed the fact that numbers of them are not at all anxious to serve their country under arms. Many of them are exiling themselves to escape such service. Three hundred of the reserves of this class are reported to have arrived in the Tyrol, their object being to evade the call.

A large number of Italians are reported to have crossed the frontier from Italy into France with the object of escaping service.

The Women's Moral and Intellectual society of Milan, has issued a manifesto calling on Italian mothers throughout the country to prevent their sons from leaving for Abyssinia. Similar appeals have been issued in Pavia and Turin.

According to advices received from Massowah it is estimated that the Italians at Adowa lost about 1,000,000 cartridges, 5,000 rounds of ammunition for the artillery, 10,000 rifles and the money chest. Several millions, however, were saved. It is now asserted that the Abyssinians and their allies numbered 100,000, while the Italian generals had barely 15,000 under their command. The Tribuna states that the Shoanes have made no advances since the battle, and it is believed that Gen. Baldissera will be able to provide for the safety of Kassala and Adigrat..

The war office has not yet made public its estimate of the number killed, wounded and missing of the army defeated at Adowa, but the general opinion is that the number killed is about 5,000. There are no means of ascertaining the number of men captured by the Shoans. It is now admitted Gen. Dabormida was killed, but the fate of Gen. Albertone has not yet been definitely ascertained. Gen. Arimondi and Col. Galliouo, with about 300 Italian soldiers, are reported to be among the prisoners in the hands of the Shoans.

London, March 10.—A dispatch from Rome to the Central News says that Marquis di Rudini, upon accepting the premiership, renounced his old views favoring the withdrawal of the Italian troops in Africa within a limited sphere, Gen. Ricotti, minister of war, the dispatch says, has also abandoned his proposed reduction of the army corps. It is probable that Sig. Vanosta will become minister of foreign affairs.

TRADE REVIEW.

Business Situation According to Dun and Bradstreet.

New York, March 7.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

"It must yet be broadly stated that business appears to improve only in prospect, and in the confidence on which future transactions may be based, but not as yet in actual sales accomplished. The industries all report a slightly lower range of prices, except for iron and steel products. The demand for no class of iron products is at this time brisk, but large structural business is expected in the spring, and there is still much hopefulness about railroad orders, as earnings continue to improve. The reports of the boot and shoe interest are not on the whole more encouraging this week, shipments from the east being still nearly 20 per cent. less than last year, but there was no further decline in prices. No important change appears in the leather market, and hides are somewhat weaker.

"Failures for the week have been 285 in the United States, against 234 last year and 68 in Canada, against 58 last year.

"Prices of wool have declined an average of 2.4 per cent. within the month of February, presumably because of the failure of the proposed tariff bill, which included duties on wool. At present the sales are the smallest recorded for years. There is no improvement whatever in the demand for woolen goods, and a number of establishments have closed or reduced their working force in order to give the market opportunity to clear itself. Speculation in breadstuffs has not been particularly active, nor has a change in prices been important. With continuing large receipts, corn remains substantially unchanged in price.

"The Cuban resolutions and the appointment of receivers for the Baltimore & Ohio were events of sufficient importance to affect almost any genuine market, especially for securities. It therefore argues either remarkable strength of conditions or an entire want of life and genuineness in the market that the prices of the 60 most active railroad stocks, which averaged $49.-71 per share February 1, have never fallen lower than $49.36, nor risen above $50.55 per share. The market is largely under the control of operators who cannot afford to see it decline much, but it is also true that the vote on Cuba and the receivership had both been discounted. The strength of the market is largely due to more satisfactory reports of railway earnings.

"The volume of business reflected by clearing house exchanges is not materially improving, the week's returns showing a gain of only 6.5 per cent. over last year, and a decrease of 17.6 per cent. in comparison with the same week of 1893."

Bradstreet's says:

"General trade began the week relatively less favorably; with the change from high winds and extreme cold which checked trading to milder weather, increased purchases and brighter prospects for business have appeared. Makers of woolen goods report spring trade over, fall trade not yet begun and much men's-wear woolen machinery idle. Iron and steel have had an unsatisfactory demand and prices of billets and southern pig are shaded. There are also reductions in quotations for cotton, print cloths, petroleum, hides, and for wheat, Indian corn and oats. Mercantile collections are generally unsatisfactory, notably in Chicago, where there are more complaints than for a year past."

Found in a Barrel.

Chicago, March 9.—The body of a man chopped into pieces, together with an infant with its skull crushed, was found in an alley at the rear of 4829 Prairie avenue Sunday afternoon, stuffed in a barrel. There is no clew to the identity of the remains, and it is the belief that a foul murder has been committed.

Wants Another Man in the Cabinet.

Washington, March 10.—Senator Frye (rep., Me.) has introduced a bill for the establishment of a department of government to be known as the department of commerce and manufactures, the head of which is to be a member of the president's cabinet.

CHECKED BY WEYLER.

Wholesale Arrests of Cubans Stopped by the Captain General.

Havana, via Tampa, Fla., March 10.—Arrests of civilians under the sweeping provisions of Gen. Weyler's proclamations of February 16 have been made at such a rate and in many cases with so little evidence of guilt that Gen. Weyler was compelled a week ago to issue instructions to his officers to be merciful, as he required more proof than verbal denunciation. Sunday he issued a circular in which he stated that absolute proof must be furnished by other than interested parties before accused persons will be deported, and warning commanders that they will be held responsible for false answers. Without doubt Gen. Weyler has in view the effect of this order abroad, as well as here, for the manner in which Cubans who have never borne arms against Spain have been dragged from their homes, their families, the stores or their farms and thrown into prisons with felons and after a few days' delay placed on board ships for what is probably the vilest penal colony on the face of the earth, has become a shame that cries aloud for redress.

Gen. Weyler has set at liberty a number of these civilian prisoners whom Gen. Pando had taken from their daily occupation in the eastern end of the island. The only evidence against these men was a paper purporting to be a list of the people who were aiding and communicating with the enemy. It was made up by a Spaniard. Since that time Gen. Weyler has released others captured in the same way. Hundreds have, however, been sent to Ceuta, Africa, and to the Isle of Pines, and the arrests are increasing in number. Gen. Canella was sent back to Spain by Weyler either for having shot down 17 prisoners or for having reported "17 bodies were found in another part of the field;" but the man confessed to his friends here, and probably to Gen. Weyler, of having killed 17 people in cold blood, received no more severe punishment than being deprived of his command.

M'VICKER IS DEAD.

Paralytic Stroke Takes Away a Veteran Actor and Theatrical Manager.

Chicago, March 9.—Death came painlessly Saturday afternoon to James H. McVicker, the veteran theater manager and ex-actor, at his home, 1842 Michigan avenue. Four weeks ago he fell from a chair he was sitting on, the cause being a paralytic stroke. His head was cut by the fall and if it had not been for the effusion of blood he would have died almost immediately from concussion of the brain. The stricken man lay with his right side paralyzed since then, not being able to speak half a dozen words all the time, but conscious until Friday. The turn which meant death came at nine o'clock Saturday morning. Mrs. McVicker and his manager, Louis L. Sharpe, were at his bedside.

J. H. M'VICKER.

[Mr. McVicker was in his 74th year, having been born in New York of Scotch-Irish parents. He determined to become an actor when 18 years old, and played several small characters before coming here in 1848. His first appearance on the stage here was at Rice's theater in "My Neighbor's Wife." His success was assured from that time. He was a member of the stock company at that house, now gone, for two years, the building being burned in 1850 during a performance of the opera "La Somnambula." Rice's new theater was built in 1851, and McVicker and his wife appeared in the cast, he also acting as manager. In that year he also appeared in "Yankee" character at the American theater, New York. He managed the Peoples' theater, St. Louis, and in 1857 returned here to build the theater which has always gone by his name, although named the New Chicago theater. The famous house was burned in the great fire and in 1890, but friends always came to his aid. He died worth $700,000 to $8000,000. His only daughter Mary, who died years ago, was the first wife of Edwin Booth.]

BURNED IN EFFIGY.

Princeton Tigers Follow Example of Spanish Students.

Princeton, N. J., March 6.—The undergraduates of Princeton Thursday night burned in effigy the king of Spain in a demonstration in which several hundred took part. The flag of Spain was dragged through the main street and later was torn to pieces in the center of the campus.

Leadville, Col., March 6.—There was most intense excitement in this city Wednesday night when the news was received of the burning of the American flag by the Spaniards at Madrid. The news came while the ice palace festivities of Irish day were in full blast and the report spread like wildfire. The Irish-Americans and hundreds of others quickly assembled in front of the Herald-Democrat office. There was some difficulty in securing a flag of Spain, but finally one was discovered in the stock of a dry goods merchant, and the crowd quickly found kindling wood and the emblem of the Castilian was laid on it. With a mighty cheer the wood was ignited, and, while the crowd sang "America" and "Columbia," the flag of Spain was consumed to ashes.

A NAVAL HERO GONE.

Rear Admiral Walke Passes Away at Brooklyn.

Brooklyn, N. Y., March 9.—Rear Admiral Henry Walke United States navy, died Saturday afternoon at his home in this city.

[He was born on a plantation on the Lynhaven river, Va., 88 years ago. During the war of the rebellion he commanded the gunboats Taylor and Lexington, and protected Gen. Grant's army while it was making its retreat on the transports. He was also at the battle of Fort Henry in charge of the gunboat Carondolet. Not one of the men aboard met with any accident. For this piece of work the commander was honorably mentioned. In 1862, for his bravery, he was made a captain; in 1866 made a commodore and rear admiral in 1870. One year later he retired. He leaves a widow, three sons and two daughters.]

THE GIRL FOR A WIFE.

You may talk of the girls who are brilliant and gay,
And dress in a showy, eye-capturing way,
And are with accomplishments, knowledge and art
Considerered progressive and awfully smart.

You may be to these girls a most humble gallant,
And, awed by their beauty, beseech them to grant
Their hand in a waltz or their company fine
At opera parties to help you to shine.

You may flirt with these dainty society queens,
And hover around them in festival scenes—
But when you are seeking a helpmate for life
You wisely prefer some one else for your wife.

The little home-body, so modest and shy,
Who hasn't the beauty that captures the eye,
And isn't with "new woman" notions too smart—
She's the one you select for the wife of your heart.

The patient, plain-faced, little, home-loving maid,
So gentle in voice, and who isn't afraid
Or ashamed to help mother, downstairs or above—
She's the one for a wife and lifetime of love.

The sweet little motherly maid, who bestows
Kind words to old people and cheerfully shows
Small brothers and sisters affection and aid—
She's the sort out of which wifely treasures are made.

The pre-minded, innocent maid, who believes
All people are good and that no one deceives,
And feels, O, so sorry! for those in distress—
She's the one for a wife you will worship and bless.

The little home-worker, so neat in her ways,
Who loves to cook dinners a husband will praise,
And who both the parlor and kitchen can grace—
She's the one for a wife to adore and embrace.

The sweet-tempered maid, ever thoughtful and brave,
Who'll love you in trouble and help you to save,
And whose good advice you will prize for its worth—
She's the one who can make you a heaven on earth.

O, yes! You may talk of the girls who excel
In beauty and wit and your homage compel—
But when it's a wife you are after, you know,
You don't want a girl that is strictly for show.

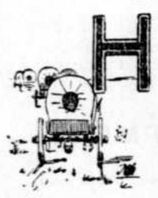
LOST ON THE PLAINS.

BY PENALEON.



HALF AN HOUR after sunrise we have broken camp and are riding over the plains at a brisk walk, while the six-mule teams attached to the loaded army wagons settle down to a steady gait. Time and again the men have been cautioned to be careful and leave nothing behind them in camp, but the soldier, though a human machine, is not a perfect one. As we hurry onward and have put several miles between us and the late camp, Trooper Johnson suddenly misses his knife and remembers that he left it on the ground after using it to cut a strap. The captain gives him permission to ride back after it. Why not? It is but a dash, and we are at peace with the Indians. He will overtake us within the hour.

Trooper Johnson is a brawny man and a veteran. The arrow and bullet wounds received prove him a fighter. Men of his company will tell you of seeing him imperil his life a dozen times over, and they can count up at least seven redskins he has wiped out. A grand-looking soldier is Trooper Johnson—every inch a man. Your eye would pick him out of a regiment for his bearing, and when you had looked into his bronzed face you would put him down as game to the death.

The trooper rides back at an easy lope. In half an hour he is at the camp. There are a dozen gaunt wolves prowling about and munching at the bones, and they grudgingly give way for him as he rides up. Yes, the knife is there, and he quickly secures it. A newspaper has been thrown out of one of the wagons. He picks it up and sits down to scan its columns. Some one had thrown away a letter; he picks that up and becomes interested. Some careless trooper has left a lariat here in the grass. He secures it, walks about for a few minutes and then mounts to rejoin the column. It is traveling northwest. It will now be about eight miles ahead of him. It must bear to the left after crossing Comanche creek. He will, therefore, take a short cut and save time and trouble.

"YES, THE KNIFE IS THERE."

Now follow the cavalryman and you will witness a curious thing. He rides away humming the air of a merry tune, and he has not an anxious thought. He passes ridge after ridge, covers mile after mile, and so sure he is of his way that he scarcely looks up. All of a sudden the horse slacks down. He has been taking the ridges at too fast a pace and is out of breath. A minute later he is pulled up sharp and Trooper Johnson looks about him with anxious eyes. What is it? Nothing. He has only to keep on and he will intercept the column. He has only to ride back over his trail and strike the plain road left by the wagons. It is only nine o'clock in the morning, and the sky is without a cloud.

Curious, isn't it? The trooper stands up in his stirrups to look ahead; there is more than anxiety in his eyes as he turns and looks back. He glances to the right—to the left—up at the sun. All of a sudden, as he rode gayly on, the terrible loneliness of the great plains struck him like a chill. What if he should lose his way! What if he had already lost it! That is enough. He has let a doubt creep in, and five minutes later that curious palsy of the plains begins to creep over him. It has claimed its hundreds, and all have been brave men.

He will ride on. He smiles at his fears—he seeks to shake off that feeling of terror which makes his cheeks grow pale. There is no cause for haste, but he shuts his teeth together and gives his horse the spur and pushes on as if riding a race. See! He bears to the right! Let a man become rattled in the forest or on the plains and he invariably bears to the right and thus hastens the disaster.

When the horse falls from exhaustion Trooper Johnson is 25 miles from the command. It does not occur to him that he will be searched for and that his trail can be followed. He now feels sure that he is lost, and he cannot reason. A veteran of three Indian campaigns—a soldier known to be without fear—a man in the prime of life. And yet his face is as white as a dead man's and he trembles like a woman—aye! weeps like a child!

One, two, three days go by. Trooper Johnson is a favorite with all. Every man is anxious that he be found. We go into camp and send out squads to the four points of the compass. One of them strikes the trail and finds the dead horse. Another, returning in the gloom of evening, starts up a strange animal which runs away, uttering strange sounds like human laughter. On the morning of the fourth day the lost man is discovered as he sleeps. He is naked; he is bleeding and torn; there is something so wild and beast-like in his looks that we shrink away from him. He is not glad to see us. We call him by name, but he does not remember us. We pity him, but he laughs and gibbers.

"He will soon be himself again," says the colonel, as he turns away from the poor wretch we have brought into camp at last.

"He will never be himself again," solemnly replies the regimental surgeon, who happened to be journeying with us. "He has lost his wits—become an idiot! It was the terror of lonesomeness that did it!"—Detroit Free Press.

RARE DIPLOMACY.

A Remarkable Meeting Between Envoys of France and Austria.

The story has been told in many forms of two persons, each of whom suspected the other of a deep-laid malign plan, and each gave time and anxiety to the discovery of that plan only to find in the end that neither had any plan except to watch the other.

One day Prince Metternich, the old Austrian statesman, was informed that a stranger desired to see him. The man, being admitted, was recognized by Metternich as one whom he had formerly known at Paris. But the man now appeared under a borrowed name. He had a fragment of the handwriting of Fouche, the French minister of police, as evidence that he was sent by Fouche. His mission, he said, was most secret, and, in fact, only extended to informing the prince that Fouche was desirous of offering to his consideration propositions of a highly important nature. The messenger declared that he was quite ignorant of the purport of these propositions and had no other authority than to invite the prince to a secret conference through the medium of some trusty envoy who should be dispatched to Paris for the purpose.

The price replied: "You must permit me to think of this."

The agent retired and the Austrian minister repaired to the emperor and recounted what had passed.

"I think," said the prince, "that we should send a confidential agent, not to Paris, but to some other place that may be fixed upon, who shall have no other instructions but to listen to all that the Frenchman who will meet him there shall impart and bring us faithfully an account of it."

The mysterious messenger was accordingly dismissed, with an answer to the effect that an Austrian calling himself Werner should be at a certain hotel in the town of Basle, in Switzerland, on such a day, with instructions from Prince Metternich. The meeting thus appointed took place at the spot and the hour fixed.

The diplomatic agents saluted each other with fitting courtesy, seated themselves face to face, and each assumed the attitude of the listener.

"May I ask you, sir," said the envoy from Paris at length, "what is the object of this meeting?"

"My object, sir," replied the Austrian, "is to listen to whatever you may be disposed to say."

"And mine," said the Frenchman, "is solely to hear what you may have to communicate."

Neither of the envoys had anything further to add to this interesting interchange of information and therefore they separated with mutual civility.—N. Y. Telegram.

An Axiom That Works One Way.

"What have you to say?" asked the lecturer in moral philosophy, "of the axiom that the early bird catches the worm, as bearing on the benefits to be derived from rising with the sun?" "My views as to the value of the axiom will be sufficiently indicated, sir," answered the student, "when I venture to remind you that the early worm got it in the neck."—Buffalo Courier.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS.

The Cycle Show.

The Northwestern Cycle Show to be held at the exposition building, Minneapolis, the week of April 6 is attracting a great deal at attention. The show is to be conducted on an elaborate scale and is to be what its name implies and not entirely a Minneapolis affair. Excursion rates are to be secured on all railroads and the intention is to make the show include specialties of all bicycle manufacturers throughout the United States.

This will be the first time that an exhibition of the horseless carriage has been given in this country aside from the great motocycle race given under the auspices of the Times-Herald, Chicago. The people of this state will be given an opportunity not only of seeing a number of these new horseless carriages but will have the pleasure of taking their first ride in them.

In connection with the cycle show is also to be given a six days race between the seven fastest lady riders in America and there will be numerous prizes contested for and other features of interest including band concerts of a notable nature. This will take place in the auditorium where a track of fourteen laps to the mile will be laid. The demonstrations of motocycle will be held on the third floor and a track of seven laps to the mile provided.

There will be fireworks, street parades and decoration of Nicollet avenue.

Wish to handle their funds.

The much mooted Indian council at White Earth agency took place at Detroit and prooved to be nothing more than a council of White Earth chiefs as to what should be done with the $240,000 now to the credit of the tribes in treasury at Washington. The question was shall the money be divided among the Indians, or shall the government agents and commission use it in providing lumber, machinery, horses and cattle for them. The chiefs decided that in their opinion the White Earth Chippewa can now handle his own annuity money to the best advantage for himself. No question to opposition to the opening of part of the White Earth or Red Lake to settlement came before the council in any way.

Young Toughs.

Several groups of boys, of about 15 years of age, have recently constructed dugouts in South East Minneapolis. Policeman Michael Ryan, upon investigating one near the corner of Tenth avenue and Ninth street, found a beer keg, a large quantity of indecent literature, besides playing cards and pictures. The dugout was quite a large one and it is said that several of the boys went home drunk from it the other night. The policeman with the aid of several small boys, tore up and filled in the place.

A Prize Fight.

In six rounds of the hardest fighting ever witnessed at he head of the lake, Jimmy Murphy, the Duluth light weight, knocked out Tommy Patterson, the hard hitting Californian. The fight took place at a point on the St. Paul & Duluth railroad, about 16 miles from Duluth. No building could be found in the vicinity that was large enough to accomodate the spectators and the event was pulled off in a hurriedly constructed ring in the open air.

School Apportionment.

Supt. Pendergast, of the state department of public instruction, has prepared a table showing the first apportionment of school funds for the year. The total amount to be divided is $291,776, and the rate of apportionment is $1 for each pupil. Last year the amount of money was about the same, but owing to the fact that the number of pupils was smaller, the rate per pupil was $1.15.

The X Rays.

Six month ago Miss Alie Lester had the misfortune to run a needle into her left foot, and, though twice probed for, surgeons have been unable to locate it. Prof. Schneider, of the Winona high school, took a radiograph of the foot, with the result that the position of the piece of steel was determined and it will now be removed.

News in Brief.

Margaret Kittson, as she calls herself, the old half-breed Indian woman of the Menominee tribe, losses her case against the estate of Norman W. Kittson. She claims she married the Commodore in 1833.

Fred. Wheeler, living two miles west of Lake Crystal, lost his child by drowning in a tank of water. The child went to the barn with its father, and while the latter was busy with the chores the child walked over the banking of the tank and fell in. His whereabouts was not discovered for 15 or 20 minutes.

The big bicycle race at Minneapolis was won by Mate Christopher, who covered 229 miles and 12 laps in six days, two hours a day. Dottie Farnsworth was 2 laps behind.

John D. Rockefeller has allowed his option of the magnificent Rouchleau-Ray iron property in 17-58-17 to lapse, and he ic out his $125,000 earnest money paid three months ago. There is talk of the mine going into the Merritt's new railroad scheme.

The Washburn A. mill, at Minneapolis, has made in the last six weeks 1,000,000 barrels of flour. This is the largest amount of flour ever turned out by any one mill in the same period.

The body of Mrs. Paul Bollwein, who was burned in the O'Brien Block fire at Duluth, was found in the ruins, standing, pinned by fallen timbers. Under one arm was a dog for which she had gone back, and the other arm was raised as if for protection. On her person $300 was found intact. She was badly burned, and from appearances she missed her way in the smoke.

Supervising Architect Aiken has authorized advertisements inviting bids for the tower clock for the federal building at Mankato. The bids are to be opened March 27.

A Minneapolis barber was fined $10 for shaving a man's face on Sunday.

Miss M. B. Evans, of Menomonie, Wis., lost a pocketbook on the Interurban cars between St. Paul and Minneapolis. The book contained $325, with which Miss Evans came to Minneapolis to buy millinery goods.

Mary Nelson a domestic living at 902 Fifteenth avenue south, Minneapolis, the home of William D. Brooks, fell down stairs the other night, and when she was found it was discovered that her neck was broken. She was 20 years of age and came from Wilmar where her parents reside.

Iowa parties will erect a $10,000 hotel at Fulda.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—For a dinner sweetmeat large fresh dates are now used. Cut them open on one side and remove the pit and put a blanched almond in its place. Prunes may be treated in the same way. If the prunes are not as fresh as one would like, soak in warm water before taking out the pit.

—The skins of fruit should never be eaten, not because they are not palatable or digestible, or are unhealthful in themselves, but on account of the danger arising from microbes, which may have penetrated into the covering of the fruit.

—Omelet. — Break six eggs into a bowl, beat for two or three minutes, and season with pepper and salt. Melt half a teaspoonful of butter in an omelet-pan, turn in the omelet, and shake over the fire until set. Fold over, take up, and serve immediately.—Ladies' Companion.

—Small Sugar Cakes.—Take one and one half cups of butter and three cups of sugar. Beat to a cream, add three eggs and one cup of thick milk, to which add one teaspoonful of soda, five teacups of flour; mix the night before baking; use as little flour as possible to roll out. When baked exactly right they have the appearance of macaroons.—N. Y. Ledger.

—A raisin broth acceptable to an invalid is made by boiling one pound of raisins slowly in plenty of water for an hour. Strain and return to the fire. Add a small piece of butter and thicken with corn starch, moistened with cold water. Grate in a quarter of a nutmeg, and season with a tablespoonful of brandy or two of wine. Sweeten to taste, and serve hot with a toasted cracker. Raisins are known to be nourishing and stimulating, and the broth is both palatable and useful.—Liverpool Mercury.

—A Way to Sweeten Lard.—After frying doughnuts or fritters or anything of that kind shave off a few slices of potatoes when you are done with the grease and drop them in the sizzling fat; let them cook an instant and then set on the back of the stove to cool very slowly. In the course of half an hour remove to a place to cool more rapidly, and just before it gets beyond the pouring stage strain through a cloth into a clean jar. You will find that the lard is nearly as sweet as ever, being only a little darker, which does not hurt it for frying cakes in again.—Farmers' Voice.

NEXT SEASON'S SHIRT WAISTS.

They Will Come High, But the Women Will Wear Them.

Women of luxurious taste, with money to support it, will soon spend $15 on a shirt waist that will be a frequent candidate for the washtub. Surely that's a pretty price for a wash garment, but experts say it will be worth the money. It will be of silk, with French collar and cuffs. For the information of the unsophisticated it may be stated that the French collar and cuffs are of the kind that turn over. It is of fine white linen, and is secured with a gold button.

Fifteen dollars will be the outside price, the dealers say, and if a woman wants anything more expensive she will be obliged to put on didoes of original design to run up the cost. On the other extreme, she can go as low as $5.50 for a waist, purchased in a fashionable store. The $5.50 waist is of ginghaun, and is plain enough, too, to the ordinary beholder. It must have good points, however, or it could not cost so much. What these good points are is not apparent at a glance, but the woman of fashion who has a delicate perception can tell them off to you without difficulty, and is perfectly willing to pay $5.50 so long as she is being served with the right kind of goods.

A dealer in women's furnishings struck a good thing last week, so he says. He procured the loudest colors possible in a new cloth that is called grass linen. It is a Parisian production and comes in great bars and stripes, in the deepest and most striking colorings. He tried a dozen or so of them to see how they would sell. It need only be said, to indicate what the swell woman thought of them, that he has ordered hundreds of them. She is making her next summer's shirt waists already by wholesale, and if a hot spell were to come next week she would be ready with her new waist and her sailor hat.

The highest price for a grass linen shirt waist is $8.50. A woman can buy one made of batiste linen for $12. These batistes come in deep colorings also, such as red and green and blue and yellow, all mixed up in various combinations of stripes, broken bars and plaids.

The increased popularity of shirt waists has sent them up in price even now in the winter, when one can hardly think of them without a shiver. There have been attempts to decorate the shirt waist in some unusual way, but the shirt waist, like the man's white shirt, does not lend itself easily to decoration, and it will be much as it always was when the season opens. A tuck here, a plait there and a ruffle somewhere else is about the extent of the possibility, even embroidery not being easily applied. To the expensive shirt waists six plaits have been added to the back, which, the dealer will tell you, makes the waist worth a dollar more than it was before. The six plaits are entirely new, he says, but really they are only a revival of the styles of ten years ago, as any woman whose memory goes back for a decade can testify.

It has been found that for bicycle and horseback riding nothing is more convenient than the shirt waist, so it is natural that there should be a great deal of attention bestowed on the garment. Women will wear stocks of washable material, and tie them in a big knot, so that collars will not be necessary, and she will not be obliged to tuck a handkerchief down her neck to prevent her collar wilting.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A New Calling.

Baron—How I am to get my living? That is quite simple, Herr Graf. As you are aware, I have many acquaintances among the elite of the capital, and I intend to enter into an engagement with a large firm of dressmakers and milliners. It will be my duty to attend during the busiest hours of the day, and in my presence the fair purchasers will feel quite ashamed to haggle about the prices, d'ye see?—Fliegende Blaetter.

BARE-NECKED SKATERS.

Holland Women Appear on the Ice with Ball-Gown Bodices.

We are accustomed to see women bundled up in furs as they glide over the ice. To witness a woman's race in Holland would give us a greater chill than to meet a ghost at midnight. A foreign correspondent, in mentioning a contest on skates, describes it as follows:

"It was snowing slightly, but in every available moment between the races troops of men were told to clear the course. At a given signal six women started for the first race. They were dressed in very short skirts, and transparent-looking blouses, low necks, with no sleeves at all. We were told they were from among the lower peasant people, and that the shop classes never entered the lists at all. The speed they went at was something wonderful, and especially remarkable at the corners. For the most part they raced with their arms behind them, but the girl who won the prize (two pounds sterling) skated with hers folded in front."

Bare arms and necks in midwinter! Our physicians think women are courting death by wearing low-necked dresses in ballrooms. What must it be to wear them as outing costumes?

WHEN REPTILES RULED.

There Was a Time When the Globe Was in Their Possession.

There was a time "in the wide revolving shades of centuries past" when the globe was wholly in the possession of walking, swimming and flying reptiles," says an exchange. Being the dominant type, they divided naturally into three great classes.

In the oceans they became gigantic, paddling enaliosaurians; on dry land—or, rather, wet land, for the whole surface of the globe was doubtless a quagmire at that time—they became monstrous, erect dinosaurians, some of which had legs 15 feet or more in length.

Those which inhabited the regions of the air were the terrible flying pterodactyls. For a vast but unknown length of time these awful creatures literally ruled the earth. Then one by one they died out in the face of the younger and more vigorous fauna until at the present time only a few miniature alligators and crocodiles, a few toy snakes and skulking lizards and geckos remain as reminders of the enormous reptilian types that once crowded land and sea.

Come to Texas.

The "Lone Star" is waving—the flag of the free;
Then strike for Texas, if men you would be.
No idlers are wanted, the thrifty and wise,
To wealth and high station can equally rise.

Where corn, oats and cotton; the richest of loam,
Which yields to the settlers provisions and home.
Trees of every description arise on each hand,
From alluvial soil to the rich table land.

Here springs are exhaustless and streams never dry,
In the season from winter to autumn's bright sky,
A wide panorama of prairie is seen:
Of grasses of all kinds perennially green.

Here millions of cattle, sheep, horses and goats
Grow fat as if stall-fed or fattened on oats.
No poverty is found in the mighty domain,
To the man who exerts either finger or brain.

Here are homes for the millions, the rich and the poor,
While Texas opens wide her hospitable door.
She has thousands of acres—yes, millions—to sell,
Yet can point without cost to where preemptors can dwell.

Her terms will be easy with those whom she deals,
While security, all, in their title can feel.
Buy land while 'tis cheap, and the finest select,
'Twill, young man, prove a fortune when least you expect.

Old man, for your children, buy, file it away;
A Godsend 'twill prove on some rainy day.

JOHN A SALZER SEED CO. LA CROSSE, WIS.

The Ins and Outs of It.

If you get best wear out of a coat, best work must have gone into it. You can't get good bread out of poor flour.

Moral: You can't get the best out of anything, unless the best is in it; and the best has to be put in before it can be taken out. Now, we have a rule to test those sarsaparillas with a big "best" on the bottle. "Tell us what's put in you and we'll decide for ourselves about the best." That's fair. But these modest sarsaparillas say: "Oh! we can't tell. It's a secret. Have faith in the label." . . . Stop! There's one exception; one sarsaparilla that has no secret to hide. It's Ayer's. If you want to know what goes into Ayer's Sarsaparilla, ask your doctor to write for the formula. Then you can satisfy yourself that you get the best of the sarsaparilla argument when you get Ayer's.

It kills doubts but cures doubters.

DELANO DIARY

—Prof. J. A. Wharton acted County Superintendant in place of Mr. Lee last week and examined 42 teachers.

—Tuesday was a typical election day. The ground was covered with snow the night previous and the flakes were quietly falling through the morning hours.

—Clark Sturman claims to be the boss well digger in the country. He says a few days ago he set up his machine at the residence of Mrs. Coverdale, in Rockford, made a well 42 feet deep, pumped it out and took down the machine, all in one day.

—The union caucus was about the success such gatherings usually are. No one was entirely satisfied with the ticket made. Although over seventy votes were cast names receiving only small minorities, in one instance 21 votes, were placed on the ticket.

—At a meeting of the Ladies Aid Society, and the officers and members of the M. E. Church, at the church, on Monday evening it was voted to paint the church walls and ceiling. Also, to rearrange the seats leaving the aisle through the center of the church.

—The Ladies Aid Society of the Presbyterian church will give a New England tea party, at the City Hall, on Thursday evening, March 19. Supper at 6 o'clock, price 25 cents, children 10. A literary programme will also be rendered, the participants of which will be dressed in the old fashioned way.

—The building craze has struck town earlier this season than common. C. W. Kerrick has begun work on his residence on Third Street. Mr. Kittock has lumber on the ground for a house on South Second St. John Coolen has an extensive start on a lumber shed at his lumber yard. Surely this looks like times are picking up.

—We have received a beautiful, illustrated catalogue from The Jewell Nursery Co., of Lake City, Minnesota, the oldest and largest nursery in the Northwest. Their catalogue is very complete, containing full descriptions, instructions for planting, pruning; and care of stock. They also enclose a list of collections of flowers and bedding plants that are cheap enough to be in the reach of every one. They also grow Seee Corn and Seed Potatoes, comprising the latest and best varieties. Their references are A No. 1. Read their ad. in another column and mention this paper when writing them. 23-4t.

—The Town of Franklin election passed off much after the usual fashion. The Financial report disclosed the fact that about $1,100. remain in the Treasury to begin the new year with. A 4 mills tax was voted for road purposes and the following were elected

Mrs. Bina Halgren, of Watertown, went this way to Minneapolis, yesterday. She expects to spend several days with her city friends.

Among those summoned to Minneapolis this week on account of the O. L. Billings trial are Wyatt Johns, J. W. Lindsley, C. G. Roosen, Wash Rader and M. A. O'Hair.

I. H. Grafft's Birthday.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Grafft tendered them a surprise party in honor of Mr. Grafft's "fourteenth birthday" February 29. Mr. Grafft was presented with a large jumbo cup and saucer. Dainty refreshments were served and many old fashionek games were played. The evening was pronounced a success by all who were present. Among those there were Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Jones and mother, Mrs. Johns, of Winnipeg, Mr. and Mrs. Ransom, Mrs. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Shaw, Mrs. Shaw of Rochester, England, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Kaley, Mr. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Thulin, Mr. and Mrs. Buckley, of St. Paul, Mr. Henry Grafft, Jr.—The Interurban.

Out West.

EVERSON, Wash., Feb. 29, 1896.

DEAR DR. CATLIN: The "Evergreen State" is losing its reputation today. The ground is frozen quite hard and covered with snow, and the wind (whew!) is blowing a gale from the northeast. We call it "nice, like Minnesota" fresh air and plenty of it One needs to be dressed as warmly as at home (Minn.) in mid winter. We hope it will not last long. It is, I think the fourth "cold spell" for this winter. We are all well.

Yours as ever,
J. L. PARMETER.

Nooksack Indian Mission.

County Cullings.

Election times are coming on apace: look out for leading editorials in the Quintette Sheets, written by some wealthy candidates.

It would be a good plan for the editors of the county to get together and form a county association, and hold meetings occasionally and get acquainted.—Buffalo Journal.

Correct, Brother Eaton: that would be a good thing to do.

From the newspapers we learn that Senator C. K. Davis has introduced a bill into Congress to appropriate $75,000. for a public building at St. Cloud! Why for that Democratic stronghold while Wright County, reliably Republican for so long, has nothing?

Otis L. Billing seems to have attracted quite a number of people from Buffalo and Delano to Minneapolis in the matter of the case, State vs. Billings, for perjury. It seems that Judge Jamison has permitted the trial of the second charge brought to be tried first, that of swearing falsely before the Hennepin County Grand jury. Whatever offences Billings may be guilty of he certainly is not alone in wrong doing, and it is to be hoped by every lover of law and right, that those associated with him, in case he is found guilty, suffer in proportion to their guilt. If there has been nothing wrong it should be made plain to all that such is the case. If wrong has been done imprisoning a poor helpless individual and allowing those who were far more interested to go unpunished will not satisfy the law nor the people.

Among Our Exchanges.

As congress has nothing else to do what is the matter of adjourning.—Star News.

It seems that there are also Republicans in this town who are not for Maj. McKinley. There are early birds and then there are other birds.—Minneapolis Times.

It will be the duty of the next legislature to re-district this state for legislative purposes. The Congressional districts should also be re-arranged.—Buffalo Journal.

That quite a percentage of the republicans in this vicinity favor the free coinage of silver, is a fact that the party will do well not to ignore.—Sherburne County Times.

Let the Republicans quit worrying about the Democrats and select their own candidate—their convention meets first. They may be sure there will be a Democrat, and a good one, too, to run against him.—St. Cloud Times.

Say, fellow farmers, why can't Wright County win the $700 prize that the State offers for the best county display at the state fair next fall. We surely can if we all do something towards it.—Albion correspondent in Buffalo Journal.

Some of our republican cotemporaries are rather worked up because their party cannot get together in the United States senate. The democrats were in the same fix a couple of years ago and they did not hesitate te speak their feelings then. The lesson of free criticism has not been lost on the brethren of the opposite persuasion.—Swift Co. Monitor.

A school teacher says that pupils who have access to newspapers at home, when compared with those who have none are better readers, better spellers, better in pronunciation and better grammarians, read more understandingly and obtain a practical knowledge in geography in half the time it requires others. The newspaper is decidedly an important factor in modern life.—Carver Free Press.

THE TRUE WIFE.

Flowers spring to blossom where she walks
The careful ways of duty;
Our hard, stiff lines of life with her
Are flowing curves of beauty.

Our homes are cheerier for her sake,
Our door yards brighter blooming,
And all about the social air
Is sweeter for her coming.

Unspoken homilies of peace
Her daily life is preaching;
The still refreshment of the dew
Is her unconscious teaching.

And never tenderer hand than her's
Unkits the brow of ailing;
Her garments to the sick man's ear
Have music in their trailing.

Her presence lends its warmth and health
To all who come before it,
If woman lost us Eden, such
As she alone restore it.

—John G. Whittier.

P. H. KELLY, the veteran wholesale grocer of St. Paul, has made an assignment for the purpose of having his business affairs settled up.

CARLISLE is said to be a candidate for Presidential nomination on the democratic ticket. There will probably be other candidates in the field soon.

IT has been announced that Michael Doran has concluded to quit politics. To many prominent democrats in various parts of the country this news is in accordance with their long felt and often expressed wishes

OUR republican friends are having quite a time about whether or not to instruct their delegates to the National Convention to vote for McKinley or any other candidate for President. Some of them temember the time the republican delegates from Minnesota went instructed to vote first, last and all the time for William Windom, Minnesota's favorite son, for President and the way things turned out.

BRO. SATTERLEE, of the Atwater Republican, winds up his comments on Bro. Lamphere and ourselves by advising us to "Do some thinking and write some sensible articles rather than waste time and space." In the same article Bro. Satterlee says "Why not vote for 'free pumpkins' and put the country on a pumpkin basis?" Why does the brother prefer pumpkins to silver, is it on account of their yellow color?

THE Minneapolis Journal appears to look at things altogether differently, from different standpoints, for instance it says Joe Blackburn should be down at Washington, attending to his Senatorial duties instead of up in Kentucky fighting for a re-election. In another column this same paper speak of Congressman Eddy being home looking after his fences and expects that a majority of our state delegation to Congress will be here to attend the State Convention and to fix up fences for re election; but the Journal forgets to say that they ought to be in Washington earning their salaries.

Money in Hens.

(From Louisville Courier-Journal.)

Yes, every farmer must now admit that there is as much money in hens as in any other department of farm business; and often a good deal more, too. Do not despise poultry, for by so doing much financial light is extinguished. It is now an absolute certainty that a good flock of well-bred and well-cared-for fowls will give the farmer and his family many an excellent meal and provide quite a little cash besides, and these two items are never to be overlooked. There are a few points to be especially regarded to the end that poultry culture may prove satisfactory. Breed only from strong, healthy parent stock, that possesses in greatest perfection those features and characteristics which it is desired should be perpetuated. Then hatch the chickens in good season in March and April, so they may have time to develop and come to laying in early fall and so be ready to produce the maximum number of eggs when prices are high. Guard against laying birds becoming fat, as fat hens do not lay well. Require them to scratch and work for their food and thus keep fat down. A good deal of animal food is needed by laying hens to supply nitrogen for egg formation. Feed fresh, juicy lean meat and green-cut bone, which latter is formed by running through the Mann bone mill. If hens are confined do not forget clover, cabbage and roots as necessities. M. S. PERKINS.

An Aged Pensioner.

Washington, Special, March 11.—Congressman Heatwole will tomorrow introduce the bill to pension Row Brasie of Litchfield at the rate of $36 per month. Brasie served in the regular army from 1840 to 1845, during the Seminole and Florida wars. He draws $8, the maximum pension paid for services during those wars, but is about ninty years of age, and Mr. Heatwole anticipates no trouble in securing the increase.—Pioneer Press.

Primary Election Law.

The new primary election law makes it absolutely necessary to have the call for conventions published in a newspaper for at least two weeks. Not a single convention can be held in the state unless this is done. Now why should the newspaper be expected to do this work for nothing.

As a rule candidates for office are willing to blow in their money on the susceptable voter, who usually takes all he can get and then wisely votes as he pleases, while these same candidates think it is a case of injury if the newspapers charge a reasonable sum for publishing strictly legal notices. There is probably not a newspaper in the state which does not contribute more in the course of a year for the good of its respectiye party organization than does the average office holder and about all the editors get, as a rule, is a chance to go to some convention and help out the other fellow, and pay his own expenses.—St. Cloud Journal Press.

Fowls and Infection.

The transmission of diphtheria to human beings from fowls is affirmed by Gerhardt, Debrie, Menard, Schrevens, and other writers. Cole reports a case in Jacksonville, Ill., where a sick chicken was taken into the house and fondled by a child 2 and one-half years old. Four days later the child was taken with diphtheria and died. There were no other cases of the disease in the neighborhood, and the affected chicken was the only source of infection.

It is evident from the limited investigations made that diphtheria prevails among fowls to a larger extent than is supposed. Their habits of living, running at random over wide ranges, picking from garbage and manure piles, render them especially liable to infection. It is a common practice to bring sick chickens into the house for treatment, where children are permitted to handle them, and it is evident that this disease is spread in this manner more extensively than has been supposed, and that many cases of mysterious sources of infection of children could be traced to infected poultry.—Iowa Health Bulletin.—The Daily Lancet, Philadelphia.

The first duty of Congress is to provide sufficient revenue for the necessities of the Government. Instead of doing its duty Congress is doing all it can to enlarge the deficit.—World.

The watchword of McKinley seems to be, "Anything to get there;" while that of Reed, Morton, Allison, Davis, Quay, Collum, Manderson, et al. is, "Anything to beat McKinley."—Minnesota Mascot.

If public meetings must be held in our school houses it must be understood that the men attending such meetings should show proper respect for the place which children are obliged to occupy next day and not use it as a saloon. Our teachers can not very well teach morals or prohibit the use of narcotics when children come to a room occupied by their brothers and fathers besmeared with tobacco juice, chews and cigar stumps. Is this right?—Hollywood items, Valley Herald.

E. A. Flood, son of the late Hon. J. A. Flood, of Watertown, this County, and well known to the old settlers of that town, was recently arrested at Swanville, charged with forgery. The grand Jury of that County, which is in session at Little Falls, found three indictments against Mr. Flood, and when brought before the Court last week, he plead "not guilty," and the court fixed his bail at $400, Wednesday's Transcript says: "Mr. Flood, while not wishing to have his case tried through the newspaper, emphatically denies the statement of the representatives of the Deering Harvester Company that he had admitted his guilt, and on the contrary is confident of fully establishing his innocence. He claims that it is an effort on the part of the company to compel him to furnish new notes for ones that were accepted by the company, and for the reason that the parties were not responsible ones the company has been unable to collect them."—Valley Herald.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 13, 1896.

President Cleveland is allowing the Senators to monopolize the talk on Cuban affairs, and they have certainly done a lot of it that was entirely unnecessary, this week, inasmuch as the acceptance of the report of the committee on Foreign Relations in favor of the Senate accepting the House resolutions as a substitute for its own resolutions was a foregone conclusion from the first. And talking wasn't the only unnecessary thing the Senate did this week. While the report of its committee was pending it adopted a resolution calling on the President for all the information in his posession concerning the present state of affairs in Cuba. Cuban affairs were fully discussed at the last cabinet meeting and there are rumors of the President having sent a trusted agent to Cubato find out just how things are and of his intention to send a message to Congress on the subject, but neither the President nor any member of his cabinet will talk about it, at least not for publication. One thing can be set down as certain. Congress has been stampeded, but the administration will not be. Mr. Cleveland wants to know he is right before he takes action that cannot be recalled, and which may cost the U. S. thousands of lives and millions of dollars.

The report of the majority of the Senate Election Committee, written by Chandler, of N. H., in favor of the resolution for investigating the election of the Alabama legislature that elected Senator Morgan exposes a republican plot to get a majority in the Senate by unfair means. Their purpose is to use the populists to help them pass this resolution. Then to have the investigation committee report in favor of unseating Senator Morgan, when the populists are again expected to join them in voting for the adoption of that report.

The Republicans in the House hope to get some campaign thunder out of the hearings which have been arranged by a sub-committee of the House committee on Ways and Means for next week. These hearings are announced to be for the purpose of ascertaining whether the reciprocity treaties and arrangements made by the late Mr. Blaine during the last republican administration were of sufficient benefit to this country to make their renewal advisable, and what tariff and customs regulations in foreign countries are detrimental to an increase in our foreign business. As to the reciprocity treaties, the democratic Congress which repealed them ascertained by thorough investigation that this country received no benefit at all from the most of them and from the others so little that the whole business was thrown overboard. Unless I miss my guess these hearings will be followed by the same rose-colored newspaper fairy stories about reciprocity which were so plentiful when Mr. Blaine was working on the scheme.

Senators Morgan and Chandler made a very good imitation of a monkey out of Senator Hoar during the somewhat acid debate which followed Senator Hale's rather remarkable procerding of having read a statement made by the Spanish minister, which accused three Senators by name with having made untrue statements during the argument on the Cuban resolutions Senator Hoar put in his oar by offering a resolution to postpone consideration of the report of the Foreign Relations committee until April 6th, and aggravated the matter by some sneering remarks at the expense of that committee for having agreed to a resolution that was binding upon nobody. Just when he was talking about the injustice of our meddling with the affairs of Spain and Cuba, Senator Morgan quietly upset the old gentleman by asking: "Where did you get the information upon which to sustain your earnest action regarding Armenia?" After Mr. Hoar had tried to reconcile his late position towards the Armenians with his present one towards the Cubans, to the great amusement of the Senate and the crowded galleries, Senator Chandler read a telegram which Senator Hoar sent to the President, offering his support by speech and vote for the most vigorous measures against the Turks, even to treating them as pirates and enemies of the human race, and turning to Mr. Hoar, he said: "I suppose you intended to add, provided that nothing is done until after April 6th."

The anti option bill of Col. Hatch, which has been killed so often and which passed the House in the last Congress and came near enough to being passed by the Senate to badly frighten its opponents, is about to be killed once more. The House committee on Agriculture has agreed to table the bill.

Senator Turpie's speech against the right of Dupont, of Del., to a seat in the Senate is unanswerable from a legal and constitutional point of view.

EUROPEAN LETTER.

(From Our Special Correspondent.)

ROME, Italy, March 1, 1896.

This morning I went to the dome of St. Peter's, 435 feet high. I was tired after that climb, and sat down and rested and drank in the beauty of that scene for a long time. On the west lay the drear campagna, which is interesting historically—not physically. The soil looks poor. It has had time to wear out, hasn't it, during 4,000 years? The city outskirts are belted with undulating hills. Farther on, these wrinkles are smoothed out. Still farther, in the distance, the sea can be seen. This roof is so immense that families occupy houses built on top of it. To the north lay the Janiculum Aventine, Capitoline and Palatine Hills. To the east, the Pincian and Quirinal, and in the distance the snow-capped Alban mountains. Just in front flowed the Tiber, separating the old, densly-built section of the city from the more open, newer part. It turns sharply to the right soon after it passes the Castle of St. Angelo, getting out of the way of the slope which rises gradually to St. Peter's. To the south lay a great campus, on which I counted twenty companies of soldiers going through their daily drill. Adjoining the church on this side, is the largest palace in the world, the Vatican which is, indeed, a small world in itself, politically isolated, as is the District of Columbia. On this territory, sacred to the Pope, no Italian soldier can set foot; I refer, of course to the palace or Vatican gardens. From my height, I looked down on His Holiness' private grounds, beautifully 'laid out. Just beyond them is a piece of woodland which looks as if it had been snatched bodily from a dense forest and set down here—so wild and uncultivated is it. Here, we imagine, His Holiness takes refuge on hot summer evenings; and with the trees as sentinels, he walks and meditates on how he can regain the power he will never know. He has enough titles to be at the head of the universe. Here they are: Vicar of Jesus Christ, Successor to the Prince of Apostles, Pontifex of the Universal Church, Patriarch of the West, Primate of Italy, Metropolitan Archbishop of the Province of Rome, Sovereign of the Temporal Dominions of the Holy Roman Church. Are you out of breath? And yet he is a good man. He cannot help his titles.

Coming down the stairs, I counted 61 marble slabs, which had been inlaid in the wall, announcing that on such a date, such a crowned head or royal personage has ascended the dome of St. Peter's. This reminds me that one of the original stones of the wall of Romulus, which surrounded the old city of the Palatine Hill, is among the inlaid stones in our Washington monument. Then I went down and around to the Vatican library, where I saw many relics from the Catacombs, many invaluable illuminated manuscripts, beautiful stained glass, and many priceless treasures in the shape of vases, etc., which had been presented to the different Popes from the greatest personages and from the farthest ends of the earth. But what surprised me on the street, was an African Francescan monk.

Yesterday, under the shadow of the prison where his Apostolic namesake was confined, I took Paul, a book and a ball, and went to spend the afternoon in the Forum Romanum. I sat on the steps of the Basilica Julia and read, while Paul kicked his football up and down the lava flagstones of the Sacred Way. If stones ever preach sermons, how eloquent are these. Presently the ball rolled far off and fell into the Cloaca Maxima. Then there was a great anxiety until I spoke to a workman, who got a ladder and handed the ball up from the sluggish water. The ladder was at hand, or I should never have taken steps to recover the ball. We have come home and are tired. Yesterday, likewise, we spent the afternoon there, and the two days preceeding we enjoyed the warm sunshine and the fine military band on the green lawns of the Pincian Hill. Here we most always see the King and Queen taking a drive. But they are always in different carriages, and appear at different times. Thursday the King was driving a pair of spirited horses, and yet took off his hat to every body who glanced toward him. A kingly perogative! As the hill was swarming with people he had his hands full.

The Court ball was given up last week on account of the war. The King won approbation by ordering that the funds which had been intended for it should be distributed among the charitable institutions of the city. On account of the war there is to be no carnival this year, and no wonder; for Italy is holding her breath in the greatest suspense, and is too heartsick for merry-making.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

THE secretaries of war and navy have rearranged the stars on the flag so that there will be six rows, the first, third and fifth of eight stars each and the second, fourth and sixth of seven stars each. The new flag will be unfurled on July 4. The stars on the blue field have grown rapidly in number.

TWO KENTUCKY gentlemen quarreled over a question of grammar, whether it was proper to say "an historian" or "a historian." To convince him, Mr. Webb West broke the nose of Mr. Albert Johnson, and each gentleman contributed $11 to the support of the police court. Such little incidents lend life its savor.

A NEW YORK paper compliments Presbyterians upon the "number of beautiful women" in attendance upon the great missionary meeting held in that city recently. It says it was not the "showy dresses or costly jewelry." The facts are that Christianity speaks in the eyes and faces of women, and gives a charm and beauty that nothing else can.

THAT is a most commendable undertaking by the National Academy of Sciences, having for its object the formulation of a practicable forestry policy for the preservation and maintenance of the forests of the public domain. There are 18 forest reservations, and, unless the forested lands are put under systematic, scientific forestry regulations, the timber will all disappear in a few years.

THE German scientists experimenting with Roentgen's X rays have discovered an application of them that promises to be of some utility to those people who would like to wear genuine diamonds, but have not the skill to detect the counterfeit. The rays distinguish the paste from the real infallibly. It will be a severe blow, however, to those aspiring folk who sport sparklers that are the creation of art.

A NEW YORK burglar coolly walked into a residence of the metropolis the other day and took away spoils amounting to about $500. A young female boarder, who was on the second floor, heard the burglar whistling "She May Have Seen Better Days," but, thinking it was the landlady's son, thought no more of it. This is a successful innovation for burglars. Therefore, if you ever hear a man whistling in your home get a broad ax or a gun and be after him at once, for it may be a burglar.

THE Anneke Jans estates are largely fictitious. Some shrewd lawyers are back of it, from all accounts, and those who know themselves, or believe themselves to be, descended from the good midwife of New Amsterdam, now New York, who married Dominie Everardus Bogardus and was renowned for her sharp tongue as well as her smart babies, should hesitate before pouring money into funds to prosecute their supposed claims on millions in the bank of Holland. The descendants of the Dutch woman seem to be legion. Every town in the United States has a few of them.

THE crusades were over centuries ago, and nowadays pilgrims go to the Holy Land in peace and not in war. A strange party of pilgrims left Philadelphia the other day. It consisted of 72 persons, including Americans, Scandinavians and a few Hebrews, who had sacrificed farms and business to go to Palestine, there to worship amid the scenes of Biblical history. The pilgrims have no idea of how they will live when they reach their destination, but they are confident that they will not want. Such faith and trust are as rare in this generation as are pilgrimages to Jerusalem.

THE governments of Brazil, Uruguay and the Argentine Republic have, at the suggestion of Mr. Buchanan, the United States minister to the Argentine Republic, sent invitations to the leading business organizations of the country to send delegates to their respective countries this year to investigate the field for trade and obtain the accurate knowledge of conditions and needs so important for our manufacturers and business men. These invitations have been sent to leading business organizations, and they will no doubt be accepted, and it is certain that good results will follow.

FIFTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

The Proceedings of the First Session.

Washington, March 13.—Senators Sherman and Hill were the conspicuous figures in the Cuban debate in the senate yesterday, the New York senator forcibly urging the mercenary character of the pending resolutions, while Mr. Sherman upheld them with another graphic arraignment of Spain and Gen. Weyler. In the house the committee on territories reported favorably the bill for a delegate from Alaska. The contested election case of Aldrich vs. Robbins, from the Fourth Alabama district, in which the republicans recommended the seating of Aldrich, occupied the greater part of the session, but no action was taken.

Washington, March 14.—The excitement in the Cuban debate gave way in the senate yesterday to Mr. Cockrell's elaborate speech favoring the free coinage of silver. A bill was introduced appropriating $50,000 for the erection of a statue of Abraham Lincoln at Gettysburg and favorable reports were made upon the bill for the admission of New Mexico as a state and upon the joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution of the United States providing for the election of United States senators by a direct vote of the people. Senator Peffer presented a petition asking congress to make the 5th day of April (Resurrection day) a national holiday. After two days' debate the house by a vote of 173 to 59 unseated Gaston A. Robbins from the Fourth Alabama district and decided that his republican opponent, W. F. Aldrich, was elected and entitled to the seat. Bills were passed requiring officers of American steamers to be citizens of the United States and repealing the laws exempting from tonnage duties vessels from countries which extended similar exemptions to our vessels.

Washington, March 17.—In the senate yesterday Senator Lodge spoke in favor of his bill to restrict immigration, Senator Pugh talked in support of the silver amendment to the tariff bill and Senator Morgan made an appeal for the Cuban insurgents. Bills were introduced for the deepening of the channel of the Fox river from Green Bay to Depere, Wis., and for the establishment of a life-saving station at Port Huron, Mich.

ALL IS OVER.

The Kentucky Legislature Fails to Elect a Senator.

The Joint Session Dissolved Forever —Troops Guarded the Capitol, But There Was No Trouble.

Frankfort, Ky., March 17.—Three hundred and fifty militiamen from Louisville, Lexington and Frankfort guard the state house grounds. Gov. Bradley and Adjt. Gen. Collier had a consultation at the executive mansion and previous orders were renewed.

All Is Quiet.

The situation is quiet. The young soldiers looked on the occasion as a frolic. Gov Bradley instructed the soldiers to admit James and Walton to the senate chamber, and James said they would cast their votes for senator in joint session, whatever came.

The Governor Indorsed.

When the house met Mr. Barnett offered a resolution indorsing the governor. Some one moved the previous question. The speaker put it, and in a minute the house presented the wildest scene of the session. The previous question was ordered by a vote of 50 to 45. Then the resolution was adopted by a party vote.

GOV. BRADLEY.

The Joint Session.

The joint session began promptly at noon amid the din of voices inside, bugles and drums outside, the glint and glare of musketry inside. The senators and half a hundred newspaper men filed through and into the house hall. The lobbies of the latter were filled with ladies and state officials. While the crowd was gathering a good-humored group had to be rapped to order for singing the "Doxology."

Dissolved Everlastingly.

On the preliminary roll call the chair announced that 66 had answered to their names, but that a ballot would be taken to see if 70, a quorum, was present and voting. The ballot began. Not a man, republican or democrat, answered to his name during the call of the senate roll.

Mr. Burnam asked for a call of the senate absentees, but was not accorded a second. There were no votes in the house until Mr. Burnam's name was called and he voted for Boyle. Garret also voted for Boyle. No other person answered, and the ballot resulted: "Boyle, 2." Mr. Howard moved that the session be dissolved everlastingly, eternally and forever. His motion carried with a wild yell. A member started up the Doxology, and the crowd in the lobby joined in.

Accomplished All He Hoped For.

Senator Blackburn sat in the senate cloak room surrounded by his friends, smiling at his satisfaction at having accomplished all he had really hoped for from the beginning. He will leave for Washington at once. St. John Boyle did not look happy. He had been badly disappointed. This was the 51st ballot.

Proved a Boomerang.

The startling feature of the day was the result of the investigating committee. The democrats are in high dudgeon over the outcome. They confidently expected to establish as a fact that Gov. Bradley and the republican leaders had conspired to call out the militia in order to compel the senate to allow Senators Walton and James to vote. In this they failed. The testimony of Col. Gaither proved a boomerang. It showed that the democrats had been in communication with John and Phil Thompson and others of that ilk for the purpose of filling the capitol with armed men and intimidating the general assembly.

Col. Gaithers' testimony produced a decided sensation. In answer to a question from Mr. Gobel, the colonel replied that he believed the senator to have been cognizant of the plans of Phil Thompson's resort to arms. He said that Phil Thompson told him if he came to the capitol he would be killed.

Phil Thompson corroborated the statements made by Col. Gaither.

Citizens Voice Their Indignation.

There was not standing room in the courthouse when the indignation meeting to protest against the action of Gov. Bradley in calling out the troops was called to order by Mayor Julian. His honor made a speech telling of his conference with Gov. Bradley, in which he had assured the executive that he would give the legislature ample protection, and characterized his action in ordering out the troops as highly partisan and unbecoming a governor. Gen. Hendrick nominated Judge Lysander Hoord as chairman of the meeting. As Judge Hoord took the chair there was a wild burst of applause. Speeches were made by Ed. Taylor, Ollie James and others, denouncing the action of Gov. Bradley in severe terms.

They Wore the Green.

M'KINLEY ON SILVER.

Views of the Ex-Governor on the Money Question.

New York, March 16.—Ex-Gov. William McKinley, of Ohio, has finally broken the silence he has held for many months when the general public criticism of his opinion on silver was repeated to him. At his home in Canton Saturday he gave his views succinctly to a specially-commissioned correspondent of a New York paper. He was told that "sound money" republicans complained that the Ohio platform, which he was supposed to have written, was too favorable to silver, while the silver senators all said it was too favorable to the single gold standard. Maj. McKinley was told there was a universal demand to know where he really stood. He replied:

"I have discussed the question of currency coinage in congress, and my record is plain. Vice President Stevenson once said the people were willing to chance free and unlimited coinage, and I responded that the people were not prepared to indulge in any such speculation.

"You will see in the records of congress I said in 1890 we should preserve gold and silver money side by side—that I did not want gold at a premium or silver at a discount, or vice versa, but that I wanted both metals to be equal in purchasing power and in legal tender quality; equal in power to perform the functions of money with which to do the business and move the commerce of the United States.

"My exact views are these," and ex-Gov. McKinley read from the Congressional Record:

"'It is only because of the safe and conservative financial policy of the republican party, aided by conservative men of both parties, which has more than once received the approval of the country, that since 1878 we have compelled gold and silver to work together upon an equality, both being employed as safe means of exchange in the business of our country.

"'They talk about silver being cheap money. I am not attracted by the word cheap, whether applied to nations, or to money, or to men.

"'Whatever dollars we have in this country must be good dollars, as good in the hands of the poor as the rich, equal dollars equal in inherent merit, equal in purchasing power, whether they be paper dollars or gold dollars, or treasury notes, each convertable into the other, and each exchangeable for the other, because each is based upon equal value and has behind it security, good, not by the fiat of the law alone, but good because the whole commercial world recognizes its inherent and inextinguishable value.'"

STILL WAITING.

Business Shows But Little Sign of Improvement—Hope for the Future.

New York, March 14.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say:

"Waiting is still the rule. Large hope, but little actual business explain the strength of some markets and the weakness of others. Thus far there is a decided increase in the demand for boots and shoes, secured by considerable concessions in price, but in other branches of business concessions are made in vain, or are not made. Meanwhile, it is encouraging to know that one of the most important interests has realized definite improvement. The insurance companies show a larger business and larger income than ever before, and also a remarkable soundness of mortgage loans and other investments.

"As prices about February 21 were, on the whole, the lowest ever known in this country, considerable space is given this week to comparison of quotations in the most important branches of manufacture, which show the extent of reaction since the rise last fall. It is especially noteworthy that prices of materials have varied quite differently from prices of manufactured products. Thus cotton is 27.9 per cent. higher than a year ago, but cotton goods average only 10.7 per cent. Wool is but 5.3 per cent. higher than a year ago, but woolen goods are on the whole about four per cent. lower. Pig iron is only 17 per cent higher than a year ago, while finished products of iron and steel average 45 per cent. higher. Boots and shoes are practically not higher than a year ago, while leather has risen 11.5 per cent., and hides at the moment are only 2.2 per cent. higher. These comparisons are important because they disclose something of the grave dislocation of prices which inadequate consumption and combinations have produced.

"Failures for the week have been 300 in the United States against 266 last year, and 60 in Canada against 57 last year."

Bradstreet's says:

"The only conspicuously favorable feature of the general business situation is the report of February gross railway earnings throughout the country. Receipts of 126 companies last month were larger, with a single exception, than in any preceding month for more than three years, the February total for 1896 being $34,484,000—a gain over that total last year of nearly 14 per cent. These results are due in part to favorable weather conditions, large grain traffic and the inclusion of one more business day."

PATRICK H. KELLY ASSIGNS.

Ill-Health Given as the Reason—All Debts Will Be Paid.

St. Paul, Minn., March 16.—It is learned that on Saturday evening a document was filed in the office of the clerk of the district court which proved to be the assignment of Patrick H. Kelly, one of the foremost men of the state. For a quarter of a century Mr. Kelly has been a leading wholesale merchant of St. Paul, is at present a member of the legislature, was for ten years national democratic committeeman for Minnesota and has always been foremost in the promotion of public works. The assignment is made to John F. Meagher, of Mankato, a close political and personal friend of Mr. Kelly. The P. H. Kelly Mercantile company has not yet made an assignment, but it was announced that it would at once proceed to adjust its affairs in the same way that Mr. Kelly had chosen.

Mr. Kelly was ill at the Merchant's hotel and could not be seen, but a warm personal friend said that the assignment should not be regarded as a failure in the ordinary sense of the term. Mr. Kelly has been a busy man all his life and has broken down. He has been ill for nearly a year, although he did not take to his room and bed until a short time ago. He has been alarmed about his condition for some time and has felt that he had not long to live. His interests are very vast and he concluded that it would be best to adjust his affairs through an assignment. Such a course was really not necessary, as Mr. Kelly has ample means.

DISGRACE AND DEATH.

They Overtake a Misguided Postmaster in Kansas.

Kansas City, Mo., March 17.—Frank Mapes, postmaster of Kansas City, Kan., committed suicide at ten o'clock Sunday morning by blowing his brains out with a revolver. The act was committed in his home just as some friends whom he had sent after arrived at the door. Inspectors Sutton and Reed had just completed an examination of his accounts and found a deficiency amounting to $8,000. Mapes had held the office for three years. He made no statement as to what he had done with the money.

Killed Four Men.

Hazleton, Pa., March 12.—A locomotive on the Delaware, Susquehanna & Schuylkill railroad blew up at Gum Run Wednesday afternoon, killing John Chambers, Jonas Stewart, Michael Boyle and Frank O'Donnell, and injuring William Timony.

KEPT AHEAD OF THE BULLETS.

Astounding Swiftness of Foot Shown by a Georgia Razor-Back.

Col. Taylor Jenkins, who lives a few miles north of Blakely, is known throughout that section as one of the most truthful men in it. At least, so says the Early County Times. Recently, while Mr. Jenkins was out hunting, his dogs began barking at something in a large hollow log. It was a wild hog. He took the hog home and dropped it in his cornfield. It is there now. A few weeks ago Mr. Jenkins went out to kill it, thinking he could easily do so with his unerring rifle. He searched about till he "jumped" it. Down a corn row it went like lightning. He leveled his rifle and "cut down" on it, but never touched a hair. He "jumped" it again and shot again, but no hog. Again and again he "jumped" it and shot at it, with the same result. He began to wonder what could be the matter. The corn rows were as straight as moonshine whisky and his gun true as the third party to Tom Watson, yet hit it he couldn't. To shoot at the hog as it ran off down the corn rows was just like shooting at it standing, so far as getting a "bead on it" was concerned. To make sure that he didn't "wobble" off the hog he put up a small target and "cracked down" at it five times, then took his ax and chopped in and found five balls all in one hole in the middle of the spot. That settled it—that the fault was not in him or the gun, but the hog had outrun the bullets.

EVEN SILK IS ADULTERATED.

Tannate of Tin and Silica to Give It Weight.

Some improvements in the treatment of silks are announced. Ordinarily silk is "weighted" by depositing tannate of tin on the fiber; the material receives a bath of tannic acid and then another of perchloride of tin, a repetition of this being made until an increase of the weight amounts to from 15 to 20 per cent., beyond which it is not considered safe to go in the case of silk intended to be dyed light shades or to be bleached. Recently a German inventor has brought forward a process in which silica is the weighting agent. In carrying out this method, says the Detroit News-Tribune, three steps are described. First, the silk, raw or in any stage of manufacture, and either before or after dyeing, is worked for an hour in a bath of perchloride of tin; then, after squeezing and washing, it is worked in a warm solution of water glass or soluble silicate of soda for about an hour, followed by washing, having also been previously passed through a solution of phosphate of soda. The operation may be repeated again and again, with no harmful effect on the fiber or on the subsequent dyeing, and in five operations the silk may be increased in weight some 100 to 120 per cent. The silk is now soaped, and, if already dyed, is cleared in an emulsion of olive oil and acid.

South Africa's Joan of Arc.

Cecil Armitage, a young Englishman in Ashantee, tells of a strange West African "Joan of Arc," who is equipping an army for King Prempeh. Her appearance is more impressive than beautiful, and, unlike the famous French Joan, whose features we know, this dusky amazon is said to have only one eye, one ear and one arm and to wear her hair hanging long. With one touch of her magic wand she can bring armies together, and in an engagement a brass pan is placed before her, into which all the bullets of the enemy can conveniently fall without hurting her brave soldiers.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

MY GIRL.

She cannot play the organ, piano or the like,
She never wore the bloomers and she doesn't ride the bike;
In dress she's not as stylish as some others that you see,
But still she's just the sweetest girl in all the world to me.

You may not think her witty, you cannot call her smart,
She never heard of Trilby and knows nothing of Delsarte;
She doesn't seem well posted in the new-made woman's ways,
And never talks of football or the great athletic craze.

Sometimes she helps her mother, but now I must confess,
When she tries her hand at baking she makes an awful mess.
Her cake is never eaten, and, no matter how she tries,
There's no one seems to care about the flavor of her pies.

And yet, somehow, she's managed her image to enshrine,
To creep into and twine herself around this heart of mine,
Until I think "without her how lonely life would be,"
This world would lose its brightness and leave but misery.

Her age—that's a secret that girls do not confess,
They always seem inclined to make it just a little less;
But she's a sweet exception unto the rules that be,
If you ask she'll proudly answer thus: "I'se dust edzatly tree."
"I'se dust edzatly tree."

PEGDOT'S GREAT SCHEME

A Plan to Do Philanthropists Who Have Doubts.

It Was the Result of an Abundant Supply of Food and a Great Scarcity of Drink—More Happiness in Panhandler's Row.

Panhandlers' row has a new method of outwitting practical philanthropy, which is not the variety for which the panhandlers sigh. It is the invention of Pegdot, whose wooden leg is one of the stand-bys of that part of Park row which used to be called Chatham street, and its mother is necessity. For some weeks and luck and Pegdot had been strangers, and, though he had been more than well supplied with food, drink had been very scarce, a peculiar combination of circumstances wherefrom he evolved his great scheme. About the period of the merry Yule-tide Pegdot's wooden member slumped its irregular way into the Imperial restaurant and cafe, where the royalty of the row is fed at prices ranging from ten cents for a half stew up to fifteen cents for an extra steak. Knowing the visitor's reputation of old, the cashier, who also acts as bouncer, cast a glance behind him to make sure that his club was in easy reach, and said:

"Buy yer chips here er y' can't git inter this game.'

"Ah, Jim, good afternoon," said Peg, with the easy elegance for which he was famed. "I dropped in here to have a little talk with you. I've got a little idea I'd like—"

"Have you got t'irteen cents?" demanded the cashier, putting strenuous emphasis upon the set price of the Imperial's justly celebrated table d'hote dinner.

With an airy wave of his hand Peg dismissed the question.

"What I came to see you about is this," he explained. "I have thought out a little scheme—"

"I'm onter yer little schemes. Y' don't go on the outside of any tabble dote meals here on the stren'th of a divvy yer goin' ter get t'morrow."

"Not at all," replied Peg, with dignity, though an expression of pain flitted over his features. "I have no such intention, I assure you."

"Ner y' don't slide in on me like y' did w'en y' give me th' song an' dance about Shinny Miggs settlin' fer yer grub, an' then put in yer three square meals with Shinny, beside yer puttin' in more than he cud pay fer on his own hook, let alone squarin' fer youse."

"If you are unwilling to let bygones be bygones," began Pegdot, with gathering wrath on his brow; "if you're looking for trouble and won't listen to a gent who wants to explain something to you—"

A minatory wave of the wooden leg suggested the conclusion, and the cashier-bouncer hastily stepped back, for Pegdot had been known to throw himself on his back and rotate from his own axis with such effect that those who encountered the wooden leg in its flight went to the hospital in an ambulance.

"Don't git google-eyed, Peg," said he, in conciliatory tones, at the same time laying his hand on the emergency club. "Put some ice down yer collar, an' sing yer tra-la."

Thus adjured the veteran panhandler propped himself up against the desk, and Jim hastily closed the cash drawer, an involuntary tribute to his character which in nowise discomfited the visitor.

"You observed me in here last week several times, Jim," began Peg.

"Yep," was the answer. "Y' was here till I t'ought y' muster give up drinkin' fer a livin' an' taken ter eatin'."

"You may also have observed," proceeded the visitor, "that each time I was brung here by a gent who paid for my dinner, and then went away."

"Y' had a good t'ing in tow every turn outer th' box," assented Jim.

"Four of those last week," said Pegdot, reflectively, "and I couldn't touch one of them for a cent. Nothing but meals. Jim, do you understand why those gents came here and blew me off to a square?"

"Repitation of th' restyrant," said Jim, glancing proudly at an Aubrey-Beardsleyish sign informing a hungry public through the medium of writing letters in sanguinary hues that "punkin pie" was to be had for "three sents a slise."

"Those gents, Jim, were philanthroplists."

"I t'ought they was soft marks."

"That's what I said, out I got it down finer. Now my scheme is to get ahead of these philanthropists this way. Some gent that writes letters to the papers wrote about how no real, first-class philanthropist would give money to a street beggar, but only take him to a joint and buy him a meal. I wish I had that mug here," and the wooden leg described an exclamation point in the air. "Since then I ain't had a thing but grub, grub, grub, till it gives me the jiggers to look at a bill of fare."

"Wotcher goin' ter do about it?" inquired the other in unconscious paraphrase of a historic personage.

"I'm going to do the philanthropist," returned Pegdot, "and you're going to chip in and push it along. Now, look-a-here, what do you think I want of your meals?"

"Not much; you want the ready ter soak away inter the bank with enough lef' out fer a ball an' a bench all night at the Rest."

To this summing up of his ambitions the panhandler agreed with a nod. He leaned over and said confidentially:

"Every time I run in a good thing here the joint gets the biz, don't it?"

"Sure."

"And I get nothing."

"Y' get yer grub."

"Grub be darned," said Pegdot, with great emphasis. "I want cash; that's what I want. Understand?"

"Yep. Keep that stilt o' yourn glued ter th' floor, will yer?"

"Here's the scheme: I run in the guy and he pays here and gets out. I sit down, but I don't order, and as quick as he gets out I get up without eating anything. But you got the 13 cents for the grub. You give me the ten cents and keep the three cents. You's the three cents to the good, and you get it for nothing, for I don't take a bite. Understand?"

No audible reply came from the other, but he thrust his face forward, drew up the corner of his mouth in an extraordinary grimace, winked violently, and then waggled his hand under his chin. That was all.

"Oh! well," said the inventor of the scehme, somewhat discomfited, "I ain't mean; say eight cents to me and the nickel to you."

"D'yer take this joint fer a Chris'mas tree?" inquired Jim, coolly. "Youse gimme seven cents an' take six; see?"

"Do I get a bowl of stew thrown in?"

"That goes," said Jim, and the deal was concluded.

The very next day in came Peg with a philanthropist in tow. He was a young philanthropist, able bodied and well-dressed, and Peg tipped a wink to his friend Jim.

"Pay here, gent," said Jim.

"All right; one meal. How much?" said the young man.

"T'irteen cents,' replied the cashier, and the philanthropist, putting down the money, followed Peg's lead into the place, which was more than Peg had reckoned on.

"You wouldn't sit down here, sir," he expostulated. "A gent like you don't want to be seen in a place like this."

"I guess none of my acquaintances are likely to see me here," returned the young man, easily. "Go ahead and eat."

"But it ain't a fit place for you," insisted Peg. "It may not look so bad, but it ain't so clean as it might be, and the board of health's been after it. Only poor unfortunates like me eats here."

"Don't apologize for the place," was the reply. "It isn't so bad as it might be."

Seeing nothing else for it, Peg ordered his dinner and set to work upon it; but it was slow work. Six beers and a couple of whiskies that morning had gone far toward ruining his appetite, and it seemed as if every swallow must be his last. In despair he made a final attempt.

"Say, Mike, what did they do with that hobo that was took with typhus in here yesterday?" he inquired of a waiter, winking to make Mike understand he was to back up the statement. But Mike wasn't quick enough.

"Typhus, me eye!" he said, disdainfully. "Ain't yuse had de snakes enough times t' know 'em when y' see 'em? Say, yer wooden-toed ol' soak, I'll make a fried egg outer yer face if yer screw it up at me dat way agin."

"I don't care to take any unnecessary chances," said Peg's philanthropist. "In case it might have been typhus, I'll take precautions," and pouring some vinegar into a saucer he scattered it about, whereupon Mike immediately put down a two-cent check for "extras."

It was a hard struggle for Peg to down that meal, but the young man was watching him closely, and he had to do it. All things come to an end, but the meal's end was very near being Peg's end; at least he felt that way. It filled him up till he was too inert to beg, so he went to the Rest and hibernated over night on the strength of two drinks purchased with a dime he had saved from the night before.

While there he perfected his plan and unfolded it to his friend Jim as soon as he could get to him. The result was that a new bill of fare was specially prepared for any philanthropist Peg might run in who wanted to see him feed. On this special bill regular dinner was 25 cents instead of 13, and all dishes were double their ordinary price. Thereafter when the clump of Peg's wooden member was heard approaching Jim handily turned the price mottoes to the wall and thrust forward the fake bill. They divided even on the extra price.

Since his invention Peg has been prospering greatly. His only grief is that he couldn't copyright the scheme, for his chief rival, "Fishball Jenkins," who poses as a one-armed veteran, with the lost arm strapped under his waistcoat, has imitated the idea, and is running a cooperative business with one of the other Row restaurants. Panhandlers' row is a bad place for practical philanthropy nowadays. —N. Y. Sun.

Social Blunders.

At a reception recently a certain young man got into trouble by joining in a conversation when he knew not with whom he was talking. He was standing near the punch bowl, and two ladies close by were speaking of—well, "Mrs. O'Flounce" will do. "Oh," said one woman, "only think of having such a name—O'Flounce!" And she shrugged her aristocratic shoulders. "Ugh!" exclaimed her friend, shuddering sympathetically. "But, goodness, ladies, that isn't anything," put in the aforementioned young man; "just suppose her name were Smith or Brown!" "Young man," said the first speaker, drawing herself up to her full height and looking at him through her lorgnette, "my name is Brown!" The conversation turned upon books, the guest complimenting the hostess upon her magnificent library. "Yes," chirped the guest's wife, "you have a lot of books, and I see a whole set of encyclopedias—oh, have you read them all?"—Washington Star.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS.

Paid No Taxes.

Not long ago State Treasurer Koerner learned that the Green Bay and Winona road, which has a few miles of track at Winona, had never paid any taxes and upon investigation discovered that the company was in arrears to the amount of over $400 or an annual tax of $45 or thereabout for the past nine years. He communicated with the officials of the road and was assured that the amount would be forwarded. Looking farther he found that the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic Company was similarly remiss and should have paid an annual tax of $50 for the past nine years, the present indebtedness thus being $450. This company has also assured Mr. Koerner that the amount will be paid, Why it is that these companies have so long enjoyed immunity from taxation does not appear but it is supposed that their property in this state was so small as not to attract the attention of the railroad commission.

Will Use Minnesota Stone.

Frontenac stone will be largely used in the interior of St. John's cathedral, the Episcopal edifice which is to be built in New York at a cost of from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000. It is not known yet how much stone will be used, but it is believed that at least 400 carloads will be required. The details of the local contract are yet incomplete.

Some years ago the architects of this edifice, through acquaintance with Gen. Garrard, learned of the merits and beauty of the Frontenac stone. When their plans for the edifice were adopted the decided to use Frontenac stone for at least a portion of the interior trimminga.

His Accounts Were Short.

J. F. Scullen, of South Bend, was arrested at Little Falls, Minn., by Sheriff Bowen on the charge of grand larceny in the first degree. Scullen was formerly town treasurer of South Bend township, and last fall while making a journey between his house and the city clerk's office, claims to have been held up and relieved of $500 of the town's money and some jewelry. Chas. Kuntz, one of Scullen's bondsmen, caused the arrest, and charges that Scullen appropriated the money to his own use.

ALMOST CRAZED.

Thought Her Child Was Going to Die.

The Terrible Ordeal of a Mother—Her Little Girl Almost Faded Away—Saved in the Nick of Time—A Story That Will Touch the Heart of Every Mother.

From the Journal, Detroit, Mich.

A very grateful mother is Mrs. A. L. Hartness, of 676 Grand Avenue, Detroit, for the wonderful cure which her daughter has received by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Said Mrs. Hartness: "Yes, my daughter's life has been saved by using Pink Pills, thanks to a kind friend who recommended them to me.

"Blanche was sick for over three years. She had the care of the best physicians procurable, and no expense or trouble was spared to give her relief. She was so thin that she was fairly skin and bones, her digestion was out of order and she had the most awful headaches. We gave up all hope of her recovery. Her long, thin, listless face made me nearly crazy, and we did everything in our power to give her strength and induce her to take an interest in anything.

"One day a friend told me about the Pink Pills, and Mr. Hartness went down town and got three boxes. She had taken about one box, when, to my amazement, one morning I heard her playing on the piano. I could hardly believe it, for it had been over a year since the piano had been opened

"Soon she began to take short rides on her bicycle, and soon she went singing around the house, our own happy, hearty little daughter once more.

"She thinks nothing of a spin on her wheel over to Mt. Clemens or Pontiac, and is as well as she ever was.

"I had a girl living at our house who was a great sufferer from impoverished blood, and who received instant and permanent relief from the use of one box of the pills.

"If this information can be of any use to help some poor sick one, it is given with the greatest of pleasure."

The proprietors of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills state that they are not a patent medicine but a prescription used for many years by an eminent practitioner who produced the most wonderful results with them, curing all forms of weakness arising from a watery condition of the blood or shattered nerves, two fruitful causes of almost every ill to which flesh is heir. The pills are also a specific for the troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, all forms of weakness, chronic constipation, bearing down pains, etc., and in the case of men will give speedy relief and effect a permanent cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. They are entirely harmless and can be given to weak and sickly children with the greatest good and without the slightest danger. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

TOO FAT TO SINK.

A Woman Who Found One Method of Suicide Impracticable.

At Anns Mills, a little hamlet near Newville, Pa., lives Alexander Geese, a well-known farmer and respected citizen. His wife, Sarah Jane Geese, has a reputation as being one of the heaviest women, if not the heaviest, in the county. Of recent years, says the Pittsburgh Commercial Gazette, her weight has been steadily increasing, until now she weighs over 300 pounds. She and her husband have 12 children and their domestic life has been happy, but her size has evidently preyed upon her mind, making her despondent. One morning recently she left her home and proceeded to the banks of the Conodoguinet creek, a stream about 100 feet in width, which runs near her home. She took her position on Gallows bridge and jumped into the deep stream, swollen and muddy from the recent rains, proposing to end her troubles.

She had neglected to consider a subject which has an important bearing on a project such as hers—that of specific gravity. She was too fat, and despite her most desperate efforts her body would not sink, and although she tried to hold her head under long enough to drown herself, she did not succeed. Her heavy body turned over and over, and finally righting itself, floated peacefully down the stream, with the head on top. By this time the woman was nearly frozen and made no further efforts to end her life. For three hours her body floated calmly on the stream, unobserved, gradually floating downward with the current. She was finally discovered and rescued.

SAVED THE OWNER TROUBLE.

Burglar Opened a Safe When the Combination Was Lost.

The proprietor of a large store on High street went to his place of business at an unusually early hour one morning; in fact, the sun had not yet risen when he turned the key in the door. On entering he was surprised to find a man trying to open the door of his safe. He stood and watched him for some time, apparently deeply interested in the proceedings, says the West Bedford (Mass.) Windmill, when finally the burglar swung open the door of the safe with a delighted chuckle, but happening to turn he saw that he was discovered, and became very much alarmed. He jumped up and was about to make his escape through a back window, when the merchant called to him:

"Don't be in a hurry, my friend; come back and sit down awhile and smoke a cigar, while I straighten things up a bit, and then come to breakfast with me. You have done me a great favor."

"Why, how's that?" asked the burglar, in great surprise.

"Well, you see, I had the combination of the safe on a bit of paper, and last night I accidentally locked it in the safe and forgot how to work it. I spent most of the night trying to get the thing open, and came in early this morning to have another try at it."

English Humor.

A strange society was brought to light during the hearing of a case before the Thames magistrate. Several men were charged with stealing a watch from a sailor, and were all discharged except Alexander Fullerton, on whom was found a savings bank book for $245 and a card of membership of a society with a curious title. It bore the following inscription: "National Liars' association—Having been a member of the above association, and finding you are a bigger liar than myself, I must congratulate you on relieving me of this card." It must be gratifying to the East end community, as well as a tribute to Fullerton's own abilities, that he had found no one worthy of relieving him of the card. The magistrate remanded him for inquiries.

SOLID GOLD TOILET SET.

Property of the Khedive Incrusted with Precious Stones.

It is said that the only complete gold toilet set in the world belongs to the khedive of Egypt. Its exact value is not known, but it must be enormous, for the set is incrusted with diamonds and other precious stones. Egypt, by the way, has a debt of about $525,000,000, and besides the interest on this has to pay an annual tribute to the sultan of Turkey amounting to nearly $3,500,000. Despite this the present khedive has been following in the footsteps of his predecessors, whose extravagances brought about the present almost bankrupt condition of the country.

Each piece of the khedive's golden toilet set bears his monogram in diamonds. A pward of 3,000 diamonds and over 1,200 rubies were used in decorating these gorgeous adjuncts to the Egyptian ruler's dressing-table. The body of each of the 28 pieces is of 18-karat gold, and all are inclosed in a diamond-incrusted ebony case.

The Unkindest Cut of All,

As Shakespeare says, is to poke fun or sneer at people who are nervous, under the half-belief that their complaint is imaginary or an affectation. It is neither, but a serious reality. Imperfect digestion and assimilation of the food is a very common cause of nervousness, especially that distressing form of it which manifests itself in want of sleep. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters speedily remedies nervousness, as it also does malarial, kidney, bilious and rheumatic ailments. The weak gain vigor speedily through its use.

These stopped using soap, long ago.
This one stopped because—well, we'll have to guess why. Perhaps, because it gave him too much work to do. That's what everybody thinks, for that matter, when there's nothing but soap at hand, and there's a good deal of dirt to be removed from anything.
But this one stopped because she had found something better than soap—Pearline (no soap). Something easier, quicker, simpler, more economical. No rubbing to speak of, no wear—easy work and money saved, whether it's washing clothes, cleaning house, or any kind of washing and cleaning

$10,000 FOR WOMEN
$1,000 FOR THE ONE WHO GUESSES BEST!

A YEAR AGO THE CHICAGO RECORD offered $30,000 in cash prizes to authors for the best "stories of mystery." The stories were so called because it was required that a mystery should run through the entire story and be disclosed only in the last chapter, the purpose being to give CASH PRIZES to those readers of THE CHICAGO RECORD who should be able to solve the mystery, or come nearest to a correct solution of it, IN ADVANCE of the publication of the last chapter in the paper.

THE AWARD OF AUTHORS' PRIZES HAS JUST BEEN MADE.

Stories from all parts of the English-speaking world, to the number of 816, were entered in the competition. Twelve Cash Prizes were offered for the best twelve stories. The first prize was $10,000, and was won by Harry Stillwell Edwards, of Macon, Ga. His story is entitled:

"SONS AND FATHERS,"

AND ITS PUBLICATION WILL BEGIN IN THE CHICAGO RECORD ON MARCH 23, and continue in about thirty daily installments until completed. "SONS AND FATHERS" is beyond all question THE GREAT STORY OF THE YEAR. There will be an interval of a week or more between the publication of the last installment containing the explanation of the mystery and the immediately preceding chapter, during which period the guesses will be received by THE RECORD.

To still further promote popular interest in this remarkable story THE CHICAGO RECORD offers $10,000 in 889 cash prizes for the 889 guesses which shall come the nearest to being true and complete solutions of the mystery in the story.

THE $10,000 IS DIVIDED AS FOLLOWS:

To the reader from whom THE RECORD receives the most complete and correct solution in all its details of the entire mystery of the story, as it shall be disclosed in the last chapter when published	$1,000
For the second best solution	500
For the third best solution	300
For the fourth best solution	200
For the next 5 nearest best solutions, $100 each	500
For the next 10 nearest best solutions, 50 each	500
For the next 20 nearest best solutions, 25 each	500
For the next 50 nearest best solutions, 20 each	1,000
For the next 300 nearest best solutions, 10 each	3,000
For the next 500 nearest best solutions, 5 each	2,500
In all 889 prizes, amounting to	$10,000

FULL PARTICULARS as to the details of the conditions governing the awarding of these prizes will be published in THE CHICAGO RECORD. The principal rules are as follows:

1.—But one solution can be entered by a reader. It is immaterial whether the reader subscribes for the paper direct to the office of publication, or whether it is bought from the local newsdealer. The contest is open, under the specified conditions, to all who read the paper.

2.—The explanation of the mystery may be made in the reader's own words, in the English language, and without any attempt at "fine writing," simply giving as many of the facts that go to make a "complete and absolutely correct solution of the entire mystery" as the reader may be able to discover.

3.—The $10,000 will be awarded, under the conditions announced, according to the best judgment of the judges appointed by THE CHICAGO RECORD, and they will have complete control and final decision, beyond any appeal, in all matters relating to this unique contest.

And last, but not least,

ONLY WOMEN AND GIRLS MAY GUESS.

THE CHICAGO RECORD is pre-eminently a FAMILY NEWSPAPER, and its daily installment of a high-grade serial story is a feature intended to specially commend it to the home circle. To emphasize—and advertise—the fact that THE CHICAGO RECORD is a newspaper particularly suitable for woman's reading the further condition is made that the $10,000 in prizes shall be paid only for explanations or guesses sent in by women and girls. All may read, but only WOMEN AND GIRLS MAY GUESS.

SEND 10 CENTS AND GET THE RECORD 10 DAYS.

A SPECIAL OFFER.....

THE RECORD will be sent to any address, post-paid, for 10 days, beginning with the first chapter of the story, FOR 10 CENTS, in coin or postage stamps. The story begins March 23, and it is desirable that subscriptions should be received as far in advance of that date as possible, but all subscriptions on this special offer received up to April 1 will be filled, but none after April 1.

THE CHICAGO RECORD ... is Chicago's leading morning daily. In fact, with a single exception, it has the largest morning circulation in America—160,000 a day. It is a member of The Associated Press and "prints all the news from all the world." It is independent in politics and gives all political news with judicial impartiality, free from the taint of partisanship. It is Chicago's family newspaper. Prof. J. T. Hatfield, of the Northwestern University, writing to the Evanston (Ill.) Index, says:

"I have come to the firm conclusion, after a long test, and after a wide comparison with the journals of many states and countries, that THE CHICAGO RECORD comes as near being the ideal daily journal as we are for some time likely to find on these mortal shores."

The journalists' class paper, published in New York, called "Newspaperdom," says:

"There is no paper published in America that so nearly approaches the true journalistic ideal as THE CHICAGO RECORD."

Forward your subscription as early as possible, so that your name may be entered on the subscription list at once and the paper be sent you without any delay and in time for the opening chapters of THE RECORD'S GREAT $10,000 PRIZE STORY. Address

VICTOR F. LAWSON, Publisher THE CHICAGO RECORD,
181 Madison Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

TWO HEADS ARE BETTER THAN ONE—but three or four are better still. Let ALL the family join in the search for the explanation of the mystery in "SONS AND FATHERS," but remember "only women and girls may guess"—and win the 889 PRIZES.

DELANO DIARY

—Most of our citizens were greatly surprises to find so many of their number subpoenied to attend the Billings trial in Minneapolis the past two weeks.

—The New England Supper was quite a success and netted the Presbyterian society about $40. Visitors were present from Watertown, Rockford and St. Paul.

—Ed Wood lost another horse a few days ago; one of a nice team of blacks recently purchased of Geo. Sutton. Ed, for some reason or another, seems to be out of luck in the horse business.

—We notice the Eagle says the Primary Election for the Town of Franklin was a "fizzle." That is a slight mistake. The election was held according to law and three delegates elected, five votes being polled.

—If you don't find yourself stocked up with a large library and bound to pay from $1. to $5 per month regularly for the next year or so it is because you can say No. Opportunities are unusually frequent and enticing.

—Last Tuesday was St. Patrick's day and a few green ribbons in the buttonboles of some of our citizens reminded all of the great event. The day was a very fine one, being bright and the air just crisp enough to make people feel well.

—Several of the witnesses in the Billings perjury trial have returned home. The evidence was all in last night, and the jury will probably decide the case today. Witnesses for the State freely claim that from the evidence the jury will acquit O. L.

—Our old pastor, Rev. W. H. Wilson, now of Port Angeles, Washington, has sent us an interesting communication from the Evergreen State, which we will have to lay over until next week. His old parishoners throughout the county will be pleased to again hear from him.

—T. W. Davies, a prominent and zealous temperance worker of Minneapolis, visited Delano on Saturday evening and assisted in holding a session of the I. O. G. T. lodge. The lodge voted to meet tomorrow night in the M. E. Church, and will likely continue to occupy the church for the present each Saturday evening.

—The Republican primary election, for the village of Delano, held last Tuesday afternoon resulted in the election of Mr. F. H. Lindsley, Mr. J. W. McDonald and Mr. W. H. Frazee delegates to the republican county convention, held yesterday in Buffalo. Mr. Andrew Horsch, Mr. Fred Kespohl and Mr. Henry Helman were elected to represent the Town of Franklin.

—The first monthly meeting of the new Delano Council did not take place on schedule time last Monday evening. The new council had qualified and assumed their respective duties, but three of their number, Messrs Coolen Rader, and Recorder Johns were subpoenied to Minneapolis to take part in the Billings perjury suit: and the President, I. Gutzwiller, being sick at home, left only Councilman Adam Horsch to hold the meeting. He went to the Hall and looked around awhile and concluded to adjourn until a more favorable opportunity presented itself.

—The morning train from Minneapolis met with a mishap on Tuesday, while on a high grade near Armstrong one of the heavy bars of iron connecting drivers broke, and one peice was thrust with great force up through the corner of the water tank on the tender, letting the water out and disabling the engine. A freight engine happening to be at Delano was sent down and soon returned with the train a few minutes late. The accident, all things considered, was an extremely lucky one, as the cars were making good time and could easily have been thrown from the track killing numerous passengers.

—We have received a beautiful, illustrated catalogue from The Jewell Nursery Co., of Lake City, Minnesota, the oldest and largest nursery in the Northwest. Their catalogue is very complete, containing full descriptions, instructions for planting, pruning; and care of stock. They also enclose a list of collections of flowers and bedding plants that are cheap enough to be in the reach of every one. They also grow Seed Corn and Seed Potatoes, comprising the latest and best varieties. Their references are A No. 1. Read their ad. in another column and mention this paper when writing them.

23-4t.

—The primary department of the Public Schools observed Longfellow's birthday this week, Wednesday. It is a little late in the season but still the children enjoyed the occasion and will long remember that there was such an American poet as Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

Horace Mann's birthday comes on May 4. This being the centennial anniversary of the founder of Public Schools in this country, his birthday will, doubtless, be observed throughout the country. A day put in occasionly with essays, recitations and other exercises referring to distinguished individuals assist the children in learning historical facts, and breaks the monotony of the humdrum school life.

—Bicycles are becoming still more numerous among our citizens than ever before. Quite a number have recently purchased wheels and are spending lots of spare hours learning to ride.

STAR, Pipestone, Minn.—Oakes' Swiss Bell Ringers and Comic Specialty Co. gave one of their entertainments in Opera Hall last night to one of the largest houses ever gathered in Pipestone, the house being packed so full there was hardly standing room left. Their entertainment was first-class in every particular, and their ladylike and gentlemanly behavior won the approbation of the entire audience. They will always get a good house in Pipestone, where any good entertainment is sure to be well patronized." City Hall, Friday, March 27. Prices, 15; 25 and 35 cents.

J. H. McGary, of Independence, made one of his periodical visits to Delano yesterday. John is spriging out well and seems to have enjoyed our mild winter.

Deputy Sheriff Parmeter, of Minneapolis, was in Delano several times last week serving subpoenas in the Billings case; and in the case of Johnson whose hogs were stolen.

County Cullings.

Wright County's Attorneys are quite largely represented in Minneapolis this week.

The silver question keeps bobbing up for discussion whereever a couple of politicians of almost any parties, or even if they be of the same party, come together. It will not down

From the present outlook the leading politicians in Wright County will not be the same this year as in former years. Quite a shaking up appears to be going on, in various quarters. Possibly some good may result to the general public.

The Billings case, in Minneapolis, continues to draw its weary length along. A large number of witnesses from Buffalo and Delano have testified in the case, besibes many from other localities. Some of the testimony don't agree very well. It looks as if some witnesses tell more than the facts, or that others suppress facts in a terrible manner. "Honesty is the best policy."

The Eagle, of the Howard Lake Herald-Tribune Times-Journal-Eagle Syndicate complains that three of the County Commissioners voted to allow our bill for publishing "Notice to Taxpayers." In justice to the board we will say that these three votes were cast after thorough investigation of the copy. the work done, and the bill; and, under the circumstances is, we believe, fully equal to the Eagle's estimate of other peoples business, from the standpoint of justice. If the Eagle sees fit to get good pay for what she can and work cheap where she has competition, thats her look out; and is, sometimes, a good way to advertise.

The Republicans held their County Convention at Buffalo on Thursday and elected delegates to attend the Congressional and State conventions. We understand Howard Lake, which is wont to be heard on such occasions, was unrepresented this time! Shades of Frank Stacy! What's become of 'em? Judge Alley, known as a gentleman throughout the county, was chosen county chairman. Mr. Alley made a model Judge of Probate but as chairman of the Republican County Committee he will hardly fill the expectations of wirepullers. Perhaps the deal is to allow the Democrats to have the county offices in exchange for legislators etc. etc.

Proceedings of County Commissioners.

From a proof sheet of the Official Report we glean the following: The full board held a special session in Buffalo on the 11th inst.

School District No. 126 was ordered formed.

On the 12th another session was held when the road from Wrights Ford into Woodland near Frank Crowley's was ordered, and damages assessed: Frank Crowley, $12; Charles Leiter, $10; Peter Krajawski, $20; Mike Davis, $15; John Riley, $15; Bernard Early, $15; Frank Koziol, $6; James Lyrk, $35; Peter Baldus, $5; Anton Matzko, $5; Thomas Stilter, $10; Mart Schwirtz, $5; Gust Goode, $5; Lucy A. Felt, $6; Barthek Yannek, $15; Olaf Dahlgren, $25; Mary A. Blaisdell, $10; Peter and Mary Rusek, $5. Agreements were reached with other land owners along the road.

Charles Eppel abatement taxes recommended $488. Former action repealed.

Abatement taxes, John Ninquist granted; E. B. McCord, rejected; John Goetz, rejected; Mary McHale, rejected; O. M. Loyd, rejected.

All requests for road appropriations were laid over until next meeting.

Time set for hearing petition of John Peterson, change of school district, April 13.

The claim of Archie Gilmer for serving subpoenas in the case of State vs. Archie Gilmer was rejected. Other claims allowed, the principal ones being: H. S Saylor, for county printing and delinquent tax list, $139,96; O. Brewster and Wm. Zielbarth each for premium on insurance, $81.

Through Tourist Sleeping Car.

No Change of Cars to the Coast!

The Chicago Great Western Railway (Maple Leaf Route) runs Tourist Sleeping Cars to Los Angeles, California, via Kansas City and the Santa Fe Route, every Tuesday. The Tourist Car rate is but $6.00 ($3.00 each, if two go) from St. Paul or Minneapolis to Los Angeles, California, and the trip 24 hours shorter than by other lines. No Sunday traveling is necessary. The cars are divided into sections, the same as Palace Sleepers, and are in charge of a colored porter. They are plentifully supplied with fresh clean bedding, curtains and linen, and have a little kitchen at one end for light cooking. These cars were designed to give comfort in a long journey at the lowest possible cost to the traveler.

ALFRED GUINOT was buried in St. Paul by the I. O. O. F. a few weeks ago. Last week his remains were resurrected and buried with the rights of the Catholic church. It is claimed that before death he abjured allegience to the secret society in accordance with the new Papal decree.

THE State School of Agriculture in Minneapolis last week turned out a class of graduates consisting of 28. These young men are now educated farmers; and in case they use their knowledge and through the press and otherwise impart it to others their influence is bound to be felt.

NEW series, Vol. 1. No. 1, of the Phrenological Journal was received this week. It contains an article "The Hon. Ignatius Donnelly. A phrenolograph by a personal examination," by Albert Zimmerman, with a couple of cuts of "the Sage of Nininger." For those interested in Phrenology it is a good magazine.

WHILE some of our citizens, probably those that have no boys of their own, are advocating the passage of curfew and other laws for the protection of others boys, we find them offering $5,000 and even $7,500 as is recently claimed a New York paper did, for the autobiography of H. H. Holmes. Such literature as that and the alleged life of Harry Hayward, denied by his father as being a pack of lies, to furnished the public to read. This thing has gone far enough and it is high time that people quit reading such publications. Let the truth alone prevail.

THE Congressional fight is on in the Seventh District, and the people up that way seem to be very much in favor of Reform all along the line. Geo N. Lanphere, editor of the Moorhead News, is a bright man, one that will be heard if the people follow "The Footprints" of Wheaton, Traverse Co. and nominate him for Congrees. Here is what The Footprints has to say:

"We would like to see the reformers of Clay county secure the permission of Geo. N. Lamphere of the Moorhead News, to use his name in that connection. He is a conservative and sound reformer, widely known throughout the state and district and a man to command universal respect. In the ranks of the boys in blue he fought for his country in 1862, only laying aside the accoutrements of war, when victory came, to use a bright intellect in the war of the present times against political vice and corruption. Thus always found supporting the people's cause, he is well deserving of consideration and the best possible treatment at their hands."

SOME of the great dailies of the cities are much worried about the silver question. They often announce that the "silver craze is dying out," and as often write lengthy articles to try to convince their readers what a fine thing it would be if we had a gold basis. They tell us that silver is depreciated in value; that a dollar in silver is worth, really, only about half a dollar, yet, every day we see people receiving and paying out silver as freely as gold. If, since its demonetization, silver is worth less as compared with gold; how would it be if gold were demonetized? If gold were reduced to a commodity instead of money value, by law, would then a gold dollar be worth more than is a silver dollar as compared to each other, and with the various other commodities of our country? Suppose, for instance, that Uncle Sam concluded to do business altogether on the "credit system" so much vaunted by gold bugs, and to demonetize gold as well as silver, would then gold be worth any more in the country than silver? When the stamp of the government is removed from all gold wont gold depreciate in value as rapidly as has silver? Wont an equilibrium soon be established when both metals are placed on an equal footing? Then if there is not enough of either metal for the needs of the people why not continue to use both as in years gone by? If Uncle Sam stamps both alike, both will pass wherever Uncle Sam's credit is good.

C. K. DAVIS has withdrawn from the Presidential race provided McKinley is winner.

FRANCIS N. STACY is now assistant editor of the Representative.

E. I. WARNER of St. Paul was chosen President of the Republican State League;

A COPY of The Coming Nation from Tennessee City, Tenn. reached us this week. It is published in the interest of "public ownership of all monopolies.

What Is He?

Of all the exchanges we get the Atwater Republican takes the cake for its varied ideas on live issues of the day. Mr. Satterlee is a vigorous, entertaining and deep writer. So deep that it is very hard for average intellects to reconcile his many and diametricall apposed propositions. For instance in a single issue of his paper we find him on the money question having many but yet not all definite ideas. He says he favors "Sound money, every dollar of which is at par, be it gold, silver or paper." By sound money does he mean money that "jingles," or that which is all blow your horn, "credit" money, as advocated by gold bugs? Further on he wants "intrinsic money" "worth its face value anywhere." Does he think he can make "intrinsic" money out of paper? He is not positive that we can maintain a gold standard but thinks we ought to try. He believes the U. S. could buy all the silver in the world and sustain the silver standard, but don't think it advisable. What is he?

Then on license his straddle is even greater yet. He believes in regulating the sale of liquors to get the money. He says: "We venture to say that with two saloons the consumption of liquor in this village will not increase noticeably." He lets the "club" down easy, and winds up by advocating the abolition of all license as "the surest cure for the abuses of liquor, and the curse of saloons." This from a hot headed republican would lead one to suspect that the author had got dry. And from the way he plies the party lash to Editor Lamphere he mus belong to the G. O. P. If not, WHAT IS HE?

FROM THE EVERGREEN STATE.

BY REV. W. H. WILSON.

DEAR EDITOR GAZETTE:

We have been stationed at the wonderful city of Port Angeles, just above Cape Flattery. We can look down the straits and see the water lines, or rather the track for the ships as they pass out for China, Australia, Japan and other foreign ports. I have traveled over a good portion of the Evergreen State, but I have never seen a spot in the State that has so much of nature's perfect form, or God's handiwork. Let me give you a light description of the lay of our city. Port Angeles is a perfect harbor, and it seems to me that God had a mind for this place before he made the country. Our city is the county seat of Callslam Co. and located about 125 miles south of Seattle, and just over the straits from Victoria, B. C., and up about 20 miles from Cape Flattery. One mile and a half towards Flattery from the Court House, starts out from the main land what is known out here as a spit. At its beginning it is about two miles across, and it extends out into the bay, not directly out straight, but follows the shore line up towards Seattle. At its point it is about four miles from its beginning, and about five miles out from land. On the point of this neck or spit is the Light House. Of course the straits are dangerous waters in some kinds of weather. One going out in a small boat headed towards the Spit may enter a squall and are in danger; as many have done and lost their lives. Larger ships are in danger of the rocks; hence the Light House. It was only a week ago that a large foreign ship weighed anchor from Port Angeles bound for Port Townsend, the Captain thought he could navigate the Sound waters without the aid of tug or pilot, and when he had reached the point called Wilson's Point, the ship drifted with wind and tide into the eddy, and then was blown like an eggshell up high and dry on the beach, and is there now though eight tugs have pulled at her.

So it may be with many a man or woman. They cut loose from mother and home and slip away out beyond the Light House, and at last fall into the still water of the eddy of deceit, and are lashed upon by the winds and storm, darkness comes on and they have no pilot; He has offered His services but they will not have him, they think they can brave the storm, and imagine their bark strong enough to stand the strong winds of the world, but alas, too true, like the ship, they go down to the pit of woe and misery. God knew just where to put the Spit, and he likewise knows just what to do for us.

This morning a party came into the parsonage and gave us a few species of Larch and Lintwood that grows on the Olympic Mountains, and from which they were gathered this week. How strange. These evergreens are now putting out their little leaves and will soon be in full bloom. Way up on the mountain, covered with almost everlasting snow, may be seen this 20th day of Feb. the white and purple crocus, peeping their delicate, fragrant heads just above the snow, to welcome the weary climber as he stops to rest for a moment.

Port Angeles is a city of about three thousand five hundred. We have two M. E. churches, one Baptist, Congregationalist, one Catholic, one Luthern, one Episcopal, three Spiritualist Halls, three Free Lovers Halls, and God only knows how many followers of Thomas Paine. Men have been known to trade wives here just as men do horses down there; and we have cried out "How long. How long, O my God!" We have a salmon factory, and clam factory that employ a large number of men and women in the season of packing. I was through the factory last week, and I believe they have eight thousand cases of silver salmon; there are about 50 quarts in a case so you see they have now on hand about four hundred thousand quarts of fish, the very best in the market.

Our court is in session this week and Judge Pilchard is hearing the murder case of Jack Strap. He is supposed to have killed an Indian down at Neah bay a few months ago. We notice among the attorneys for the defense, Ex-Mayor Ronald of Seattle, a bright, quick, young man. And just now we hear that the jury returned, "Not guilty."

We wish you were out here, Mr. Editor, to eat some of our delicious clams and crabs. You folks down in that frozen zone don't know what you miss, eating your frozen potatoes and dried store fruit, while we are able to purchase any day through the year in the open market, lettuce, radishes, squashes, turnips, onions, beets, cabbage, apples, pears, peaches, grapes, and in fact all kinds of fruit and garden sauce. Our Mayor and a company of stock holders are now building a ship at Port Angeles that will sail for Alaska in May; myself to be chaplain for the voyage. It is designed to load her with goods, and land at Sitka and then go out into the Yukon region, I want to see that grand country, and now that I have the chance, it would be folly not to accept it.

So your next letter from me may be looked for from Alaska. We want to sail up the Georgia Channel and come back by San Francisco, Cal. I trust all my friends remember me kindly to our Heavenly Father, and will not fail to ask that grace be given me for the arduons work before me in this great young city. W. H. WILSON.

Pastor 1st M. E. Church, Port Angeles, Wash.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 20, 1896.

Secretary Smith's exercising his discretion about opening to public settlement some 2,000,000 acres of land which was a part of an Indian reservation in Utah was the cause of his being abused to a considerable extent on the floor of the Senate this week. These lands contain valuable deposits of asphalt—enough it is said to supply the demand of the entire country for years to come—and Senator Gorman stated in reply to the criticism of Secretary Smith for not opening the lands to the public that it was only because the Secretary wished to protect the interests of the government against rapacious persons and corporations seeking to control these deposits, and he cause he believed that the government ought to receive some benefit, either by royalty or otherwise, for these mineral deposits, that he had not opened the lands to settlement. Senator Vilas, who became familiar with the subject while he was Secretary of the Interior, also defended the policy adopted by Secretary Smith. Senator Vest joined the republicans in criticising Secretary Smith.

If the republicans of the House were not made ashamed of themselves by Representative McCreary's speech against the adoption of the resolutions censuring Ambassador Bayard, which he declared were "prompted by prejudice and partisanship," they are not constituted as other men are. Of course Mr. McCreary had no idea of preventing the action which he knew had been determined upon before the resolutions were reported to the House, but he had the satisfaction of showing the action up in all its littleness and narrowness.

The Cuban resolutions are just where they were a week ago. The attempt to have them returned to conference in order that the objections raised by Senators Hill, Hawley and others might be met by changing them was defeated at this weeks meeting of the Senate committee on Foreign Relations.

President Cleveland celebrated his fifty-ninth birthday on Wednesday, the 18th inst

Ex-Gov. Campbell, of Ohio, who has been in Washington for several days, puts a perpetual end to talk about his being the Presidential candidate of the party by declaring that he will under no circumstances allow his name to go before the Chicago convention. He thus added force to the advice he gives the democratic party in relation to the coming National convention. He says: "Every man who goes to the convention as a delegate should go pledged to support the candidate and accept the platform of that convention. No matter who may be named to make the canvass; no matter what the platform may contain, they should be accepted. A delegate who goes to Chicago with the intention to stay if the majority agree with him and accept his candidate or make his platform, whether on finance tariff, or what else; who means to bolt if his notion of men and measures is voted down, is a traitor in advance. He has no business at the convention. He should stay at home.

It was made perfectly clear at this week's meeting of the House committee on Naval Affairs that the democrats favor a larger increase in our navy than the republicans do. The democrats on the committee, led by Amos Cummings, who was chairman of the committee in the last House, wanted to provide for the building of six battleships and 25 torpedo boats, but the most they could get the republican majority of the committee to agree to was four battleships and 15 torpedo boats.

It is denied that the dinner and reception given by the British Embassador this week in honor of Secretary and Mrs. Olney had any international political meaning, and stated that it was one of the regular entertainments which had to be given later than usual on account of the Embassy having had to go into official mourning for the death of Queen Victoria's son-in-law.

Representative Grosvenor, of Ohio, is recognized as one of the leading McKinley men in the House, and it mry be mentioned in passing that Grosvenor also has a record as a hoodoo of the first water. However, what I started out to say was that Grosvenor is making himself the laughing stock of Congress by the ridiculous claims he is making for McKinley. He says that McKinley will receive 620 votes on the first ballot at the St. Louis convention, Which would be one hundred and sixty-odd more than would be needed to nominate him. That McKinley is ahead is certain and that he will win if he can make a dicker with Quay and Platt is probable. But it is certain that he is a long ways from having enough votes in sight at this time to win upon the first ballot or any other ballot, and his ability to make a trade with Quay and Platt will depend entirely upon how much strength he can control without them. If he has enough to win with the addition of the votes controlled by Quay and Platt and will give them as good terms as Reed has given them, there is little doubt that he could be the nominee.

The General of the Army, the General commanding the U. S. Corps of Engineers, Vice-Pres. Webb of the New York Central, and John Jacob Astor, compose THE COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE'S Board of Judges to decide the merits if the Horseless Carriages which will be entered in the May trials, for which THE COSMOPOLITAN offers $3000 in prizes. This committee is undoubtedly the most distinguished that has ever consented to act upon the occasion of the trial of a new and useful invention. The interest which these gentlemen have shown in accepting places upon the Committee is indicative of the importance of the subject, and that the contest itself will be watched with marked interest on both sides of the Atlantic.

THROUGH the operation of conflicting laws regarding marriage and divorce in the various sections of the country, marriage appears to be a united state in some of the United States and in others it doesn't.

A FEMALE school-teacher, aged 27, at Wilkesbarre, Pa., eloped with a 15-year-old boy the other day, but the boy's ma followed them and took her son away from the new woman. Great guns! No man seems to be safe nowadays.

THE fashion writers say the summer girl of 1896 will wear the sweater at mountain and spring in all sorts of becoming hues. The new woman is different from the old. "My dears," said the head of a finishing school of the past to her girls, "a horse sweats, a man perspires; a young lady can only glow."

A PAPER in Kansas says that "when you talk about there being a better state than Kansas every potato winks its eye, every cabbage shakes its head, every beet gets red in the face, every oat field is shocked, every onion gets stronger, the rye strokes its beard, the corn pricks up its ears and every foot of ground kicks."

NEBRASKA is agitated over the fact that, although there has been almost no rain during the past winter, water stands higher in the wells and streams than for many years. SEVENTY THOUSAND tons of the stern and rock-bound coast of Maine were shipped from two quarries alone last year. The total amount of granite shipped away yearly reaches an astounding figure, and the geography of the Maine coast is being considerably changed by the cutting out and shipping away of islands of granite and not a little of the mainland.

THE president of a western university has written a book on "The Toxological Value of the Antennae of the Lepidoptera." Parents who send their children to that school will be gratified to know that the president is sound on this important point. Think of the classes and classes of students who go out to battle with the world doubting, or perhaps even denying that the lepidopterae have any toxological properties in their antennae. It's terrible!

SOME foreigners who appeared before a judge in May's Landing, N. J., the other day to be naturalized as American citizens showed the densest ignorance. To the question: "Who is the president of the United States?" a Russian answered: "The czar of Russia;" and Atlantic City was his answer to the question: "What is the capital of the United States?" An Italian who had been in this country for more than ten years declared that George Washington was the president of the United States, and that he made macaroni.

IN concluding a lecture on international arbitration in Amhers, Mass., Chauncey M. Depew, of New York city, spoke as follows: "A court of arbitration could not be made universal, but could be so broad and composed of men of such dignity, majesty and worth as to command the respect of all English speaking peoples, and have the power of deciding every question of dispute between them. The establishment of such a court would be a fitting and most proper act to close the triumphs of nineteenth century progress." It is hoped that such a court will soon be established.

THE New York state board of health wants a $300,000 appropriation to prosecute a campaign against tuberculosis. It is the opinion of men skilled in medical science that the bacteria which produce consumption can be annihilated if proper effort is made. The old theory of heredity in this disease is giving way to an established hypothesis of contagion as the only source of its perpetuation. With proper methods and adequate regulation the bacteria of consumption may be eradicated, and it is one of the duties this generation owes to those to come that it shall begin this great sanitary reformation.

SEVERAL important discoveries have been made in connection with X rays by Stephen H. Emmens, of New York, who claims to have succeeded in obtaining the rays from the ordinary sunbeam, and has taken excellent pictures therewith. This opens up a remarkable field, for it means that the rays can be concentrated and with proper apparatus be used to produce photographs instead of mere shadowgraphs as at present. It may be possible to light a dark room by using the waste radiant energy of the boiling tea-kettle or the ordinary radiator or by turning into ordinary light the X rays of the darkness itself.

WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

The Republicans of Minnesota Endorse the Man from Ohio.

Senator Davis Sends a Message of Loyalty to Party Principles and Refuses to Allow His Name to Be Considered.

Minneapolis, March 24.—The 1,151 delegates who comprise the membership of the state republican convention were up early this morning. They had nothing in particular to do, but secure their tickets, but while that was easily done, it was also quite necessary that it be attended to, if they wished to participate in the deliberations. Tams Bixby, chairman of the state central committee, was in his lieutenant's headquarters in rooms 128 and 130 of the West hotel, and in that corner of the big hostelry the tickets were given out to the delegates this morning. Everything was nicely handled and everybody entitled to admission was ticketed through to the Exposition building via the steel arch bridge.

At 12:30 Chairman Bixby called the convention to order. The Masonic quartette followed with a song, and then the chairman read the call. As the chairman of the state central committee concluded, Congressman Tawney, of the First district, arose near the reporters' stand and to the left of the speaker's desk and said: "I have a message which I am authorized to deliver to this convention."

A significant silence followed this observation, and everybody listened intently as Mr. Tawney mounted a chair and began to read. He got no further than "Washington, D. C.," before the significance of its contents were guessed. The message was from Senator Davis, asking that his name be not presented to the convention.

Cheers followed the reading of Senator Davis' message at all points, and when his name was read three wildly enthusiastic cheers were given.

Nominations for temporary chairman were next in order. Senator Smith, of Becker, proposed the name of ex-Gov. A. E. Rice. Prof. J. S. Carlson, of Nicollet, spoke the name of ex-Lieut. Gov. Ives. There were no other nominations, and the election proceeded by roll call ex-Gov. Rice was elected.

Ed Gottrey, of Pine county, and F. W. Penhall, of Renville, were made secretaries. After the appointment of the usual committees, the convention took a recess until 2 p. m. Just before adjournment W. P. Roberts, of Hennepin county, offered the following resolution, which was adopted by a rising vote:

Resolved, That the well considered and pronounced preference of the Republicans of Minnesota for presidential standard bearer in 1896 is William McKinley. The emphatic growing choice of the Republican vote throughout the land and this convention expects the delegates at large today to be elected by it to do all in their power honorably from now until that object is accomplished to bring about promptly, the nomination of William McKinley for president of the United States.

Upon reassembling the temporary organization was made permanent. The report of the committee on resolutions was adopted with a hurrah. The platform endorses the Monroe doctrine, compliments Senator Davis and comes out strong for protection. The financial plank is as follows:

We favor the use of both gold and silver to the extent to which they can be maintained in circulation at a parity in purchasing and debt-paying power; that we are earnestly opposed, under the present conditions, to the free and unlimited coinage of silver, for the manifest reason that it would destroy such parity, enormously contract the volume of our currency by forcing gold out of circulation and immediately place us on a silver basis. Believing also that it is a self-evident fact that the effect of the international demonetization of silver can be overcome only by international remonetization of that metal, the Republican party of Minnesota most heartily favors an international conference for that purpose.

The withdrawal of Senator Davis simplified the matter of selecting the delegates-at-large. Upon motion of John L. Gibbs, the following were elected on one ballot:

Robert G. Evans, of Minneapolis.
George Thompson, of St. Paul.
L. P. Hunt, of Mankato.
Charles F. Hendryx, of Sauk Center.

The alternates are:

Berger Thurstonson, Wright county.
Ira C. Richardson, Polk county.
Capt. A. H. Reed, Glencoe.
Gen. J. M. Diment, Owatonna.

The following are the delegates elected by districts:

Second District—W. R. Edwards and W. H. Rowe, delegates. D. A. McLarty and Dr. Beebe, alternates.

Third District—L. P. Hubbard and Thomas Paine, delegates. Samuel Bowler and Frederick Griebe, alternates.

Fourth District—William R. Merriam and James H. Crandall, delegates. H. F. Barker and Fred S. Bryant, alternates.

Fifth District—Chas. A. Pillsbury, and Eli Torrance, delegates. J. Frank Wheaton and C. S. Cairns, alternates.

Sixth District—Monroe Nichols and Thomas D. Davidson, delegates. W. D. McDonald and Frank Wilson, alternates.

Seventh District—C. J. Gunderson and Ezra Valentine, delegates. P. H. Konzen and S. D. Wattam, alternates.

The following were selected as presidential electors at large:

T. B. Walker, Minneapolis.
E. G. Holmes, Becker County.

First District—Burdett Thayer, Winona.

Second District—Chas H. Budd, of Chippewa County.

Third District—James Guirk, of Le Sueur.

Fourth District—E. D. Eddy, Chisago.

Fifth District—C. A. Smith, Minneapolis.

Sixth District—Warren Potter of Aitkin.

Seventh District—Wallace R. Brown, of Polk.

The Esquimau uses the wolf-dog for both drawing sledges and hunting game.

The English foxhound is the most carefully bred of all dogs. The common hound in this country is a combination of different strains.

AN ALLEGED DANGER.

Matters of Interest to the Western Farmer Relating to Waterway Transportation.

Minneapolis, Minn., March 21, 1896.—The western farmer and his eastern customer have a special interest in a contest now going on. It is a case of self-preservation for them and demands prompt attention from both. The reciprocal interests of the agricultural west and the manufacturing east are well understood and the demand of the time is for the cheapest possible transport between the two interested sections. The water route by the Great Lakes has been the making and the salvation of the northwest. Competing lines of railroad are naturally not favorable to the extension of lake transportation. Allied to the railroads are local interests at Detroit and Buffalo. At Detroit an attempt is being made to have a bridge built with two piers in the river, each located 600 feet from the shore. The tonnage passing this point is 30,000,000 tons in seven months. This will be increased about ten per cent. by vessels of the largest class now building. It will keep on increasing year after year as the great northwest goes on filling up and growing. Compare this 30,000,000 tons of to-day with the tonnage of London, which is less than 21,000,000 in 12 months. That of New York is almost the same as London. It is proposed to choke this contracted waterway, so vital to the northwest and to the east, in order to carry by railroad on a bridge a tonnage of a little more than one-seventh of that of the river. This might be more favorably considered if it were indispensable and at less cost. The facts are that a tunnel can be built for three-fourths of what a bridge will cost, and will interfere with nobody. A few miles up the stream from the point where it is proposed to locate this bridge is a great tunnel of the Grand Trunk railroad, standing as a practical demonstration of the real facts in the case.

The congressmen from the east and the west can form their own conclusions after securing these facts. A committee of the United States senate has reported favorably to the bridge plan. Can it be advocated on the ground of public welfare?

Near Buffalo an effort is being made to secure a charter for a railroad bridge over the Niagara river between the American shore and Grand Island. It will be a low bridge and will practically be a stopper with which to close the river and prevent vessels passing Buffalo. Deep water agitation between the Great Lakes and salt water has been going on more and more vigorously for a long time, and within a few weeks the first general report on the subject will be made. What is wanted is better, not poorer, means of transportation. All low bridges or those with piles in the stream over the rivers connecting the Great Lakes are a detriment to present and future navigation. It is the same contest that for years the friends of the Mississippi river have been waging to protect their navigation. Are the people of the northern part of the United States willing to have the transportation so vital to them destroyed or impaired? If not, the newspapers, the commercial bodies and influential citizens will need to at once vigorously take up the matter with their representatives in congress and convince them that they, the people, want no bridges built over these waterways that shall in any way be a detriment to navigation. The charter for these bridges will be slipped through unnoticed, and at this session of congress if possible, unless such a denunciation shall be heard from an aroused and financially interested people as shall effectually stop such pernicious legislation. No one with influence can delegate his responsibility in this matter to another, and the time to act is now.

A. L. CROCKER,
Chairman Executive Committee International Deep Waterways Association.

RELIGIOUS RIOT.

Four Men Shot in a Fight That Follows an Ex-Priest's Lecture.

Scranton, Pa., March 24.—Following a lecture given at the Christian church at Dunmore Monday afternoon by an alleged ex-priest named Ruthven a fight broke out, during which about 50 shots were fired, and resulted in four men being injured. The ex-priest is charged with precipitating the trouble. He has been giving lectures in this vicinity for some time, and as he was leaving the church Monday fully 500 persons gathered about the place and greeted him with a volley of eggs. It is claimed he immediately drew a revolver and fired in the air. Revolvers were then fired in every direction with the above-mentioned result. Ruthven fled to this city and denies he fired the first shot.

Capt. Sweetser, Ex-Commander of Illinois G. A. R., Suddenly Expires.

Bloomington, Ill., March 24.—Capt. A. C. Sweetser, ex-commander of the Illinois division, Grand Army of the Republic, died suddenly from heart failure Monday, aged 57. He was a native of Maine. He served in the Eighth Illinois and the Thirty-ninth Illinois, losing a leg at Weirbottom Church, Va., in 1864. He was elected commander in 1887 and served one year. He will be buried Wednesday with full honors of the G. A. R.

Banker Is Not Dead.

Paris, March 24. — The Paris Herald says that the rumor of the death of George A. Banker, the American bicycle rider, which was widely circulated and published here Sunday, is untrue. A dispatch from Nice to the Herald says that Banker is seriously ill with typhoid fever, but the crisis seems to have passed and there are hopes of his recovery.

A Fatal Quarrel.

Brice, O., March 24.—Elijah Rutter and John White, of this place, quarreled over the former's wife and both were fatally injured.

Spain Will Refuse.

London, March 24.—The Standard declares it is evident that Spain will refuse to allow an American commission to enter Cuba, chiefly because she could not assent to its visiting there. Such action on the eve of the elections for members of the cortes would seriously damage the prestige of the cabinet.

Another Insurgent Defeat.

Madrid, March 24.—A dispatch from Havana to the Imparcial says that Col. Albert has defeated an insurgent force near Manzanillo, killing 16 and wounding many. The Spanish loss was 20 wounded.

ABBREVIATING TELEGRAMS.

Saving Money in This Way Is Sometimes Costly Business.

"It is false economy to attempt to save money by abbreviating telegrams, and I found it out to my cost," said a woman several days ago in the hearing of a New York Sun reporter. "It happened in this way. My sister and I went to Florida by boat, several years ago, when there was an outbreak of typoid fever in several Florida towns. My sister, Mary, was seasick all the way, and when we reached Jacksonville I telegraphed: 'Arrived, Mary ill. Return next boat.' We took the trip for the sea voyage, you know, and had no intention of staying in Florida. When our boat pulled in at the pier in New York I saw my brother-in-law and his whole family waiting for us. They looked solemn, and I said to Mary: 'Something's happened.' As we came down the gang plank they rushed at us, and, grabbing my sister, said: 'Why, Mary, is it safe for you to be up and dressed so soon?' 'Why not?' said my sister in surprise. 'Why, because the fever is dangerous.' Then it came out that they had supposed from my telegram that Mary had typhoid fever. 'Why didn't you say sea sick, instead of ill, in your dispatch?' asked my brother-in-law. 'Because it would mean an extra word,' I answered. My brother-in-law had brought a carriage from uptown to carry my sister home, and when he found that she wasn't sick he told me that, just as a lesson, I might pay for the carriage. It cost me seven dollars, and since then I have written out my telegrams in full."

A DOG STORY.

Rescue Two of Their Kind That Were in Distress.

One of the most peculiar incidents in the annals of animal instinct occurred in Rutlandshire recently, the facts of which, says Pearson's, are as follows: Squire X—— is one of the best known characters in that part of the country. A few days ago he missed two of his best sporting dogs, and his general supposition was that they had been stolen. Recently, however, he was surprised to see one of his pets walk into the house, followed a minute later by the other, both wearing the appearance of utter destitution.

Investigation revealed the following facts: While out shooting a neighbor came across a broken bank on his estate, and two of his dogs showed uneasiness at a hole in the ground. Nothing he could do would induce the dogs to leave the spot, and he finally secured a spade and began digging for the cause of the trouble. Eight feet of earth was dug away before the truth was out. Then he discovered the two dogs, evidently buried from their own exertions in endeavoring to chase a rabbit.

They had been there for 13 days and were nearly famished. On their return to the squire's house they were followed by the animals who had rescued them, and prompt treatment saved the lives of both.

He Compromised.

One of Calgary's recent contingent to the coast evidently knew but little about the Chinook, judging by the story that is being told on him. Wishing to get some clams to take back with him, he asked an old squaw, who had cobwebs in her eyes and a basket on her head, what she wanted for a basketful, and the blushing brunette replied: "Sitcum dollar, hayas klosh." To this the gay Calgaryite said: "Yumping yimminy! Six dollars and all my clothes? No, by gingersnap! I'll give you $2.50, my watch and overcoat." It is unnecessary to state that the offer was accepted, as all the dusky maiden asked for the clams was four bits.

Wanted a Big One.

The annual report of Biddeford's city missionary, just made public, shows some queer sides of human nature, as well as many pitiful cases of suffering. For instance, one woman, who had two or three small Bibles, asked the missionary to get her one of those nice family Bibles, worth about $14. One family who applied for aid were found breakfasting on fricasseed rabbit, bread and butter, mince pie, and tea, when the missionary surprised them by the unexpected call.

Sour

Stomach, sometimes called waterbrash, and burning pain, distress, nausea, dyspepsia, are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. This it accomplishes because with its wonderful power as a blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla gently tones and strengthens the stomach and digestive organs, invigorates the liver, creates an appetite, gives refreshing sleep, and raises the health tone. In cases of dyspepsia and indigestion it seems to have 'a magic touch."

"For over 12 years I suffered from sour with severe pains across my shoulders, and great distress. I had violent nausea which would leave me very weak and faint, difficult to get my breath. These spells came oftener and more severe. I did not receive any lasting benefit from physicians, but found such happy effects from a trial of Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I took several bottles and mean to always keep it in the house. I am now able to do all my own work, which for six years I have been unable to do. My husband and son have also been greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla—for pains in the back, and after the grip. I gladly recommend this grand blood medicine." MRS. AFTER THE BLOOMING.

Oh, little rosebud with petals red,
As you nod by the garden wall
And dewdrops drink,
Do you ever think
That some day your petals will fall?
Some day your fragrance will all be gone,
Your sweetness a thing of the past?
For it matters not how
Much prized you are now,
Little rosebuds cannot always last.

And, oh, little maiden, with eyes so blue,
As you sing, and laugh, and are gay,
Does it come to you
That some day, too,
Your roses will pass away?

But the little rosebud nods on by the wall,
Caressed by the winds so free;
And the blue-eyed girl
Swings in the mad whirl
Unheeding the song and me.
Oh, wise little rosebud and wise little girl,
Why turn to the dark ere you must?
Nod on and laugh on
Till your pleasures are gone.
Live to-day! For the morrow—trust!
—Johnstone Murray, in Womankind.

A QUEER ADVENTURE.

It happened about seven years ago. I had been transacting some business in London, and was returning by the afternoon mail to my home in the country. Being the only occupant of the carriage in which I rode, I broke the tedium of the journey by reading, in the dim light of the chill December day, some of the several periodicals with which I had furnished myself at the bookstall previous to my departure from the station.

The papers at that time were full of accounts respecting some startling outrages committed just previously by a band of desperate nihilists, who, in their own particular manner, were levying war upon civilization in a well-known European capital. The reports were alarmingly graphic, and an air of insecurity was engendered by reading them, for rumor had it that the ramifications were well-nigh limitless, extending into other lands besides their own, and it was plainly hinted that England was shortly to receive a special share of their attentions.

I read on until the growing darkness rendered the operation too difficult to be longer indulged in, and then mused upon what I had read until, half my journey being accomplished, it became necessary for me to change my train. With a quarter of an hour to spare, I entered the buffet attached to the station at which I had stopped, with the object of obtaining some needed refreshment. Having eaten nothing since breakfast, I was hungry, and looked round for something substantial where with to appease my appetite.

The only available thing beside the usual sandwich was a German sausage, which I began to tackle without the least compunction. Although not an edible that I usually indulged in—to be correct, I had never before tasted it—the inelegant polony seemed to my sharpened palate quite toothsome food, and I ate vigorously, and felt, as I believed, all the better for it when the time came to resume my journey.

I had a companion this time, a man who, like myself, was closely wrapped, and who occupied the seat directly opposite to the corner one in which I placed myself. In his hand I noticed that he carried a small, oblong parcel, incased in brown paper and tied with a strip of thin string, so arranged as to form a loop for the fingers that held it.

On starting, my fellow-traveler made a few commonplace remarks about the weather, and later on, with an air of decided sociability, offered me his flask. I am aware that it is not ordinarily advisable to accept hospitality in this way from a stranger, and it is a thing I always set my face against, but, in this instance, I broke through my custom and took the proffered drink, and then, drawing my wraps closely around me, snuggled into my corner, and tried to make myself comfortable for the rest of the ride.

I had not been long thus ensconced when a kind of drowsy stupor began to creep over me, which steadily increased, despite repeated efforts on my part to shake it off. As I sat in this semi-conscious state, my thoughts reverted to the nihilistic literature I had been reading, and instantly it occurred to me that the brandy I had been drinking was drugged. The thought was not a pleasant one, and somewhat alarmed by it I made a farther attempt to rouse myself from the lethargy into which I was failing, but without success. Suddenly I lost consciousness entirely, and everything became a blank.

It was only for a few moments, however, for my senses returned as quickly as they had left me, although my power of action was quite gone. I seemed like a person under the influence of some mesmeric spell, from which there is no escape. In this condition my gaze instinctively turned to my companion, and I noticed, as I thought, a mysterious change in his appearance. His complexion had assumed a malignant air, his eyes wore a wild look, and round his mouth there curled a cunning smile.

As I sat watching him, he began to undo the parcel in his hands, and drawing away the paper in which it was inclosed, exposed to view a box apparently made of tin. A little hinged door on one of its sides, which he presently opened, showed that the interior was filled with a species of clockwork arrangement, and instinctively I guessed that the thing I beheld was one of those diabolical inventions which have come to be known by the term of infernal machines.

On beholding this horrible engine of destruction, which, for aught I knew, might be fused ready for its dreadful work, my first thought was to stretch out my hand for the communication cord, and, by stopping the train, let the authorities know the manner of man they were carrying; but, on attempting to rise, I found that my limbs utterly refused their office, and I was as helpless as though I had been bound hand and foot. My companion, evidently divining my intention, spoke.

"You are powerless to move," he said, addressing me. "The potion imbibed from my flask is a special decoction which will prevent action on your part for some time to come. So sit still and listen! You know, doubtless, what this is," he continued, pointing to the box, which he had placed on the seat beside him, "and most likely you guess what I am at the same time. In case you do not, I will tell you at once that I am one of that noble band who have for their object in life the emancipation of mankind from the tyranny of authority!"

"In other words, you are a nihilist—a dynamitard?" I suggested.

"Use those terms if you like," he replied. "There is nothing in a name. Acts are the things whereby men are judged. Hear what I have to say! The society to which I belong has decreed the immediate doom of an authoritative rule, and with that object has dispatched emissaries far and wide to carry out its behests. A big blow is shortly to be struck, and there is not a country in the whole of Europe which will escape it. Russia, Germany, Austria, France, all are condemned, and even England, the vaunted home of the free, is not to be exempt. At the present moment, there are 99 picked men armed with the most deadly bombs, in London itself, awaiting the signal to commence. One more worker is required, and I am commissioned to find some one to supply the want. I have done so, and my choice falls upon you!"

I started in my seat at these words uttered in a fiercely earnest tone. He concluded:

"You, yes, you must become one of us; must enroll yourself under the banner of emancipation, and strike a blow for liberty!"

"And what if I refuse?" I inquired, as quietly as my excitement would allow. He leaned forward, and hissed rather than spoke in my ear:

"If you will not do this, then you yourself are doomed! Mark me, unless you join our ranks you will never leave this train alive!"

"Who will prevent me?" I asked again making a vain endeavor to rise.

"I will!" he shouted, fiercely.

"I defy you!" I exclaimed, with a firmness I did not really feel, thinking that a determined attitude might possibly overawe him, for assassins are invariably cowards. I was mistaken in my man, however, for on hearing my words he put his hand under the cloak that enveloped him and drew forth a poniard, the sharp-pointed edge of which he felt critically with the tip of his finger.

"I will give you one minute in which to consider your decision," he said "and if at the end of that time you remain obdurate, then this blade goes straightway through your heart!"

In order, I suppose, to amuse himself during the interval he pricked several holes with the point of the instrument in his arm just above the wrist, from each of which the blood squirted in small, purple jets, showing how sharp was the weapon's edge. In a little while he said:

"The time is up. What say you now?"

"What I said before," I replied. "Do your worst!"

Instantly he sprang to his feet and clutched me by the throat.

"Coward!" I cried, half choking, as I was, and struggling in his iron grasp.

The epithet seemed to madden him, for his face became livid with sudden rage, his eyes glared wildly and his breath came in thick and hurried gasps.

"You shall never say that again!" he shouted, tightening his hold until the blood swelled up in my face and my eyes seemed ready to burst from their sockets.

With the energy of despair I made one final attempt to recover my power of action, and felt that I was succeeding. The effect of the potion was evidently working off, and with use returning to my limbs I realized that now was my time. Concentrating all the strength I had into one tremendous effort, I managed to free myself from his grip and immediately closed with him. We struggled violently together for a few seconds, neither gaining the mastery, and then I stumbled and we both fell to the ground, he uppermost. It seemed that my hour was come, for in his hand he held the deadly weapon. As I saw the gleaming blade descend in one swift stroke I raised my voice and shouted—

"Tickets, please! All tickets ready!"

It was the summons of the collector. I rubbed my eyes and looked around. There was my fellow traveler sitting quietly on the seat opposite, regarding me with an amused expression on his face.

"Been sleeping?" he queried, as my gaze caught his.

"I suppose I have," was my hazy reply.

"And dreaming, too," he added, with a smile; "unpleasantly, I should guess, by your manner."

It was so. The substantial repast of which I had partaken had been the means of bringing on a heavy slumber which lasted right on to my journey's end, and the fearful adventure through which I had been passing was not, as I had imagined it, a thing of reality, but only a horrid nightmare, engendered by the reception of a mass of indigestible food into a constitutionally dyspeptic stomach.

My companion, of course, was no more a nihilist than I was. The only fusible article inside his brown-paper parcel was a box containing a hundred choice cigars; and his flask, he assured me, held nothing more injurious to the system than a quantity of fine old Cognac.

As I related to him the experience through which I had gone he indulged in a hearty laugh, and, while I could not refrain from joining him, even at my own expense, I inwardly registered a vow to give German sausage a very wide berth for the future.—Tit-Bits.

The Cologne Cure.

The question is often asked whether there is any way of nipping a cold in the bud—that is of stopping it as soon as the first symptoms make their appearance. Whatever difference of opinion there may be on this subject, I have no hesitation in replying in the affirmative, and in stating that it can be done by inhalations of cologne water. As soon as a person feels the first signs of a cold in his head or chest some eau de cologne poured on a handkerchief should be inhaled as energetically as possible by the nose or by the mouth several times a day. The inhalation of the vapors arising from the eau de cologne should be sufficiently ample to produce either in the nasal fossæ or pharnyx an intense sensation of irritation, distressing at first, but only lasting a short time. When, in spite of this treatment having been followed for three or four days, the cough still continues, the method must be admitted to have failed.—N. Y. Herald.

—If a man has a quarrelsome temper, let him alone. The world will soon find him employment. He will soon meet with some one stronger than himself, who will repay him better than you can. A man may fight duels all his life, if he is disposed to quarrel.—Cecil.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS.

The Original Boundaries.

Secretary Smith has rendered a decision on a question submitted to him as to the true boundaries of the Red Lake and White Earth reservations. In all the lines, southern, northwestern and eastern, he decides that the lines should be adhered to on the ground that to disturb them now would be to overthrow vested rights, which is against public policy and a long line of rulings by his predecessors. As to the southern boundary, he decides that the line run by Surveyor Merrill in 1872, which was afterward confirmed and accepted by the department in 1885, is the true line. As to the northwestern boundary, the secretary sustains the Adley survey of 1873, that the head of Thief river is at the confluence of the east and north branches of that river. This line has been accepted for more than 20 years; by it entries have been made by settlers, swamp and school lands have been selected by the state, and to declare this line illegal now would be to imperil and annul the vested rights of these patentees and grantees. In the matter of the eastern boundary, the survey of 1875 is sustained.

Illegal Booze.

According to a peculiar state of affairs, discovered by Deputy Collector Whelan, of the United States internal revenue department, a dozen or so farmers near Pine Island seem to have discarded tilling of the soil for the more attractive and alluring occupation of making moonshine whisky. The trip of Collector Whelan was made on information, and he was not obliged to work very long before finding a tinner who had made a number of stills and "worms." No arrests were made in the case, as the parties are all farmers and can be had whenever wanted. The district attorney now has the matter under consideration, and it may be brought before the United States courts.

Pleaded Guilty.

Mrs. Samuel D. Smith was brought into court at Duluth and pleaded guilty to grand larceny in the first degree. She is the woman who figured in a large sensation last May there. Mrs. D. A. Cameron came from Detroit with Mrs. Smith's husband and check for savings of $2,800. She let Smith take the check and he disappeared with the money. A veiled woman representing herself as Mrs. Cameron, had collected it. Mrs. Smith was arrested for it later and had a long trial. The jury disagreed, but while they were out, fearing verdict of guilty, Mrs. Smith broke down and told the story. Smith is still wandering in parts unknown and Mrs. Smith has been held in hopes of catching him.

Ortonville Granite.

A sample of Ortonville red granite, polished and dressed accoording to directions, has just been completed and shipped to St. Paul, where it will be erected with other samples of Minnesota stone on the capitol site. It consists of several blocks of granite dressed, polished, hammered and carved in such a manner as to show the real merit of the granite. The citizens of Ortonville who contributed the funds to get out the samples will also send a committee to St. Paul in the interest of Ortonville granite.

Narrow Escape.

The Monterey Flats, a three story brick tenement situated at 21-23 East Seventeenth street, Minneapolis, was damaged by fire to the extent of several thousand of dollars the other morning. When discovered at about 3 o'clock the flames had secured a strong headway, and the inmates effected their escape after an exciting experience. Several persons were rescued in their nightclothes. Lena Erickson, a domestic, dropped to the street from a window on the third floor, but was caught on a mattress, and escaped injury.

Her clothes became ignited from the kitchen stove, and as the little one was alone, no assistance could be rendered. The child died after 10 hours of intense suffering.

A PORTUGUESE HERO.

His Story a Striking Illustration of National Ingratitude.

An act of historical justice has just been done by Portugal to the greatest of its Indian viceroys and soldiers, Affonso d'Albuquerque, who died the victim of his sovereign's ingratitude.

In the ruins of the church at Goa, in which he was first of all buried, there was found the other day the slab, with its inscription, which had covered his remains, until in 1566 his son moved them to Lisbon. The governor-general of Goa, which Albuquerque first captured in 1510 and made the capital for a time of an eastern empire said to cover 4,000 leagues, has formally made over the precious slab to the president of the geographical society of Lisbon, who is to be congratulated on the acquisition. The commandant of the Vasco da Gama man-of-war, on its way home after the suppression of a foolish rebellion, was directed to receive the stone under a salute from every saluting battery in Goa and to convey it with all honor to the society.

Albuquerque was the most dreaded enemy of the British as well as the Dutch before we were able to supplant the Portuguese power of the east, and the Royal Geographical societies of London and Scotland may well congratulate that of Lisbon. The date of the Portuguese hero's death is December 16 on the slab, and not December 15, as hitherto recorded in history. The Portuguese and the French have always failed as colonizing powers because of their distrust of and ingratitude to some of the greatest sons in the east. Even Comoens was a victim.

Against such cases, and those of Dupleix and Lally in French India, we have, however, to set the treatment of Clive with his sad end, and the impeachment of Warren Hastings, for both of which history has since atoned. In one respect Albuquerque was greater than any of these—from Goa he captured the trade of Asia for the sea powers, beating back both Soliman the Magnificent of Constantinople, and the sultan of Egypt at Alexandria, who, with Venice and Genoa, had monopolized it all.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

HAD FEARS FOR HIM.

Wife Who Believed That He Never Would Stop.

He had been bitten early by the cycling fever. He prided himself upon the fact that he was one of the "old-timers" and that he wore upon his breast a veteran's bar. He had begun in the good old days of the ordinary, days when there was a real exhilaration awheel. He had marked the passing of his friend of old in sadness, but he had taken to the safety with renewed enthusiasm.

He had filled every office within the gift of the league. In his declining years he refused the higher honors, but consoled himself with membership in 13 clubs of his city, and with presidencies and secretaryships and treasurerships and captaincies galore. He had been a "warm member." He had ridden centuries up to the last week, and was bedizened with golden bars like unto the Pharaohs of old.

On off days, and other occasions, he had been a good husband to the sorrowing woman who now mourned, and mourned, and mourned. His taking off had been sudden, but he had died at peace with the world, and the world was fairly well saitsfied, too. The 13 A. A. A. A. C.'s were arranging for the funeral awheel. It had been his last request. But his sorrowing widow mourned and mourned.

"Madam," said the white-haired clergyman, with tremulous voice, "do not weep. Your husband is resting now."

"Nay, nay!" she wailed, remembering how her departed spent the Sabbath awheel, and not in sober worship "Nay, nay! I fear he is scorching yet."—Bearings.

MUD-MADE MEN.

Thousands Rejuvenated in 1895—Remarkable Vitalizing Power of the Famous Magno-Mud Cure and Lithia Water Baths.

INDIANA MINERAL SPRINGS, Ind., Jan. [Special]—During the year 1895 a large number of physicians from all over the country have personally investigated the remarkable natural combination of cures found here for rheumatism, kidney and nervous diseases. This treatment, consisting of the Magno-Mud Cure and Magno-Lithia Baths, taken in connection with the drinking of Magno-Lithia water, has been found by the profession to be the most remarkable and successful remedial power as yet discovered. The end of the year brought reports from many eminent medical men, a number of whom have discussed and recommended the cure in the leading medical journals.

Since the accidental discovery of the virtues of Magno-Mud and Lithia water four years ago, this little valley has become world-famous. A big hotel has been built with all modern improvements, electric light, steam heat, and directly connected with a large bath-house especially constructed for the requirements of Magno-Mud and Lithia Water Baths. People in search of rest, health and pleasure from all over the United States have come in numbers to tax the capacity of the establishment, and have gone to help spread the fame of the cure.

The proprietors, the Indiana Springs Co., have opened offices at 105 Hudson St., New York City, and 45 Randolph St., Chicago, where all detailed information can be obtained on application, whether personal or by letter.

"This is leap year, I know," said the maid; "but I do not think I could so far forget my maidenly modesty as to propose to a man. Yet—" "Yet what?" asked the youth, seeing she hesitated. "I might jump at an offer if it were made to me."—N. Y. Herald.

An Idle Scavenger.

The bowels act the part of a scavenger, inasmuch as they remove much of the debris, the waste effete matter of the system. When they grow idle, neglectful of duty, it is of the utmost importance that they should be impelled to activity. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters effects this desirable object without griping them like a drastic purgative. The Bitters is also efficacious for malaria, bilious, dyspeptic and kidney trouble.

GYPSINE.

Won't rub off!!

Neither will Gypsine!

Q. What is Gypsine?
A. Gypsine is a permanent and everlasting wall finish, entirely different from all Kalsomine preparations.
Q. How is it more durable than Kalsomines?
A. It is made from a Gypsum Rock cement base and grows hard on the wall with age.
Q. How about Kalsomines?
A. They are but temporary, softening after a short time and have to be washed and scraped off, in fact spoil any wall to which they are applied, as they rub and scale.
Q. Will not Gypsine rub and scale off?
A. No, when originally applied to a clean wall it is everlasting, and can be recoated to change tints or when necessary.
Q. Is Gypsine injurious to the health?
A. Unlike all poisonous wall paper held on with vegetable paste or whiting and glue kalsomine, it is recommended by the leading physicians and sanitarians everywhere.
Q. Can anything but plain wall tinting be done with Gypsine?
A. Any kind of frescoing or relief decorating can be done with it.
Q. Where can I purchase it?
A. From your local paint dealer.
Q. How can I learn more about Gypsine?
A. Ask your dealer or write for copy of GYPSINE ADVOCATE and sample circular.

DELANO DIARY

—Easter hats at Mrs. M. J. Mulfords.

—Oakes' Bell Ringers, City Hall, tonight.

—Schaffer's store is again filled up with new goods.

—A new sign, J. W. and F. Q. Lindsley, adorns the front of one of the finest business houses in town.

—A little son of Andrew Reider's, on the west side, has the Measles; imported from Montrose, via his country cousins.

—Coolen's lumber shed is drawing to completion. John is now sure of a lumber yard if he don't have anything but what it takes to build the mammoth structure.

—While we read of snow in Iowa, Washington, New York and other cold countries we can not help all the more enjoying our unusually salubrious climate.

—Andrew Thompson, of Greenwood, after a month's work has secured a good well of water on his farm, 225 feet deep with 125 feet of water. This ought to last him for a while at least.

—The Hotel Windsor, Minneapolis, has just opened under new management, remodeled, refilled and refurnished throughout and the best $2. per day house in the city.

26 1t C. A. MERRILL, Prop.

—Prof. Denton and a delegation of the Buffalo school visited Delano Saturday to inspect the electric light plant, for the special benefit of the physics class. We unnerstand the scholars also enjoyed an oyster supper with their former principal, Prof. Wharton.

—The I. O. G. T. lodge held in the M. E. church Saturday evening was one of the best meetings yet had by the lodge here. Five visitors were present from Monticello, who added much to the interest as they took active parts in the meeting Miss Anna Quinn was initiated. Officers for the present term were elected and are to be installed tomorrow, Saturday, evening at the church. The Lodge is now in a fair way to grow and its chance for work is enough to satisfy the most zealous.

—The stage driver to Rockford, Andrew Reider, had quite a story to tell on his return home Tuesday morning. He says he found various articles strung along the road; noticed a banker rushing around over Charler Eppel's plowed field, a horse lying in the ditch, etc., etc. It seems that creamerymen Roosen and Kaemmer had started to Rockford and got so far on their journey when the superabundance of oats made itself felt resulting in the scattering.

—We have received a beautiful, illustrated catalogue from The Jewell Nursery Co., of Lake City, Minnesota, the oldest and largest nursery in the Northwest. Their catalogue is very complete, containing full descriptions, instructions for planting, pruning; and care of stock. They also enclose a list of collections of flowers and bedding plants that are cheap enough to be in the reach of every one. They also grow Seed Corn and Seed Potatoes, comprising the latest and best varieties. Their references are A No. 1. Read their ad. in another column and mention this paper when writing them. 23-4t.

—Yesterday afternoon we took occasion to visit the Delano High School for a short time. We arrived on the grounds during the noon hour, and found a chance to "jump the rope" just a few times, when the bell rang and the scholars all went very quietly to their places. We followed up stairs where Prof. Hawker showed us into the High School room, where we found Miss Kimball, who soon called out the Grammar class and for about an hour we heard about adverbial clauses, adjective phrases, etc., etc. The class contained about fifteen pupils and did fairly well. The instructress proved herself quite clear, and decided in her knowledge of the subject; the pupils were, as a rule, more uncertain in their answers; and we think the class suffers from a lack of ability to read correctly more than from anything else.

Next we visited Prof. Hawker's recitation room and enjoyed listening to a class of seven, four girls and three boys, in Civil Government. This class is making progress and their teacher is quite interesting on the subject. Recess came and we were obliged to return to our own place of business, hoping to accept the Professors kind invitation to call again.

From the classes assembled in the Delano school house will come in a very few years, men and women to take the places of those already graduated, while those in advance go still higher in the business, literary or other work they may choose. On how well our scholars do their work at school depends, in a large measure, their success in after years.

We were pleased among other things to notice that the copy of the Declaration of Independence presented by the Sons of the Revolution had a place where the pupils could read it at any time. Patriotism is a good lesson to learn.

—There will be a five o'clock tea at Mrs. Corey's Thursday afternoon, April 2nd, for the benefit of the M. E. Church. All are invited.

—Ferdinand Kelsey is hauling rock to prepare the foundation for a new mill on South River Street. His rapidly increasing business demand this innovation.

The pops are talking of running S. M. Owens for congress in the Fifth District. Uncle Loren is liable to again find himself in a Manatoba of a fix if they keep on cooking up trouble for him in the saw dust city.—Litchfield News Ledger.

It might be a very graceful thing for Davis to withdraw as a presidential candidate, giving way entirely to the overwhelming choice of the state, Mc Kinley.—Duluth News-Tribune.

Senator Davis has reported the Gear bill to admit New Mexico with a favorable recommendation. The Senator will also urge the admission of the new state at this session.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Under the Platt plan of conducting a Presidential boom Gov. Morton is to be the favorite son of New York—not too much the favorite, but just enough for first-ballot purposes while the trading is going on in the lobbies. Perhaps the Governor may put an end to this jockeying.—World.

The "tariff barons" of the country are chipping in for McKinley, and, as charged by that stalwart Republican, Senator Chandler, of New Hampshire, the "fat-frying process" by which McKinley delegations are secured, goes on. The manufacturers may well pay out a million or two—it will come back by the hundreds of millions.—St. Cloud Times.

It is principle that makes parties and it is principle that has forced us out of the Republican party. As our readers know, we are a conscientious believer in the use of gold and silver as standard money at the ratio of 16 to 1 in this country, whether other countries join us or not, and that the United States should take the initiative, and we believe the strength of our nation and its great resources and commerce will compel as many other nations to fall in line as will re-establish bimetallism. We believe this principle of money reform stands above every other in importance in this country.—Moorhead News.

The proposition that three-fourths of the republican in the United States should be in favor of the nomination of McKinley for the presidency is the plainest kind of truth. To judge from the plaintive wails that have gone forth since the McKinley bill was repealed that measure was the idol in the hearts of the republicans. The father of the McKinley bill is before the country now, asking for recognition. If the members of his party mean all that they have said since the law was repealed, he is entitled to their support. They owe him the nomination. The proposition could not be plainer.—Swift County Monitor.

Personals.

Milton Muckey has been on the sick list this week.

Chape Farnham and Charles Bugbee and wife, of Rockford, were in town Wednesday.

E. Cleveland, of Maple Plain, was in town yesterday. He says he is still alive and there is going to be an election this fall.

Miss Jennie Kimball, of Hamline, who was on a short visit with her sister Lizzie, of this place, sang a fine solo at the Presbyterian church last Sabbath morning.

LeRoy Cady, who came over with the Buffalo school on Saturday made us a brief call. He says that was the first time he had ever been to Delano. Come again.

William Ditzler and son Loretto, Jake Kellenaker, and John O'Mara and son of Greenwood, and N. P. Lindstrom, of Independence, were among the Delano visitors on account of sickness this week.

County Cullings.

It has been pretty generally surmised that J. C. Nugent will be the Democratic candidate for sheriff this fall.

Register of Deeds Nagle dispensed with the services of deputy Swanberg lately. Politics seems to be boiling over.

Democrats should be looking up their village and town committees, and see to it that the new law is complied with in holding primaries.

The Cokato Commoner says: "Cokato will have two saloons, possibly three. The council should stop there; the more saloons, the more attempts at law violation and the more inducements to drunkenness.

This county will be entitled to 19 delegates to the State convention on the 24th. There is not much to be done only go to Minneapolis, perhaps listen to a few yells, elect the men already picked out, get a drink and a dinner.—Buffalo Journal.

Several of the county editors have expressed a willingness to attend a meeting of the fraternity; some have suggested Buffalo during the June term of court. That would be a good time to catch them together, perhaps. Let some one call the meeting.

On the same subject the Wright County Times says: "We are surprised to learn that newspapers have published these notices free heretofore. You might just as well expect a hotel keeper to furnish free lodging or a merchant give away his goods without proper remuneration.

County Commissioner Bugbee, the only remaining Democrat among the County officers, we understand, is not adverse to taking the nomination for a second term. Charley has got onto the ropes pretty well, and has done considerable in the way of getting fair play for his end of the county.

In referring to the new law requiring that notices of primary elections be published in the newspapers, the Annandale Post says:

"We did not suppose for an instant that any paper expected to publish such notices free. The custom of newspaper officers in other localities in Minnesota where we have lived, has been, invariably, to charge all political parties for any notices or calls for caucuses or conventions of any sort; and we see no reason why Wright County should be made any exception to this rule."

It is an awful thing to accuse fellow citizens with conspiring together to run things to suit themselves in courts, in politics and in other affairs, in an evil way. But such charges have become so frequent, and so awful as to have been brought into court. And from developments in the Billings case there appears to be a pile of perjury somewhere, and possibly some bribery. People are thoroughly tired of hearing such disgraceful things, and would prefer that they be thoroughly sifted and the offenders meted out their just deserts.

The Delano Gazette has been very much worried over the official county printing lately, but if its editor will inform us how he can collect $16.20 for publishing the notice to tax-payers when the other papers received about $9. at legal rates for the same service he can give us a little lift toward prosperity.—Howard Lake Herald.

If the Herald will tell us how it got $12.20 for the "Notice to Tax Payers" while it claims legal rates would be about $9., perhaps that will aid the public in seeing through the matter, and in knowing why our bill was still larger.

Frank Nye has a reputation as a great man before a jury; but in this part of the country his grand effort in the Billings trial, as printed in the Minneapolis Tribune, has added nothing to his laurels. No one claims, not even the accused himself, but that Billings has long had a reputation not to be envied. Nevertheless the absurdity of Mr. Dodge or Howard or anyone hesitating, in case they needed such assistent to engage Mr. Billings, whose reputation was so well established seems quite apparant. While Mr. Nyes idea of Mr. Billings going to Buffalo and not recognizing Mr. Wendell or Mr. Pidgeon is about as laughable to folks familiar with things at the county seat as one of "Bill" Nye's old chestnuts would be. If the able attorney had ever attended a term of court at Buffalo we hardly think he would have used that for argument, if it was to be published.

LIFE'S DOUBTS.

When a feller's put his money in speckerlatin scheme,
And win or lose is ounce and ounce abalanced on a beam,
He kinder gits oneasy, and he don't sleep wel at night.
For he fears his speckerlations ain't a-comin' out jest right.
There ain't no way o' tellin' 'cept by waitin', and although
He thinks he'll be successful, why, he'd kinder like to know.
When a feller's been a-cussin' and a-sinnin' all his life,
And talkin' 'bout his neighbors, and a-sowin' seeds o' strife.
And at length a fever takes him and he knows he's near his last,
And 'members all his evil deeds and sinnin' in the past.
He wonders if there really is an awful "place below"
Of course, it makes no difference, but he'd kinder like ter know.
When a feller takes a hatchet in his hand and wanders out
To the poultry yard and pauses, and begins to look about,
The chickens ask the question, "Is he goin' ter make a nest?
Or is he meditatin' which'll fricasee the best?
Of course they ain't a carin, but they wander to and fro
In a way that makes a feller think they'd kinder like ter know.
When a feller has a sweetheart (say, for instance, you or I)
That's as dear as any violet and jest as sweet and shy,
Sometimes he falls to dreamin,' when the fire is burnin' dim,
And he's feelin' kinder lonely—"Does she ever think o' him?
And will she ever love him?" But the fire-light flickers so
That it makes him sorter doubtful, and he'd kinder like to know.

—Chicago Record.

THE Supreme Court has decided that the N. P. and the G. N. Railways can't be united and form one gigantic company controlling the trade and traffic of the entire Northwest.

OMAHA prefers to have the police attend to any of her citizens who may break the laws to shutting up the innocent while the temptations are allowed to run full sway under a curfew law. Sensible.

WE this week received a neat little book containing 144 pages of useful information to people visiting the Capital City. A map of business district serves as a frontis piece. Thanks to the St. Paul Jobber's Union.

A HUGE steel trust is the latest announcement. Something more wide spread and far reaching than ever before. Controlling the entire steel business. Able to regulate the prices on the sewing girl's needle or thimble; the woodman's ax, or the harvester's binder. Possibly to suspend the building of railroads, of ships, or even to spike a Nation's guns.

WE fail to see how the people generally throughout the sixth district are to be materially benefitted by the fine government buildings at St Cloud and at Brainern, the one costing $100,000 the other $75,000. We for one think that while possibly Senator Davis and Congressman Towne could build themselves no more lasting monuments than these, they could endear themselves to the majority of their constituents a great deal more by voting for retrenchment in government expenses, these hard times than by going into the building business.

Why Don't He Say I?

In announcing that he has an assistant the Hon. Ignatius Donnelly says: "we are not a believer in impersonal journalism,—which swallows up the man in a corporation, the articles written by ourself will have the letters I. D. appended to them, while Mr. Stacy's will bear the signature F. N. S."

Why don't the Sage say I, right along in the article? What's the use of saying we, ourself, and such foolishness?

Money Questions.

What is Money? Anything that is generally accepted in exchange for the necessaries and luxuries of life.

What is it made of? In this country usually of gold, silver, nickel, copper or paper and the government stamp.

Why are these articles used for money? For convenience; and because the people, through their government recognize them, when stamped; as money.

Are all pieces of gold, silver, nickel, copper or paper used as money? No.

Why receive one piece as money and not another? Because the government stamp makes that money which the people choose.

International Currency.

A great deal is being said about our currency being made international. We are told by gold standard advocates that it will never do to have silver money because it will not be taken at its face in other countries. We believe with Thomas Jefferson that our country should engage in no entangling alliance with any country. Therefore we should not mix up our money matters with other countries. We have all we can do to satisfy ourselves with our own money. If we had an international currency how easy it would be for the manipulators of money to cry out, we must do this thing or do that thing to strengthen our money because England, Germany, France or Russia demands that we do so; or because we must do so in order to hold our trade with Spain, Mexico or Hiawai. If the cudgel of international currency can be brandished over the heads of voters, when it is only talked of, so vigorously as to frighten people into casting their ballot, against their own convictions as to what is best, for a gold standard, how much more effectually will it be wielded at each recurrence of the Presidential election when its smooth handle has once been placed within the grasp of the leading manipulators of wealth in foreign lands.

International currency! Where does the idea come from? Who wants international currency? What do they want it for? Does the farmer, the mechanic or the laboring man ask for an international currency? Do any of them contemplate a trip around the world? Do they wish to lay in a stock of goods, for their summers use, from abroad, and pay for them with international money? Haven't the large majority of us got about all we can attend to to get enough of the dollars of our own country without making them to ship away?

Who has international currency? Don't everybody that starts on a journey to another country exchange his money before leaving his native land? If you chance to get a Canadian quarter don't you have to pay it out for twenty cents? If international money would be such a fine thing why not use what little drifts into the country at its face value? There would appear to be little use to wait for the slow action of international monetary conferences to hatch up some outlandish device to supersede our Eagle or our Liberty, and place it on our coin.

If the United States is the grandest country on the face of the globe why need she ask other countries what kind of money she shall have? If she has managed to live in the past; if she has grown from a few colonies along the Atlantic coast to be a great power extending across the continent, it looks absurd that she should, only then, be obliged to call in all the nations of the earth to tell her what kind of money she shall make for her own people to do business with.

Objections to the circulation of coin and of paper money are often heard on the ground that they serve as mediums for conveying infectious and contagious diseases; that sickness is carried from those afflicted to the well. That through the handling of money dreadful epidemics may originate. Are we then to adopt an international money to be carried from the sick, and may be the eyes of one dead, with yellow fever, with Asiatic cholera, or other plague, to the hands and to the mouths, as playthings, of our little children, to infect them, and, to become the source from which an epidemic depletes the population of the town, city or state?

Protective tariff's have been put up higher and higher on most of the necessities of life for the avowed purpose of keeping our money at home. Now when the highest point is reached and the pendulum of public opinion has already begun to travel back towards lower rates something to divert the minds of the populace must be sprung, so the gold standard seems to come in. We are told that if we have a double standard; both gold and silver our money will not be taken in foreign countries. Will not the same means of exchange remain as has been used for years; and are they not adequate to the demands for their use?

Let us use our own money, gold, silver, nickel, copper and paper. Let us have one dollar just as good as another dollar anywhere in our own land and enough of it to go around. Let us learn to vote for what we know or believe to be for our own and our neighbors best interests, and not for what some spruce young college graduate or defunct politician, in the employ of those hoping to accumulate wealth at our expense, may tell us to vote. Then will we indeed have an expression of the people. Then will we have a government of men, and not of money; by brains, and not by business; for the people, and not for the politicians.

Intrinsic Money.

Many people are insisting, and it has been so, as long as we can remember, that the money of our Nation have intrinsic value. That our dollars be made of a material actually worth one dollar each. That in any country and at any time the lump of gold from which our dollar is made can be exchanged for one dollar's worth of anything we wish to buy. This would be the ideal money. But if gold is, alone, to be intrinsic money there don't appear to be enough of it on which to transact the business of the country.

With both gold and silver our country has managed, with the aid of paper money, in serving our wants. But paper money don't fill the bill as intrinsic money; and now silver is not worth much more than half what gold is, compared with prices at the time of the demonetization of silver; yet so long as the people demand it, either takes the place of the "intrinsic" gold dollar.

At the time silver was demonetized it is claimed that each silver dollar was worth $1.03. The silver dollars intrinsic worth then exceeded the value of a dollar of the yellow metal.

Should the Government conclude to quit coining gold, and to cease using it as money, how long would gold's "intrinsic" value remain at it's present ratio with the white metal? Would not a large portion of the yellow metal find itself out of a job, and depreciate in value accordingly?

Intrinsic value really, then, depends considerably on the willingness of the people to accept either gold, silver or paper when stamped by the government as money. And either without the stamp would be worth less than with it.

We must then conclude that from whatever material our money is made its intrinsic value depends considerably on the government stamp and its endorsement by the people.

Millionaire Manufacturer.

From the St. Paul Dispatch we clip the following:

"Tom Johnson, the Ohio disciple of Henry George's single tax and free trade theories, is trying to break into congress again from Cleveland. He will find that it is not a good year for a millionaire manufacturer, who has grown rich off protection, and then burns the bridges behind him, in order to prevent any one else from prospering."

This seems as if the Dispatch then admits that people do become millionaires off protection; But while it finds no fault with that fact, it objects to Mr. Johnson now going to congress and using his best efforts to prevent the people from being further robbed in this manner. To what better use could this great apostle of free trade, who speaks from experience, put his vast wealth, pray, than to use it in denouncing what he knows to be wrong, a great wrong against the very large majority of his fellow countrymen?

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 27, 1896

An open confession of the inability of the republicans to legislate is contained in Senator Platt's resolution providing for the adjournment of Congress on May 2, and Mr. Platt clinches the confession by saying of his resolution. "It is perfectly clear that there will be no important legislation this session except the appropriation bills, and I see no reason for remaining here merely for the purpose of introducing and talking upon agitating resolutions, and am persuaded that the country would be better satisfied to have us at home than to have us here." If that isn't humiliating, coming from a party which controls both branches of Congress and which made such wonderful promises of what it was going to accomplish in a legislative way when it again got control, pray what would you call it?

The Reed and McKinley republicans are now at daggers points, so to speak, and they are growing more bitter towards each other every day. Each side is charging the other with being guilty of all sorts of disgraceful tactics. The McKinley men are charged with frying the fat out of the manufacturers in order to buy delegates, and the Reed men are charged with every species of duplicity in connection with the favorite son scheme, the latest being that they originated the story of a combine to nominate Harrison so as to prevent the Indiana delegates committing themselves to McKinley. The average democrat regards it merely as another case of "the pot calling the kettle black", and feels like shouting "go it Mac!" "go it Tom!" and enjoying the fight all the way through without caring a continental how it ends.

Boutelle, of Me., had another attack of coniriness this week which resulted in a considerable exposure of ears as he stood up and brayed against the purely sentimental bill for the repeal of the law prohibiting Confederate officers who held commissions in the U. S. Army previous to the war being commissioned again therein. Everybody admitted that the bill, which unanimously passed the Senate Christmas eve, was merely an evidence of cordiality towards the ex-Confederates, and that there is not even a probability that any ex-Confederate will thereby become an officer in the U. S. Army, except in the very improbable event of an early foreign war. But Boutelle would not see it that way. He ranted against it for the greater part of one session of the House, and finally cast the only vote that was recorded against the bill in either branch of Congress. Boutelle's constituents must be different from other men if they are not heartily ashamed of him and his antics.

Although there is little expectation that the bill will be acted upon at this session, even if reported, a joint subcommittee composed of three members of the House and three of the Senate Pacific Railroads Committee has been selected to see if it is possible for both committees to agree upon one bill dealing with the indebtedness of the Pacific Railroads to the government.

It looks like the Cuban business was ended so far as Congress is concerned. But to many who did not catch the drift when the Senate sent the Cuban resolutions back to conference things did not look promising. But they soon saw that the conference had only to agree to the original Senate resolutions and the House to do likewise to end the affair.

The equestrian statue of Gen. W. S. Hancock, which is to be erected in Washington, has arrived and will be in position inside of two or three weeks. The unveiling of the statue is to be made the occasion of a big public celebration, military and civic, under national auspices. Art critics say the statue will be the best of its kind at the National Capital The date for the formal unveiling has not been definitely set, but it will be on or about May 1. Gen. Hancock had many enthusiastic admirers and they will all be glad of an opportunity to honor his memory.

The National advisory board of the A. P. A. held a secret meeting here this week, it is said to agree as to which of the republican candidates for President should receive the support of the organization.

Gen. Thomas Lincoln Casey, U. S. A., retired, who has been in charge of the construction of the Congressional Library building since it was begun, died very suddenly Wednesday afternoon. Gen. Casey was the engineer in charge of the erection of the State, War, and Navy Department Building, and of the Washington Monument.

Senator Davis, of Minn., is one of the most disgusted men in Congress. Of course he didn't expect to get the Presidential nomination, but he did hope to get second place on the ticket, if an eastern man headed it. Now his hopes are dead.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

Tourists, Hotels, Scenery, Curiosities, McGinty, The New Woman, Oranges, And The Weather.

BY HON. B. F. CHRISTLIEB.

The tourists season still continues unabated in California, and Pasadena is receiving a very large share of the visitors. Hotel Green, Pasadena, is one of the popular hostelries of the state. It is owned and operated by G. G. Green of New Jersey, of August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup fame. It is situated close by the Santa Fe R. R. station and it is the first object that catches the tourists eye on leaving the train despite the fact of their being a number of runners present, and exercising their vocal organs in behalf of other hotels in the city, and consequently receives a large patronage. The Painter Hotel, Pasadena, is another popular resort for tourists. It is situated in the northerly part of the city and at a considerable elevation above sea level. Its location possesses a salubrious atmosphere and an extensive view of the city and surroundings, extending to Santa Catalina Island, Pacific ocean, a distance of about 50 miles from the hotel and 30 miles from the shore of the main land. The island is a great mountain rearing itself from the depths of the ocean, which from the Painter is seen through openings between the coast range of hills or mountains of the mainland and impress the stranger as being located on the main land, the surface of the ocean being invisible.

Besides hotels and scenery there are other attractions in the cities to the tourists and their purses. There are many establishments dealing in curios, the places being known as curios. There articles of merchandise consist of bric-a-brac of Japanese, Mexican, Indian, and of other races of the world especially the natives of the coasts and islands of the Pacific ocean. Amongst these articles are porcelain wares ornamented with colors and images, and also images of porcelain and metal, masks, baskets, plaited and woven work in various designs. The images and masks expressing happy smiles, chagrin, characters of fable, idols, demons not even omitting a representation of his Satanic majesty. These places also contain preserved remains of the animal kingdom, especially creatures from the sea.

In the show window of one of these establishments is a small creature a native of the sea and having of itself some resemblance to human creatures, being perhaps manipulated by the artist in preserving it, to give such an effect. A first glance at the creature suggests the mermaid idea, but instead of an angelic female it more resembles an elderly gentleman with a pointed sleeping cap on his head, and to complete the effect, the dealer, who is evidently a wag, attached a card designating it, "McGinty" suggesting the words "bottom of the sea" in allusion to the creatures native place.

The new woman and bicycle are abroad here as well as in other parts of the world. She is seen operating the wheel, attired in the various attires, the knickerbockers, bloomer, zouave, but perhaps more frequent in the ladies usual dress adopted to the wheel. The ladies here are perhaps more radical in equestrianship and attire than in other localities. Most of the ladies seen on horse back, ride man fashion using the divided skirt. To people unaccustomed to seeing this method of equestrianship, the apparent immodesty of the position is soon dispelled on viewing a lady in this attitude and discovering the greater comfort and ease to the rider, affording her better use of her strength in controlling the animal, than on the old fashioned side saddle where the rider is placed in a distorted and uncomfortable position, which the male equestrian seldom tries imitate or repeat, if he has once hung his two pedals on the same side of the horse. The body of the the equestriene is in an upright position with skirt depending loosely in folds from the waist and spreading over the side of the horse, and, in the opinion of the writer, no one can see anything about the position or attire suggestive of immodesty.

The orange market of Southern California is subject to the same conditions and vicissitudes as the wheat market of Minnesota. The market has become very much depressed latterly, and the complaints are, that producers receive little for their labor above expenditures in raising the crop.

The weather, February, passed without a rain, but March came in with rain, accompanied at times with thunder and lightening and ending with a consideruble fall of snow on the Sierra Madre mountains, extending down into the valleys to an elevation of 1500 feet above sea level, which brought the snow margin close along the foot of the mountains. The snow soon disappeared from the valley and to the highth of 25,000 feet, but it remained visible for several days on the upper part of the mountains, making visible the trails on the face of the mountains, running to Wilson's Peak and Mt. Lowe, involving considerable labor in removing the "beautiful" from the tracks of the electric railway on Mt. Lowe. Aside from the few days storm, the weather has been pleasant, with slight variations of temperature.

An Item in the Cost of War.

Harper's Weekly presents a view of war which is calculated to make one open his eyes. The cost is not simply lives and property destroyed at the time, and a war debt, but the pensions of the soldiers who have fought in it. The United States has spent an enormous amount of the people's money in pensioning the soldiers of our Civil War. Although it ended more than thirty years ago, we paid last year in round numbers $140,000,000 on pensions; and have paid as high as $160,000,000 a year! Fifty years ago we fought Mexico, and surely the expenses of that war must have been all met by this time; but it seems there are still 12,586 veterans and 7,868 veterans' widows on the pay roll of the Government! The war of 1812 was more than eighty years ago. Are we yet done paying for that? There are still twenty-one veterans and 3,826 veterans' widows of that war pensioned by the United States! The Revolutionary war was 110 years ago; have we done paying for that? "Not quite; the pension roll still contains twelve widows or daughters of Revolutionary soldiers?" Add one statement more: "There are several hundred thousand claims in the Pension Office unadjucated" While no consideration of pecuniary expense should bar a country's vindication of assailed honor, or fight for future's safety and peace, this consideration is of weight in enforcing resort to all peaceable methods of adjustment before unsheathing the sword.—The Methodist Herald.

The Cigarette Again.

The news Tribune directed attention a few days ago to the reckless disregard of the ordinance prohibiting the sale of tobacco and cigarettes, and urged that action be taken to put a stop to the nefarious practice. In this connection it is interesting to note that one city in the state has taken decided action to prevent the sale of the pernicious weed. By an ordinance just passed Winona makes it an offence to sell within the city any cigarettes, whether to minors or anyone else.—Duluth News-Tribune.

AN Indian chief the other day traded 20 good horses for one bicycle. Thus it goes.

IN the middle ages every woman painted and powdered. We are inclined to the belief that history is repeating itself.

THE Boston girl who has sued a reckless admirer for $20,000 because he kissed her should have turned the other cheek and then sued him for $40,000.

"MAE" and Eva Marie, the former belles of the town, have gone out of fashion and "Nellye" is slowly taking her place. It's frightful, but it goes.

THE Massachusetts legislature having approved the constitutional amendment substituting biennal for annual state elections in that state, the people will now be called to vote upon it.

IT is California's year for oranges and lemons. She has already shipped east 2,400,000 boxes, and has received an average price of from $3 to $3.50 per box. This nets about $300 per acre.

OUR astronomers may as well go off on a fishing excursion with the weather clerk. Their calculations won't do. Perrine's comet, scheduled to brush us with its tail, missed us by a trifle over 60,000,000 miles.

AN investigation of the Baltimore jail brought to light the fact that one towel was made to do duty for 63 prisoners and it had to last a whole week. That towel is now in condition for service in a printing office.

IN the Choctaw Indian nation a criminal condemned to be shot is not imprisoned, but has entire liberty until the morning of the execution. This is an old law of the Choctaws, and only one case of violation is on record.

THE smallest republic in the world is Tarolaro, a little island in the Mediterranean, about 7½ miles from Sardinia. The island is only 1½ miles across and has only about 55 inhabitants. The president is elected for six years, no public officials receive any salary and women have the same voting rights as men.

IF a Chinaman dies while being tried for murder the fact of his dying is taken as evidence of his guilt. He has departed, but somebody must suffer, and his eldest son, if he has one, is therefore sent to prison for a year. If he has no son, then his father or brother gets a flogging. It's all in the family, and somebody has to pay for it.

IT has taken 21 years to complete the coast defense vessel Monadnock, which has just been commissioned. The result is a very creditable vessel and probably the best of her type in existence today, but if it took as long to build all our vessels we would have to wait some time before securing a sufficient naval force to afford us protection from foreign invasion.

THE ameer of Afghanistan is so delighted with the reception accorded his son during the latter's recent visit in England that he has sent presents to Queen Victoria aggregating $600,000 in value. Travelers tell us that Afghanistan is one of the poorest countries on the face of the earth, and that often the natives have great difficulty to keep from starvation. Comment is unnecessary.

ALASKA will soon have a regularly organized territorial form of government, if the bill before congress becomes a law. This will leave Indian territory the only unorganized territory within the limits of the United States, and a territorial government cannot be established there until the Indians consent to alter their tribal laws. It is only a question of time, however, before they will give such consent, the public good demanding it.

THE news of the death of Thomas Hughes was received with sorrowful interest in this country. He was for a time actively connected with the United States by his philanthropic scheme of organizing the settlement of Rugby, Tenn., which started off with bright promises, but ultimately collapsed. He was more intimately known to Americans, however, by his two celebrated books, "Tom Brown at Oxford," which was a memorial to Dr. Arnold, head master at Rugby, and "Tom Brown's School Days," the most popular and widely read description of school life ever written.

AN anxious critic asks "will the new woman marry?" Well, she perhaps won't feel compelled to marry, and when she does she will more than likely query whether the man is worth marrying. Marrying for the sake of being married is poor business at any time, and to avoid such the more independent woman is the better for herself and the race. To-day there are thousands of blear-eyed drunkards, husbands and fathers, lying around saloons, and their lives would have been a thousand times better off had they remained single all their lives. "The new woman" may want "a new man."

BLOOMERS as an aid to smuggling were tried by two San Francisco girls in an experiment that failed. The girls took passage to Honolulu on one of the mail steamers and excited the suspicion of the Hawaiian customs officers by going ashore clad in voluminous bloomers. They were followed to a house in Honolulu, where the discarded bloomers and 60 tins of smuggled opium were found. The girls were arrested and convicted of smuggling, but the case against them was dismissed because their guilt was not proven clearly. The girls returned to San Francisco in the steerage wearing skirts.

GETTING READY.

Republicans of Various States Name Convention Delegates.

A Warm Time Experienced in Texas Where McKinley Men Are Shut Out—Massachusetts and Oklahoma Go to Reed.

Austin, Tex., March 27.—The republican state convention was called to order for Thursday's session at 11:15 a. m. The chair announced the committee on credentials would not be ready to report until 12 o'clock and suggested an adjournment until that hour. Much opposition was offered by the McKinleyites, but the chair put the vote and an adjournment was had. The McKinleyites rushed in a lot of McKinley pictures and kept their party well in hand by singing and similar demonstrations.

The convention met at 1:30. The committee on credentials reported, throwing out McKinley proxies from 40 to 50 counties. Both delegations from Grayson county, with Chairman Grant at the head of one, were seated and each given half a vote. The minority report by the McKinley faction was ruled out of order by Cuney, because it was not prepared in the committee room. Webb Flannagan, of "What-are-we-here-for" fame, amid a terrific uproar, offered a substitute for the majority report, but he was ruled out of order.

Amid great confusion the majority report was agreed to and the election of delegates to the St. Louis convention was proceeded with. Chairman Cuney announced that himself and Ferguson, colored Allison men, had been elected. The announcement caused the wildest excitement and the McKinley men attempted to capture the platform. A row followed, in which Webb Flannagan was struck on the head and knocked down, but the row was finally quelled without further serious results. The McKinleyites will hold a convention and send a contesting delegation to St. Louis.

The McKinley convention organized with 621 delegates, of whom over one-third were colored. A negro was selected chairman and the meeting was harmonious. A sound money and protection platform was adopted, and McKinley delegates to the national convention were elected.

Reed Captures Massachusetts.

Boston, March 28.—The state republican convention to elect delegates to the national republican convention at St. Louis met at Music hall Friday morning.

At 10:15 Chairman Lyman, of the state republican committee, called the convention to order.

The committee on permanent organization reported as their choice for chairman Hon. Samuel W. McCall, of Winchester, with a long list of vice-presidents.

The speech of the chairman was listened to with close attention and frequently interrupted with applause. Especially well received was his insistency upon the policy of protection and adhesion to the financial standard of the commercial nations of the world.

Tremendous applause greeted reference to Mr. Reed, betraying beyond doubt the sentiment of the convention regarding their presidential candidate.

Senator Lodge, in rising to present the report of the committee on resolutions, was warmly received. A synopsis of the platform then presented is as follows:

It declares that the present tariff should be replaced by one framed on protective principles and arranged to give an ample protection to American wages and American industry and to restore the reciprocity policy of James G. Blaine; regards the silver agitation as hurtful to business, and declares entire opposition to the free and unlimited coinage of silver; supports the national banking system; declares that the Monroe doctrine, as declared in 1823, and enforced in 1865 and in 1895, must always be upheld; expresses sympathy with the Cubans in their struggle for independence, and closes with this declaration in favor of Thomas B. Reed as a candidate for president:

"Massachusetts republicans have never undertaken to pledge or bind their delegates to a national convention. We do not intend to do so now. But we think it fitting to declare our decided preference among the candidates for the republican nomination to the presidency. We present to the national convention for nomination as president and urge all our delegates to give their earnest, united and active support to a fearless leader, tried in many hard conflicts, a man of national reputation, of unblemished character, unswerving republicanism and great abilities, Thomas B. Reed, of Maine."

The allusion to the Blaine reciprocity policy was received with applause, as was also the allusion to the Cuban matter.

Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, of Nahant; W. Murray Crane, of Dalton; Hon. E. S. Draper, of Hopedale, and Curtis Guild, Jr., of Boston, were then unanimously elected as delegates at large to the St. Louis convention. Alternates were elected as follows: R. H. Boutwell, of Belmont; L. C. Southard, of Easton; R. F. Hawkins, of Springfield, and S. E. Courtney, of Boston.

Oklahoma for Reed.

Oklahoma City, O. T., March 30.—The republican territorial convention, which met here Saturday to elect delegates to the St. Louis convention, brought on a bitter struggle between the Reed and McKinley factions. The Reed men won, the convention voting down resolutions indorsing McKinley, defeating the six McKinley candidates for delegates to St. Louis and electing a delegation favorable to the man from Maine.

Chicago, March 31.—The spring campaign of the Carpenters' unions opened Monday, and before noon a number of strikes had been called in various parts of the city. THE WORK OF A FIEND.

An Aged Ohioan and His Wife Murdered Near Akron.

Cleveland, O., March 30.—At one o'clock Sunday morning the most fiendish deed that has ever claimed entrance to the criminal history of Ohio was perpetrated near Tallmadge, a village five miles north of Akron. Alvin Stone, aged 69, and his wife, aged 62, while asleep at their home were brutally murdered by a fiend, who literally beat their heads to pieces, after which numerous knife thrusts were made into the bodies of the dead. Two daughters, Hattie, aged 29; Emma, aged 27, and the family man servant, A. F. Stillson, were also attacked. All three of these are fatally injured and lie unconscious and bleeding at the home, awaiting death. They had been beaten about the head with a blunt instrument, which of itself must have been large and of great weight.

Alvin Stone was among the most wealthy and prominent of Summit county farmers, and his wife was also a member of one of the wealthiest and most prominent families in northeastern Ohio. The object of the murderous assault on the family was not robbery, as numerous articles of value, including the two gold watches of the aged couple, which were on the bedroom dresser, were easily obtainable.

One member of the family alone escaped injury—Flora, the youngest daughter, aged 16. She is laboring under intense excitement, but was able, between tears and hysterical sobs, to tell what she knew of the affair. The old folks, she said, occupied a chamber on the lower floor. Hattie and Flora slept upstairs. Emma across the hall and the hired man at the rear end of the hallway on the same floor. At about one o'clock Sunday morning, Flora says, she heard an agonizing scream from Emma. She jumped from bed and, opening the door, started across the hall. Hattie followed her.

Flora turning before she entered Emma's room, the door of which was open, saw a masked man strike Hattie over the head with what looked like a crowbar. Hattie with a groan fell senseless to the floor, while Flora in terror ran back to her room and hid under the bedclothes. Hattie, who is a woman of remarkable vitality, despite her frightful injury, arose, and going into Flora's room urged her to throw something over her head. Flora was too frightened to move. Hattie left her room and entering that of her sister, noticed the window was open and that a ladder reached up to it from the ground. She wrapped a quilt around her and went down the ladder, running to Charles Sackett's farm, a quarter of a mile away, where she told her story.

Two of the Sacketts hurried to the Stone house, while another summoned a physician. When they arrived the house was pitch dark. The side door was open. Entering the room occupied by the old folks, they were confronted by the two horribly-mutilated bodies of the father and mother. Emma was found unconscious on the floor of her bedroom. She had been struck a fearful blow over the forehead, and still lies as one dead. The hired man was found in his room in the same condition. He had also been struck over the forehead. Flora was found under the bedclothes in speechless fright.

In a few minutes the whole neighborhood for miles around was aroused, and hundreds assembled about the Stone homestead. The scene was terribly impressive. The rage of those who for so many years had lived with and loved the amiable, honest Stone family knew no bounds. The Akron police department was notified, and Detective Dunn, Marshal Mason, Sheriff Griffin and First Deputy Hart hurried to the scene. They arrived at nine o'clock.

They found what appeared to be tracks of a man leaving the side door, which was open, and ending at the road. The rain which had steadily poured all night had, however, obliterated the tracks along the road. Bloodhounds were put into service, but they could do nothing owing to the rain.

Akron, O., March 31.—The authorities have a theory that Anton Strong murdered the Stone family Saturday night. Three years ago Stone was instrumental in sending Strong to the penitentiary for horse stealing, and at that time Strong vowed vengeance on Stone and his family. Strong was released recently, but has not been seen near the scene of the crime. All the injured except Stillson, the nephew, will recover. Stillson's death is momentarily expected.

Strong was arrested Monday afternoon and formally charged with the crime. The arrest took place at Ravenna. He denies the charge and claims he can prove an alibi. At the house of his sister, where he claims to have spent Saturday night, an overcoat and a pair of pants were found that had just been washed and were not yet dry. The sister said they got wet in a rain last Thursday. Strong has served two terms in the penitentiary for stealing.

Strong was brought here in charge of the officers at 6:30 o'clock p. m. Monday. A great crowd gathered around the city prison and, although there were no manifestations of violence, Mayor Harper ordered battery F, First regiment Ohio light artillery, to remain under arms all night. The funeral of Mr. and Mrs. Stone will be held Wednesday morning.

NO CONSOLIDATION.

End of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Case.

The United States Supreme Court Upholds the Minnesota Statutes Prohibiting Consolidation of Parallel Railways.

Washington, March 30.—The effort of Thomas W. Pearsall, a stockholder in the Great Northern Railroad company, to prevent a consolidation of that corporation with the Northern Pacific railroad, had a successful issue today when Mr. Justice Brown announced the opinion of the supreme court of the United States. The case came up from the circuit court which ruled against Pearsall. He contended that the proposition to unite the two systems was in violation of the law of Minnesota enacted in 1874, which prohibited the consolidation of competing lines of road. On the other hand it was the contention of the railroad managers that the law was a violation of the provisions in the charter of the Minneapolis & St. Cloud railroad, the original link of the Great Northern line authorizing it to lease or purchase other lines of the road.

"The question before the court," said Justice Brown, "was whether or not the law of 1874 was an impairment of the vested right of the Great Northern companies." Discussing the meaning of the term "vested right," the opinion stated "that in view of the court it did not extend beyond a right acquired by or under executed contracts. It was within the power of the legislature, under a general permission, such as is expressed in the Minneapolis & St. Cloud charter, to acquire control of other roads, to declare that it shall not be used to acquire competing lines and thus construct a monopoly which for 300 years has been held by the courts in England and this country to be odious and entirely against public policy."

"It is a matter upon which the legislature is entitled to pass judgment. There are, moreover, thought to be other dangers to the moral sense of community incident to such great aggregations of wealth which, though indirect, are even more insiduous in their influence, and such as have awakened feelings of hostility which have not failed to find expression in legislative acts."

The consolidation of these two great corporations would, said the court, unavoidably result in giving the Great Northern a monopoly of all traffic in the northern half of the state of Minnesota, as well as of all transcontinental traffic north of the line of the Union Pacific, against which public regulations would be but a feeble protection. The act of the legislature of 1874, he concluded, undoubtedly reflected the general sentiment of the public, that their best security is in competition.

The judgment of the circuit court was reversed and remanded with instructions to proceed in accordance with the opinion. Justices Field and Brewer dissented from the judgment of the court.

The Property of the Irish-American Bank Tied Up.

Minneapolis, March 31.—William C. Baxter has begun an action in the district court against Jerry Coughlin, Michael Nash, John P. Rea, Frank W. Shaw, James H. Bishop, Joseph Scallen, Thomas E. Bishop and John E. Gould, which shows that the depositors of the late lamented Irish-American bank are unforgiving, and propose to push every possible action against every man who had a hand, directly or indirectly, in the failure of the bank, without regard to any other action or circumstance.

In the action just filed, in which Geo. R. Robinson is the attorney, it is alleged that the defendants named were the duly acting and qualified directors of the Irish-American bank, with full and actual knowledge of the working affairs of the bank from the time it was a losing institution, and knew of every deal made. It is specifically alleged that the defendants, with full knowledge of the insolvency of the bank, and with intent to cheat and defraud the plaintiff and others doing business with the bank, falsely pretended that the bank was solvent, and kept the bank open with full knowledge of its insolvency.

The worst of the action is that Baxter has attached the property of the defendants and it is tied up awaiting the outcome of the suit.

FRANCE IS ACTIVE.

She Has Begun to Brighten Up Her Navy for Active Service.

Toulon, March 31.—There are signs at the dock yards and arsenals of preparations for grave events. Orders have been received to prepare a number of warships for active service; stores and ammunition are being overhauled and sent on board the vessels to be prepared for commission, and all naval officers on furlough have been telegraphed to rejoin their ships immediately. Those measures, however, are believed to be more of a precautionary nature than as indicating the probability of an outbreak of hostilities. The French Mediterranean squadron, however, is to be strengthened, and the second-class cruiser Cecile, 5,766 tons, having a speed of 19 knots, has sailed on a special mission to the African coast.

PROBABLY there is nothing that interests land owners more at this time of year than fencing. They want to secure the very best article they can for the purpose they desire to use it, and at the cheapest price going. While this is good business, price should not take the place of quality. In building a smooth wire fence you do not build it for temporary use but expect it to last for years, and to get this kind of an article it requires a certain amount of good material to make it.

The De Kalb Fence Co., of De Kalb, Illinois, has the largest and most complete line of smooth wire fencing of any plant in the country. They desire particularly to call your attention to their goods. Write them for a catalogue, which they will mail you free. No line of goods has grown so rapidly in demand or given such general satisfaction as the fencing manufactured by this company. Their steel web picket fence for lawn and yard purposes; their cabled field and hog fence for farm use; their cabled poultry, garden and rabbit fence are all they claim for them. You will hardly do yourself justice if you do not thoroughly investigate their lines before placing your order.

WITH gladdest sound
the world around
To-day are heard the Easter songs;
For now the tomb is freed from gloom,
"Not here, but risen," sing the throngs.

We listen back along the track
That reaches far to olden time,
And there is heard the wondrous word,
"Not here, but risen" to life sublime.

'Twas Jesus said: "He is not dead,"
"They rise." Amid the morning gray
Of that dark hour his word had power;
"Not here, but risen," they quickly say.

It was not sung; no bell was rung:
A few were all that heard the voice;
But forth they sped, the tidings spread,
And made the weeping ones rejoice.

Beyond that band from land to land
That sacred message urged its way;
It knows no bound—the world around
The Easter songs are heard to-day.

Then onward go till all men know
Their power to take from death its gloom;
Nor stay their flight till men shall write
"Not here, but risen" on every tomb.

THE EASTER MORN.

All hail the gladsome Easter morn,
For which the springtime's flowers are born;
Earth wears her gayest robes to-day,
And casts her Lenten garb away.
Ring out! ring clear!
Ring far and near,
Oh, bells in steeples high!
Ring in the dawn
Of Easter morn,
Beneath the springtime sky!

Bloom, lilies, on your slender stems,
To crown the day like diadems,
And, lifting up your petals white,
Make Easter altars glad and bright,
While ring so clear,
From far and near,
The bells in steeples high,
And glad hearts raise
Their songs of praise
Beneath a springtime's sky.
—Mary D. Brine, in Golden Days.

THE COMMANDER'S EASTER.

ALL Akenside was stirred by the news that the commander would be home for Easter. To the younger generation he was a hero, perhaps all the more so on account of his long absence. Then he was a naval officer, and he had had a romance, which keenly interested the young people especially.

He had never visited our little town since he had left it that memorable day after his unfortunate marriage. Rumors of this and that had reached the ears of the good folk of Akenside, but it was from an intimate friend of Barbara Lippincott that I heard the story.

The commander—King West—was early left alone in the world, and made his home during holiday times at the Lippincotts', who were old friends of his mother. He was at college with Ned Lippincott, and then was suddenly seized with the fever to be a sailor. An influential friend of his father's gained him the appointment; he passed the requisite examination, and entered the Naval academy. He had graduated, and was about to enter upon his new duties, when his health suddenly failed. It was a not uncommon story of a fine physique and perfect health ruined by persistent disregard of all hygienic rules. He came to the only home he had known for years, as everyone thought, to die. He did not give up without a desperate struggle. He consulted the best physicians, who all agreed that his case was hopeless. Mrs. Lippincott having died within the year, Barbara, the only daughter, his lifelong playmate and friend, was his untiring nurse. It was his only consolation. She was so sympathetic, so earnest, so beautiful! King lay there one day watching the pretty figure in the perfectly-fitting mourning dress, which brought out with startling clearness the golden hair, deep blue eyes and fair skin of Barbara Lippincott.

"Bab, come here, will you?" he asked. Something new in his tone made the girl look at him apprehensively as she obeyed him. He was lying on the low couch, and she sat on a cushion beside him. The contrast between the strong man so familiar to her and the one she saw now made her voice very tender, as she asked:

"Can I do anything for you, King?"

"Yes, you can—marry me," was the abrupt reply. "I know I'm not much to marry," he went on, in his faint voice. "Bones, chiefly, but it is the desire of my heart to have you bear my name for awhile, and—and—" Here a flush came into the pale face—"and to have you take care of all this money I must leave to some one. It will save me a world of trouble, and you will do far more good than I ever could or would do with it. I know you don't love me, dear, as I do you, but I thought, perhaps, you'd consent; it's for such a little while. Why, I can hardly remember the time I didn't love you. But, darling—" He stopped abruptly, and Barbara, alarmed by his pallor, shocked and overcome by his unexpected confession and request, could only beg him to give her time.

That night she lay awake trying to decide what to do. She longed for her mother as never before. She loved no one else, but the hero of her dreams had always been an unknown, fascinating creature, and King West she knew so well. He was a dear, good fellow, brave and handsome, but she would almost as soon think of marrying Ned as his old and intimate friend. It wrung her womanly heart to think of him so soon to die. What mattered her girlish qualms? As he had said, it would be such a little while, after all, and it would make the dear fellow happier. But there was that money. If only he were poor, her motives would be understood; but—well, what did she care if her own heart was right? And she would give it all away and help everybody, all in his name. And yet, marriage was such a sacred thing. So poor Barbara tossed and turned and reasoned and changed her mind, and the upshot of it all was that there was a very solemn and quiet marriage ceremony, and at its close the pale, sweet-faced bride was Mrs. West.

Mr. Lippincott consented—he loved this adopted son sincerely—and, indeed, he never had refused any request of his idol, Barbara. So the days went on. Happiness seemed to revive King's waning strength for a time, and then he grew slowly worse. Suddenly upon the scene came a most important actor, a college friend of King's, whose friendship was of that ardor almost lover-like in its intensity. He had heard lately of his friend's condition, and had come to urge upon him an Arabian remedy which had been given him by an uncle, whose life had been passed in the Orient. A native, whose life he had saved, had presented it to him.

With no faith, but partly to please his friend, partly because a dying man catches at any straw which will preserve life, King followed the prescription and treatment, and, to everyone's amazement, he improved, and, after many weeks, was restored to his old vigor. Of course, few gave credit to this remedy; few knew of it; but, whatever it was, the young man recovered.

And then to Barbara came the shock of finding that the restored life of her old friend meant bondage to her. Was she a murderess at heart? Oh, no, no! But if she had only stood firm and never yielded to King's entreaties. The very fact that she was bound to him made her turn from him. These conflicting feelings told upon her health and spirits. And then, one day, her husband came in, holding a letter. He went straight to her, and taking her hands in his, said:

"Barbara, don't think that I have been blind. Do you think that I would hold you to your word now? I am ordered to China at once. After a proper absence, you can apply for and obtain a divorce."

Barbara burst into tears as he went on in his considerate, thoughtful plans for her comfort, with never a hint of his own pain.

She had a horror of divorce. Let them be separated for awhile, anyway, she murmured to herself.

King went off on his three years' cruise, then on another to Australia. Mr. Lippincott finally took Barbara abroad. It was then, and while far away in Australia, that King received a fresh stab. A comrade of his, a brother officer, was reading aloud a letter from a correspondent in Naples:

HE WAS LYING ON THE LOW COUCH.

"I am acting a new role at present," he wrote, "chaperoning a wealthy scion of an old English family. And here, what does the fellow do but fall madly in love with a young American widow! To be sure, madame is charming, very modest and beautiful, but, as old Noah used to say: 'Widdies are a desavin' lot,' and Caron Louis' father has far different designs for his son. The widow's name is Mme. West, blonde type. She seems interested in my protege, I must say."

King wrote at once, after his long silence, to Barbara, urging a divorce. He felt that he knew her so well, and could picture her mental distress and scruples against her love for this apparently charming young stranger. King had aged somewhat, and his friends declared he was much less jolly since his long illness. He never spoke of himself, but he knew that all real happiness had vanished for him—the romance of his life was over, and he was often tempted to curse his return to health. But he devoted himself to his loved profession and had risen in it. His love for Barbara was chivalric and constant as any knight's of old; but, above all, he longed for her to be happy, at any sacrifice to himself. He was to return to New York, and Barbara's answer was to be sent there. As the time drew near, he could neither eat nor sleep. He knew it would be the end of all his feeble hopes, and yet till it did come, there was no certainty. How he envied this Caron Louis; he knew his pure, good Barbara had given her love unconsciously and without premeditation, and had fought against it. She was a noble woman, yet how could she help rebelling against a bondage which the one who loved her best in all the world had brought upon her! Slowly the vessel steamed into port—a letter might await him.

He held it in his hand—that well-known, plain chirography—and the strong man felt as weak as a child. With muttered disdain, he tore it open. The words danced before his eyes at first, and then he read:

"I have suspected my feeling for some time, but I wanted no mistake this time. The shock of finding a young boy here really making love to me, under the impression that I was a widow, awakened me to a fresh sense of my compromising position, and also, oh, King, for my love for you! How could I help it—the bravest and most unselfish man in the world? How could I have been so foolish, so heartless, so blind? Can you ever forgive me? May I come back to you and try and make up for these long years of separation? Or are you weaned from me? I shall follow this letter, and if you can take me back, meet me in New York and let us go back to dear old Akenside for our Eastertide. If not, let me find a letter—"

And so it was that our commander did not come to Akenside alone. The boys stood around the door and gateway of our little stone church to see their hero come in—so tall, so commanding. No longer grave, the dark eyes had a subdued gleam of laughter. He saw no one but the slender, graceful figure by his side. They go on into the church. The glad anthem, "Christ is Risen," peals forth from the choir, joyous, triumphant. Barbara West's heart is full. She struggles to control her quivering lips. Such happiness as God has permitted her!

The senior warden rubs his eyes, hardly daring to believe the evidence of his sight, as the gold pieces drop from the hands of these two, as a slight offering of what gold can never express.

They are certainly most happy—our commander and his wife. When the order came for him to go to the Mediterranean, his wife followed him to Italy, and I heard some one say of her: "I never in all my life saw such a radiantly happy wife as Barbara West."—Rhodes Campbell, in N. Y. Ledger.

A KING'S PLEDGE.

Sir George Gray's Influence as a Temperance Reformer.

The extent of the influence of a man in a commanding position in life, who appreciates what the effect of his example may be, and is willing to make use of it, is well illustrated by a true story told in connection with the recent death of the New Zealand Maori king, Tawhiao. At the time when Sir George Grey was governor of New Zealand King Tawhiao came to him with several chiefs, and reported that he had been invited to go to England and that he wished to do so. Sir George was unable to encourage him, for Tawhiao had been an intemperate man, and in England would be likely to bring disgrace upon himself and his people.

It was necessary to speak to the good-hearted, but barbaric monarch in parables; so Sir George said:

"What do you think of a man who in some way causes the death of others?"

"I think he is a bad man," answered Tawhiao.

"If a man causes the death of several men, what would you think of him?"

"I cannot think that any man would be so wicked."

"Well, would even that be as bad as causing the disgrace and destroying the happiness of a whole people, and that one's own nation?"

Tawhiao saw that the questioning was coming around to him, and remained silent. By a few more questions Sir George led him to the point.

"Yes, yes, I know what you mean," said the king, as he began to weep. "But what can be done?"

Sir George drew up a paper pledging Tawhiao and himself to total abstinence from all liquors containing alcohol, for a term of years. Then he himself signed it, and gave it to the king, who followed his example, and made all his chiefs follow it as well.

Tawhiao visited England, and behaved with credit. When Sir George saw him last he was still keeping the pledge, although the period of it had expired.

Sir George did not stop here. Whenever he heard of any Maori chief who was intemperate he went to him and entered into a personal bond to abstain from liquor for a certain period. By the time the bond with one chief had expired, and the chief had become a sober man, Sir George made a similar bond with another. It was, indeed, deemed an honor among the chiefs to sign the pledge with him; and Sir George's influence as a temperance reformer became thus widespread and effective.—Youth's Companion.

Easter Eggs.

There is no country where eggs are used more lavishly than in America, where the president gives the children of Washington the freedom of the white house grounds on Easter Monday, and thousands of them gather there in an egg-rolling contest, which is as democratic a festival as one could well imagine, where black and white, street Arab and aristocrat, play side by side, matching eggs or "picking" them, that is, cracking them together till one shell breaks the other or both are cracked, and they become a mass of crumpled shells, when the egg part is soon scooped out and eaten with much satisfaction. The eggs are all the colors of the rainbow, and are brought in baskets, in pockets, in hampers, and in nets. A great many people in carriages and on foot stop to look on. The custom of rolling eggs down hill is a very old one, and is practiced in many parts of England.—Detroit Free Press.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS.

G. A. R. Encampment.

Gradually the program for the forthcoming national encampment of the G. A. R. at St. Paul is assuming definite shape. The several committees are working industriously in their respective departments and a tolerable accurate outline of the features of the encampment week has been prepared.

Monday, the first day of the encampment, will begin with the reception to the commander-in-chief at the depot and escorting him to headquarters. In the afternoon of the same day Commander-in- Chief Walker will give a reception in the Ryan to old soldiers and citizens.

Tuesday the parade of the naval veterans will take place. The Sons of Veterans will probably march with the naval brigade.

Tuesday afternoon the ladies of the Women's Relief corps and also the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic will take a carriage ride through the city, and in the evening these organizations will give a reception to the officers of the G. A. R.

Wednesday, the day of the great parade of the old soldiers and the naval veterans, will open with a national salute of 44 guns, which will be fired at 5:30 o'clock in the morning.

The convention will open on Thursday, when the governor and mayor will formally welcome the veterans to the city. Throughout the week dog watches, campfires and entertainments of one kind and another will be given.

Gen. Mason is negotiating with the war department for 300 conical wall tents far the accommodation of the 2,000 old soldiers who are to be put under canvas during the encampment, and also for 300 cavalry equipments, such as saddles, bridles, blankets, etc. To this end the general has enlisted the services of Senator Davis, Senator Nelson and Congressman Kiefer.

The Flambeaux.

The members of the Minneapolis Flambeau Club, are preparing to go in a body to St. Louis convention, having been promised good seats by Sergeant-at Arms Tim Byrnes. They will wear their reddest jackets, and carry a high hand at the great political convention. Asa Able is in charge of the arrangements, and he expects to carry with him a whole train load of young men, who will, no doubt, be drafted into service while in St. Louis. The club is said to be one of the best of its kind in the country, and will be an effectual way of advertising the city and state in the South. The boys will charter a train, carrying sleeper and dining cars, and will enjoy all the luxuries that travel affords.

Uphold the Court.

The United States court, in the case of George W. Post, has upheld the Boen amendment to the revised statutes, which provides that all criminal proceedings instituted, arising in the district of Minnesota shall be brought, had and prosecuted in the division of the district in which such offenses were committed. The defendant was indicted eight days subsequently to the passage of the act, at St. Paul, although the offenses were committed at Duluth. Justice Gray decides that, as the witnesses were summoned after the indictment was brought, and no complaint having been filed before the act took effect, he is constrained to reverse the judgment of the Minnesota court.

Burned to Death.

Sciatic Rheumatism and Its Cure.

From the Gazette, Burlington, Iowa.

The story of Mr. Tabor's nearly fatal attack of sciatic rheumatism is familiar to his large circle of acquaintances, but for the benefit of others and those similarly afflicted The Gazette has investigated the matter for publication. Mr. Tabor is Secretary and Treasurer for the Commercial Printing Company, with offices in the Hodge Block and resides at 417 Basset Street, Burlington, Ia. A Gazette man sought an interview with Mr. Tabor at his place of business to-day, and, although he was busily engaged with imperative duties, he talked freely and feelingly on the subject of his recent severe sickness and subsequent wonderful cure.

"Yes," said Mr. Tabor, "I can safely say that I am a well man, that is, my old trouble with rheumatism has entirely disappeared, but I am still taking Pink Pills and will keep on taking them as long as I continue to grow stronger and healthier, as I have been every day since I began to use them. You will not wonder at my profound faith in the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People after you have heard what I have to tell you. About one year ago I was stricken suddenly with sciatic rheumatism and was confined to my bed. It grew worse and rapidly assumed the form of inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered constant and acute pains and all the tortures which that horrible disease is capable of inflicting. At length under the constant care of a local physician I was enabled to return to my work, but only at intervals. Severe attacks would appear regularly in my back and descend into my leg and foot, and threatened to make me a permanent cripple. I tried various remedies for rheumatism, but without any beneficial results. I grew pale, weak and haggard, and my family and friends grew alarmed at my condition.

"About eight weeks ago my mother induced me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and you know the result. Before I had used one box I felt greatly relieved and much stronger. I continued their use and improved rapidly. I have now taken eight boxes and feel like a new man and completely cured, all of which is due to the efficacy of Pink Pills. They are invigorating and thoroughly wholesome, and have helped me in every way."

In reply to inquiries Mr. Henry, the druggist, stated that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were having a large sale, that it was particularly gratifying to him to know that the customers themselves were highly pleased with the benefits they had derived from their use; that many of them stated that the pills were the only medium that had done them any good; that they not only gave quick relief but permanent benefit. That the pills do sell and that the pills do cure is a certainty.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes only at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

AN UNDERGROUND CITY.

Russians Discover a Town Hid in the Bowels of the Earth.

The Russians have made a singular discovery in Central Asia. In Turkestan, on the right bank of the Amou Daria, is a chain of rocky hills near the Bokharan town of Karki, and a number of large caves, which upon examination were found to lead to an underground city, built apparently long before the Christian era. In Popular Science News we find the following description of this singular city:

According to effigies, inscriptions and designs upon the gold and silver money unearthed from among the ruins, the existence of the town dates back to some two centuries before the birth of Christ.

The underground Bokharan city is a little over a mile long, and is composed of an enormous labyrinth of corridors, streets and squares, surrounded by houses and other buildings two or three stories high. The edifices contain all kinds of domestic utensils, pots, urns, vases and the like. In some of the streets falls of earth and rock have obstructed the passages, but generally the visitor can walk about without so much as lowering his head.

The high degree of civilization attained by the inhabitants of the city is shown by the fact that they built in several stories, by the symmetry of the streets and squares, and by the beauty of the baked clay and metal utensils, and of the ornaments and coins which have been found.

It is supposed that long centuries ago this city, so carefully concealed in the bowels of the earth, provided an entire population with a refuge from the incursions of nomadic savages and robbers.

The Chambermaid's Tips.

A pleasing story is told by the crown prince of Germany, who, with his brother, was recently with their tutor at the hotel of the Chutes du Rhin. When the tutor paid the bill he offered a money present to the chambermaid, who, however, refused the gift, pointing to a notice that tips were forbidden. The tutor explained the situation to the eldest pupil, who thereupon went out with his brother and bought a very pretty brooch. This he gave to the maid, saying that, "as it was not money, she could not refuse it." As the young princes were staying at the hotel incognito the maid did not know that the donor of the brooch will probably be emperor of Germany some day.

The Red Lake Indian Reservation Opens May 1st.

This valuable tract of land just east of the Red River Valley will be thrown open to settlement May 1st. It is reached from Fosston, McIntosh and Thief River Falls, towns on the Great Northern railway, and all close to the reservation. The United States Land Office is at Crookston, and the towns named are on branch lines running from that place. Persons who intend to locate can stop off there and visit the land office before going to the reservation. By getting tickets via Crookston and the Great Northern railway to any one of the three towns named, the prospector will be near the land, concerning which address F. I. Whitney, G. P. & T. Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

DELANO DIARY

—Tomorrow, Saturday, April 6, is Delano Fair Day.

—Easter Sunday comes early this year, next Sunday is the time.

—The street commissioner and force had lively business cleaning crossings this week.

—Our electric street lights were quite conspicuous for their absence the past few nights.

—Prof. Freeman makes good time as the average to his school and return with Shank's mares.

—The bicycle brigade is hibernating. The wheel has suddenly lapsed into innocuous desuetude.

—The salaries of the Village Treasurer and Recorder were cut down and the balance of the force raised.

—March went out like a lamb. At least the largest fall of downy snow of the season fell on the last day.

—The boys were so badly April fooled by the big snow storm that even the old "See that flock of geese" was not attempted.

—Rain began to fall Friday afternoon and the ground was quite well soaked by Saturday morning. Lightning was seen a few times Friday evening.

—Today is Good Friday, and some of our school people wanted to have a holiday; but the authorities decided otherwise; consequently school keeps today.

—Preparations should be made to observe anual Arbor Day in an appropriate manner. Trees planted now will be a pleasure to those who come after us, as well as to ourselves.

—Rev. J. L. Farber preached one of his interesting sermons on Sunday evening to a splendid audience. He took for his text, Rom. x. 17. "So then faith comes by hearing and hearing by the word of God.

—Thunder and lightning accompanied the heavy fall of snow the last day of march. The thermometer this morning was very near zero, and the best sleighing of the season is now being made use of by the traveling public.

—A council meeting was held last Monday at which a new, long ordinance was drawn and promptly published in the Eagle. Why dont the new council appoint a village printer as is their duty or advertise for bids as they do in some other matters.

—Presiding Elder Chaffee is expected to hold Quarterly Meeting services at the M. E. Church, on Sunday evening, April 7. All are envited to attend. Quarterly Conference will be held at the church at 2 P. M. on Saturday, and official members are especially requested to be present. The Elder is to be at Rockford Sunday morning.

—Our new city council has succeeded in putting itself on record as a salary grabbing body. Councilmen's salaries have been raised to $20. each and the president's to $25. The law must have been changed if that will go; even though the present officers are not to receive the raise. Why, they could as easily made it ten times as much.

—If you expect to take advantage of excursion rates to the bicycle show in Minneapolis buy your tickets not earlier than April 3d nor later than the 9th and take a certificate from the selling agent which, when stamped at the manager's office at the bicycle show, will enable you to return home for one third regular rate. The cycle show bids fair to be a grand success.

—It is claimed, by those in a position know, that the questions sent out for examinations in grammar and other studies, by the State board were too hard for the pupils. That they covered ground not gone over in ordinary schools. From the reported proportion of failures to pass, throughout the state, there must be something in this. Such discrepencies ought not to occur. The text books and the scholars should go deeper, or the Professors and the questions should be less profound.

—The J. H. Oakes Co. Swiss Bell Ringers entertainment in the City Hall, Friday evening was very well attended considering the inclemency of the weather. The musical glasses for which Mr. Oakes said he had been offered $500, and the collection of which he said had taken him fifteen years, was quite a novel feature; the bell ringing was good. Nat Blossom kept up his end of the business very well. Should they come this way soon again a larger audience would doubtless greet them if the weather should be favorable.

—We have received a beautiful, illustrated catalogue from The Jewell Nursery Co., of Lake City, Minnesota, the oldest and largest nursery in the Northwest. Their catalogue is very complete, containing full descriptions, instructions for planting, pruning; and care of stock. They also enclose a list of collections of flowers and bedding plants that are cheap enough to be in the reach of every one. They also grow Seed Corn and Seed Potatoes, comprising the latest and best varieties. Their references are A No. 1. Read their ad. in another column and mention this paper when writing them.

WOMAN'S COLUMN.

BY WRIGHT COUNTY W. C. T. U.

News, Here and There.

There has been lately presented to Congress a petition for prohibition in the District of Columbia signed by the pastors and official members of nearly all the churches in the District. This petition was secured by the work and under the management of Mrs. Clinton Smith, and is called "The voice of the churches." It is representative of the best elements of the District and is deserving of far more consideration than it is likely to receive at the hands of our law-makers. Besides this there are on file similar petitions representing about ninety thousand inhabitants. During the last year the expenses District of Columbia on account of police and police court, charities and corrections and contingent expenses exceeded by $854,754 07 the amount received from liquor licenses which was $299,-772.22. As it is the universal testimony of those most competent to judge, that by far the largest proportion of this expense is made necessary by the liquor traffic and its evil consequences, it would seem to be the duty of statesmen to abolish a business which is productive of so much unnecessary evil and expense.

There is also a movement on foot to secure an appropriation for an inebriate asylum. If the liquor traffic, which is the cause of inebriety, was removed the effect would soon cease, and the money which it is now proposed to expend for an asylum could be used to provide the much needed additional public school facilities in the capital city of this great American Republic.

Says our National Corresponding Secretary: "In a clipping from a daily paper I note a Washington dispatch in which Senator Hill speaks of the hundreds of petitions he is receiving from all parts of the country as to the prohibition of the sale of beer at Ellis Island, which petitions, as we all know are due to the energetic efforts of our own Mrs. Grubb. There is hardly a paper we can take up anywhere which does not contain one or more items concerning our work, and whether it be reported favorably or unfavorably, it must be true that the very beginning of it before the people is, in itself, a matter of education.

* * *

The Raines liquor bill passed by the Assembly of New York March 12th is a measure to put the entire liquor traffic and interests under state control. It abolishes all local excise boards and creates a state commissioner at a salary of $5,000, a deputy at $4,000, $3,000 and $2,000, and sixty inspectors-at-large at $1,200 each and expenses. The commissioner's bureau is located at Albany. The bill raises the license rates in New York city to $800, in Brooklyn to $650, and in smaller cities to $500. The present license rate in New York for saloons is $250, and the granting of licenses is at the option of the municipal excise commissioners.

In Kansas it looks as though the liquor element of the entire country has concentrated its forces to bring about re-submission and of course defeat prohibition. The organized effort is made by the Order of the Mystic Brotherhood which claims to control 35000 votes in the state. Thursday March 12th. police department passed from the control of the Prohibitionists into the hands of the Resubmissionists. Last week Governor Morrill removed from the police board L. D. Lieurance, the Prohibitionist whose radicalism has enforced Prohibition in Wichita for the past eight months, and tendered his place to Oscar Z. Smith, a Liberal Republican. (in favor of re submission.)

Want of space forbids mention of scores of exciting battles in various localities over this vexed question which will not down. Whether we as individuals are doing anything to enlighten or to inspire others to espouse the cause of right or not the fact remains the liquor question is getting before the people, it is becoming an issue and it must be settled right, though it may take years of agitation and education.

A RAINY DAY.

Rain- rain, rain.
Rattling on the window pane,
Baby's rosy lips a-pout,
'Cause she can't go running out.
Baby's sky-blue eyes o'erflow—
Showers of tears express her woe;
Mother tries her every wile—
Stories cannot bring back a smile
To the lips she loves so well;
Dollies, toys, fail to dispel
The dark clouds in Baby's skies,
"Baby, listen! mamma cries,
"Something chatters cheep, cheep, cheep?
To the window slyly creep!"
'Tis a flock of birdies gray
Laughing at the rainy day.
Baby looks and looks again.
Pouts soon vanish—it is plain
Baby's storm is almost done.
There's a dimple—oh, what fun!
As the birdies cheep and play
Baby's storm-clouds flee away,
Till her sky is cleared up quite
When she crows and laughs outright
At the antics queer and gay
Of that flock of birdies gray.

THE Judge of the District Court at St. Paul decided this week that the Fourth Insane Hospital should go to Anoka rather than to Hastings. Delano's turn should be next. The Delano site surely, from all accounts, would be better and accommodate many people who will have to change cars to go to either of the present locations.

McGary Still at It.

EDITOR BUFFALO GAZETTE. -With war in Cuba, Armenia, South Africa, just out of a big snow storm in Minnesota, I would say I feel comfortably well under the surrounding circumstances. I would say I believe we have learned to spell William McKinley correctly, for we have read it about a thousand times or more during the last two weeks. If McKinley is not elected President it will be too bad to have all this superfluous waste of his name for nothing. No doubt but Mr. McKinley as a man is all right; but the leaders, or perhaps it would be more proper to say, the moneyed aristocracy of the two old parties have a policy, which a man who wants the Presidency or any other big office must subscribe to, or he stands no show of an election or of a nomination. This kind of maneuvering has been going on for a good many years and I am thankful to say that a good many people are catching on. I for one am getting my eyes open little by little. I voted for Grover Cleveland in good faith, but it seems that he has changed, face about, has gone after strange Gods and is worshiping idols. Now if money is the only thing essential to salvation then Grover and a lot more of them fellows down at Washington and around Wall street are safe. This may all look well on the outside but there is a day coming when their hides will not be worth the tanning.

The golden calf that the children of Israel made, Moses ground into powder strewed it upon the waters, and made them drink it, and these fellows who are crying gold, all the time, will finally have to swallow the God that they have made with their own hands.

It is time the people of this country had sat down on partisan politics and come together like men, and say what must be done for the good of the country and the people. When will the people learn that the men who are looking for office and the emoluments thereof, aided and abetted by money kings, bond holders and the hooked nose, two faced, banking Jews of Wall street are working only for policy?

The people of this country love humbuggery, they roll it as a sweet morsel under their tongue. I believe that it is generally understood that this country belongs to the people, (anyway they have always fought for it, from the revolution down to the present time) and if they are getting no returns out of their investment is it not their duty to have an investigation? I say it is their right. But too many people content themselves that every day will provide for itself, and there is no cause for complaint.

Babylon was the first and richest monarchial government on earth (they had gold in great profusion), and yet while Belshazzar was feasting with his thousand lords, King Cyrus turned the channel of the Euphrates and with his army went through and took the city and in that night was Belshazzar slain, and so by wicked hands this government may share the same fate.

The republicans expect to build a long auditorium on the river Nile of the western hemisphere just for the nominating of a President, it is to hold 14,000 people more or less and its dimensions will be beyond anything in modern history built for that purpose. This may be all right from a political stand point but the money would do more good if given to the poor. Then we suppose the democrats will build one at modern Ezion-geber (Chicago) and to us it seems like a great waste of money.

Times are hard but there is a certain class that always have money enough to run a political campaign. Now we farmers (or at least my self for one) do not expect to be directly benefited by Republican or Democratism, for the intention of the moneyed class is to just let the farmer and laboring man live and no more.

"But we will weather the blast
And land at last
Just on the evergreen shore,
Where all our trials will then be past
And gold bugs will come never more.

J. H. MCGARY.

Bimetallism.

God in his infinite wisdom made man a biped and pronounced him perfect; he made his brain into two distinct parts; his lungs were made in two distinct chambers; his heart was made with double valves; and, so that man could maintain a perfect ballance, he was made with two hands and two feet. Now, our Fore fathers in their infinite wisdom created the Constitution which gives us two Presidents; two departments of the Judicary, civil and criminal; two departments of the Legislature, House and Senate; two Senators from each state in the Union We have the two great chanels of commerce, rail and water. We have the two systems of taxation, direct and indirect; we have the earth with its two poles; and we have the long established precedent that a President may have two terms and no more.

Now since God in his infinite wisdom has made man in two distinct parts, for a better balance, and that when one side would be injured, the other might act, and that he has made the earth in two equal parts, that one part might balance the other. So it was that our Forefathers in their infinite will and wisdom planned that we should have the two standard metals, silver and gold, on which to base our currency system, the one to balance the other and give us honest bimetallism.

History repeats itself. In 1696 England was laboring under a greater trouble from her currency system than we are. The silver shilling had been clipped by counterfiters until it was not worth half its face. Gold was of course hoarded and the gold guinea was enhanced from 21 shillings to 30 shillings.

Parliament legislated, the government staggered, and the people cursed and muttered, until Locke in his wisdom requested that parliament pass a law, paying face value for all clipped money, also condemn it after a certain period, and put a tax on windows to meet the expense, amounting to many millions of dollars; prosperity returned.

In my opinion there is a general fictitious idea of money. In an individual's note it is not the paper that represents value, it is his promise to pay and his ability to pay which represents the value, the note a mere witness.

Money is a wonderful agent in the exchange of values and enters into business in no other way. So with a Government note or stamp upon coin; it is not the note or stamp which gives it value; it is the promise and ability of the Government to pay, which represents the value.

I repeat that there is a rudder and that there is a rock.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 21, 1896

The party flag has been hoisted over democratic headquarters, in Washington, and the work of the campaign begun. An entire building has been secured, on Fifteenth Street, just above Pennsylvania avenue. It will be occupied as headquarters for the Democratic Congressional Committee, and the National Association of Democratic Clubs, the two having the same secretary Mr. Lawrence Gardner. There will also be room in the building for the National committee, should it desire to establish in Washington either a branch or its principal headquarters. Senator Faulkner, the chairman of the Congressional committee, and all the other members are preparing to make a very determined effort to overthrow the present enormous republican majority in the House, and they are perfectly satisfied that there is much more than a fighting chance for success. A careful study of the returns of the '94 elections in all the Congressional districts shows an unusually large number of districts carried by very small majorities by the republicans, and a comparison of the votes in the same districts for '92 will show that this result was brought about in many of them simply by democrats remaining at home. There is very little doubt that a majority of the next House will be democratic, if the full democratic vote can be got out. The Congressional committee will make special efforts in that line, in districts which are naturally democratic. The failure of the republicans of the present House to keep the promises they made on the stump will, it is expected, help the democrats in all districts where the class of voters who never permanently ally themselves with either party hold the balance of power. Many of that class voted with the republicans in '94, who may be induced to vote for a democrat this year.

Senator Vilas, who was President Cleveland's first Postmaters General, is specially well qualified to speak on the subject of government mail subsides. He made the Senate amendment to the Post office appropriation bill, giving $80,000 additional compensation to the Oceanic Steamship company for carrying the mails from San Francisco to Hawaii and other points, the text for some interisting remarks, in which he said that the mail subsidy system, which he opposed when he was Postmaster General, had entirely failed to give a more expeditious or better mail service. The supporters of the subsidy defended the amendment on the ground that it was made necessary by the competing subsidized Canadian line of Pacific Steamers.

There is rather a nasty row among the republican members of the House committee on Public Buildings and Grounds over the old question of a site for a new Government Printing Office. While no open charge has been made, it was stated by Representative White of Ill., that Chairman Milliken had railroaded a bill through the committee which provides for the purchase of a site at a price twice as high as a site just as good could be bought for. On the other hand Chairman Milliken intimates that Mr. White is over friendly to those who are interested in the much talked about Mahone site, which has figured somewhat disreputably in this matter for some years. That much is publicly said. What is privately said is of such a nature that it would not be safe to print unless you had indisputable legal proof to back it up with.

According to the opinion of Mr. Henry E. Queen, a prominent Kentuckian now in Washington, Secretary Carlisle will be the democratic candidate for President. Mr. Queen says of Mr. Carlisle as a candidate: "He would carry Kentucky by at least 40,000 majority, and he would not fail of success in a single southern state. To the Eastern and Middle States democrats he would be particularly acceptable. As far as Kentucky is concerned, there is an end of party dissensions, and hence forth the Blue Grass democrats will be found working in harmony, and the electoral vote of the state will be cast for nominee, whoever he may be."

There will be no political reorganization of the employes of the Senate. This was definitely setteled at a conference of representatives of the republican and democratic Senators, and was brought about because the republicans did not want to agree to the demands made by the populists for voting with them to elect the Secretary and Sergeant-at-Arms nominated by them early in the session, nor the democrats to make a deal with the populists to vote against them. Under the new arrangement the democratic Secretary and Seageant-at-Arms will be retained, and each Senator regardless of politics, will be given his pro rata share of the minor positions.

Cheap Dollars.

The gold standard men say that they are opposed to "cheap" silver dollars Is that true? Let's see! In the next breath they tell us that they are in favor of using all the silver possible as subsidiary money—that is in sums not exceeding ten dollars. This means that they favor here, as in England, two kinds of money, gold for the money loaner and the rich, and silver for the laboring poor, the farmers, merchants, and small dealers. In other words, they force the masses to take and use silver (worth, as they say, only 50 cents on the dollar) while the poor man who owes a debt of over ten dollars must purchase gold to pay it with. Ah! but they say, "silver is redeemable in gold." And this is the falsehood in which they always bring up, and it is a MONSTROUS LIE. It isn't true now never was true, and NEVER WILL BE TRUE. If it were true, the government treasury could be bankrupted every day in the year. Of course the little echoes of the great monopoly organs of this country do not know enough about the laws of the land to know that their utterances are entirely false and misleading, but that does not excuse the dammage which results from the falsehoods which they perhaps unwittingly circulate. The HERALD will give $100.00 to any man who will produce any law or statue of the United States making silver coin redeemable in gold coin. Here is a chance for any or all of the gold organs.—Waseca Herald.

Boodle Business.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—In last week's issue you seem to criticise the doings of Senator Davis and Congressman Towne in getting some boodle for the Sixth Congressional District in the shape of appropriations for a public building at St. Cloud and at Brainerd. Now Mr. Editor aint you off your base, or what do you consider to be the duties of a Congressman for this the land of the free and the home of the brave? Is it, or has it been any thing else for years than to get a slice of the boodle? Has not the work of a public officer been judged by the boodle he got for his so called constituents.

We elect County Commissioners and judge their efficiency by the boodle they get for their districts. We elect men to the Legislature and when they have influence enough to get, for their districts a big share of the public plunder we call them O. K.; and still more so Congressman. Yes, Mr. Editor, that is what they are there for. Just look into a Republican paper. We all know what two years ago they promised in case they would get into power. We all know what, so far they have accomplished; nothing. Yes, even worse than nothing. For have they not tried to raise a stink with all the world; just to divert the attention of the people from their home misery, as they call it. And I say again, look into a republican paper, and do you find any fault finding with this Congress? Not much. But they promise again what they will do next year; and they no doubt, will find the poor dupes ready to believe on and again.

But when I said before this Congress has done nothing, I under estimated its action. It passed in one hour 100 private pension bills; the Chairman of the Pension Committee, however, pronounced this a democratic lie, and he says: we passed only 76 bills in 2½ hours. See?

Now Mr. Editor let the fat frying process go on. After us comes the deluge. VERITAS.

Congress hasn't fulfilled its boast to keep Groyer Cleveland's pen busy veto ing bills, as was bragged of at the opening of the session. Four months have passed away and the amount of work done by our lawmakers would not fill a very big book. Not the first thing has been done aside from mere routine work.—Litchfield Independent.

The horse is a man's animal. He is no more afraid of bullets than the horse-attacking editor is afraid of thistles. He is the fit associate of heroes. Can you see Napoleon or Alexander riding to victory on a safety? No. The horse is for heroes and the safety for horse-attacking editors. Bicycles and flying machines may come and carry the horse-fearing editor far and safely, but they will not destroy the horse. Tens of thousands of years before horse fearing editors were born, nature was hard at work developing the horse from a small five-toed thing as big as a fox. She has produced today the finest animal she has ever produced, and no pneumatic-tired arrangement, however valuable to the poor, timid, aged or obese editor, can take his place. He is first now and forever, in the heart of normal, healthy man. The Horseman.

Washington, April 3.—The post office appropriation bill served to bring out some sharp discussion in the senate yesterday on the propriety of abolishing country post offices and absorbing them as branches of city offices. Booth-Tucker, the new commander of the Salvation army, the 7th declared his intention of naturalization before the Supreme court in New York city.

Edward Jordan, a miser, died in the hospital at Helena, Mont., the 7th, from continued want and exposure. He leaves property worth $100,000. For years he has refused to spend money for proper nourishment of his body.

Snow fell to the depth of three inches throughout New York state the 7th.

At the municipal election in Chicago the 7th, the republicans elected 20 aldermen and the democrats 13, and two independents were chosen. Strict party lines were not drawn in many of the precincts.

In the Olympian games at Athens, Greece, the 7th, the American contestants won four first prizes. Cortes, of Boston, won the heat in the hurdle race; Clark, of Boston, the broad jump; Burk, of Boston, the third heat of the running race, and Garret, of Princeton, won the shot put.

GEN. HARRISON WEDS.

Mrs. Dimmick Becomes the Bride of the Ex-President.

The Ceremony Was a Very Simple One—Nearly His Entire Cabinet Attended — Other Guests Were Few.

New York, April 7.—The long-talked-of marriage of ex-President Benjamin Harrison and Mrs. Mary Scott Lord Dimmick took place at five o'clock p. m. on Monday at St. Thomas' church, the rector of which, Rev. J. Wesley Thomas, performed the ceremony, which was most simple in character.

Gen. Benjamin F. Tracy, formerly secretary of the navy, was Gen. Harrison's best man. Mrs. Dimmick had no bridesmaids, but was escorted up the aisle by her brother-in-law, Lieut. John F. Parker. The ceremony was witnessed by only 36 guests, including a representative of the press. The members of Gen. Harrison's cabinet were invited with their wives, and were present with the exception of ex-Postmaster General Wanamaker, ex-Secretary of the Treasury Charles Foster, and ex-Secretary of the Interior John W. Noble, who were unavoidably prevented from attending.

The Ceremony.

It was just five o'clock when Gen. Harrison and Gen. Benjamin F. Tracy, his best man, entered a carriage at the Fifth Avenue hotel and started for the church, where they arrived at 5:20 o'clock. They entered through the rector's residence on Fifty-third street and went directly to the vestry, where they awaited the arrival of the bride. Gen. Harrison wore a long frock coat, dark trousers and white gloves.

At 5:05 o'clock Mrs. Dimmick and her brother-in-law, Lieut. John F. Parker, U. S. N., were driven from their residence, No. 40 East Thirty-eighth street, and reached the church at 5:18 o'clock. They entered by the main door on Fifth avenue and went direct to the tower room to the left of the vestibule, where wraps and coats were discarded. It was 5:32 o'clock when the two large doors leading to the center aisle were thrown aside, and the ushers, side by side, stood in the passageway. At the same moment Dr. J. Wesley Brown, the officiating clergyman, robed in a white cassock, appeared from the vestry, followed by the sexton. The reverend doctor passed in behind the sanctuary rail, the attendant closing the gates after him. Dr. Brown knelt in prayer a few moments and then the ever-popular strains of "Lohengrin" burst forth and reechoed back from the empty walls with double volume.

Then the door leading to the vestry on the left of the altar opened and the silvery locks of Gens. Harrison and Tracy were seen. The bride appeared and fell in behind the ushers. At the same moment the minister nodded his head, signaling the groom to step forward. Gen. Harrison and his best man at once came forward and stood upon the top chancel step. Immediately the bridal procession was begun. The two ushers walked well forward and took a position on the second chancel step.

As the bridal party approached the chancel Gen. Harrison came down the steps to the floor to receive his bride. With a frank movement she extended her right hand, which the groom clasped in his left. Then the couple marched up the step to the center of the altar, where they knelt a moment in prayer. Gen. Tracy and Lieut. Parker followed, the former standing to the right of the groom and the lieutenant to the left of the bride. It was a pretty picture, beautiful in its simplicity. The reading of the Protestant Episcopal ceremony was at once begun. Both faced the minister and listened intently to his words. When the usual question was propounded to the groom: "Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife," etc., the general responded in subdued, almost inaudible tones. When the same question was put to the bride she answered in a clear, musical voice.

The final words that made Gen. Harrison and Mrs. Dimmick one were pronounced at 17 minutes to six o'clock. Dr. Brown shook hands with both and offered his warm congratulations. The ex-president then extended his right arm to his newly-made bride, and to the soft strains of the "Tannhausers Wedding March" they filed down the center aisle. The party at once left the church and entered carriages in waiting.

Refuses to Vacate.

Washington, April 2.—The interior department authorities, upon receipt of a telegram from Secretary of State Bruce, of Arizona, that Gov. Hughes refused to vacate his office, on Wednesday sent telegrams to both gentlemen. That to Mr. Hughes again notifies him of his removal, and informs him that the president directs that his office be at once turned over to Secretary Bruce. The dispatch to Mr. Bruce directs him to take possession of the office as acting governor.

FIFTEEN VICTIMS.

Kentucky Cloudburst More Disastrous Than at First Supposed.

Booneville, Ky., April 4.—The cloudburst on Little Sexton and Buffalo creeks did more damage than at first reported. Instead of four there were certainly 15 persons who lost their lives, and possibly more. Sexton creek rises near Burning Springs and is one of the feeders of the south fork of the Kentucky river. It flows in some places through deep gorges in the rocks. Through these gorges the stream rushes, when in flood tide, with the speed of a race horse, and, striking the bottom lands below, spreads out with wonderful rapidity.

People little thought that the little brook would rise so rapidly or was capable of gathering such a volume of water. The cloudburst occurred up in the gorges. The water gathered in a moment and the wild flood poured down in a solid wall, carrying death and destruction in its path. On Sexton creek and its tributaries five were drowned. They are: Capt. J. S. J. Bull, Mrs. Wade Marders and child, two unknown. Capt. Bull was military instructor at Jackson institute.

Buffalo creek is even more crooked and tortuous than Little Sexton, and in its torrent after the burst ten people are believed to have lost their lives. A great many logs were hurled down with the tide, and these speedily knocked the cabins and outbuildings to pieces. The dead on Buffalo creek are: Mrs. George Gepson and three children, Will Burns' two children, Miss Mary Garrett, two unknown and Mrs. John Crane.

A Manchester dispatch says that Goose creek has been higher than ever before known, showing that the rain was general throughout Owsley county. Over 100 farmers lost their houses and barns. Meat houses and all their feed being destroyed, it will be impossible for them to raise any crops this year. The valleys in this section are usually fertile and produce fine crops of corn and wheat. The people of this section have commenced to investigate the extent of the ruins and to make up a fund for the suffering inhabitants. The farms which the people deserted when they took to the mountains are barren, no signs of improvements being left.

SPRING APPROACHES.

With It Improvement in Business Has Begun.

New York, April 4.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade say:

"The improvement expected with spring weather begins, though in some branches of business scarcely visible. As consumers make spring purchases they must lessen stock and compel less buying. The stocks taken in advance of consumers' demands last summer have been distributed far more slowly than was expected, but months of waiting have helped to lessen the load which it is hoped spring buying will clear away. Apprehensions of foreign or financial difficulties have hindered, but are now scarcely felt. Gold exports are rumored, but at this season are so far natural that they have no such power to cause alarm as they had in winter. The gigantic steel combination is expected to have a great influence in sustaining markets and stimulating confidence, and though such operations often miss the success they seek, they rarely fail to kindle speculative buying for a time.

"Woolen manufacture does not gain in orders, and a large part of the machinery is stopped. Prices of wool have fallen 2½ per cent. Cotton mills still pile up goods in advance of orders, as reductions in prices have failed as yet to stimulate buying. Speculation in products has been tame. Wheat has slightly advanced, and if later reports of injury from extensive frosts and storms prove correct, will advance more, though western receipts continue nearly 50 per cent. larger than last year. Corn exports are large and receipts also heavy, but pork has declined 75 cents per barrel. Speculation in stocks has not been active, though railroads average nearly one dollar per share higher than last week. The regular quarterly statement of failures shows 4,031 with liabilities of $57,425,135, against 3,802 last year, with liabilities of $47,813,683."

APPEAL FOR ARBITRATION.

Three Famous Catholic Cardinals Present a Plan to Prevent War.

Baltimore, Md., April 6.—Cardinal Gibbons on Sunday gave out an appeal for a permanent arbitration board, with full powers, to prevent war among the nations, signed by himself, Michael Cardinal Logue, Archbishop of Armagh, and Herbert Cardinal Vaughan, Archbishop of Westminster. The document is the result of a correspondence on the subject between Cardinal Gibbons and his colleagues, and is issued on Easter Sunday because of the appropriateness of the day. A synopsis of the document follows:

The cardinals, in the name of the Prince of Peace and of the Catholic church, invite all to cooperate in the formation of a public opinion which shall demand the establishment of a permanent tribunal of arbitration as a rational substitute among the English-speaking races for a resort to the bloody arbitrament of war. They recall that such a court existed for centuries when the nations of Christendom were united in one faith, and suggest a tribunal composed of trusted representatives of each sovereign nation, with power to nominate judges and umpires, according to the nature of the differences that arise. Such an international court of arbitration, they say, would form a second line of defense, to be called into requisition only after the ordinary resources of diplomacy had been exhausted. It would at least postpone the outbreak of hostilities until reason and common sense had formally pronounced their last word. They appeal for a united effort to press this matter upon their respective governments.

ACCUSED OF FRAUD.

Charges Against Methodis Book Concern Revived.

Baltimore, April 7.—Rev. John Lanahan startled the Methodist preachers Monday when, in their meeting, he announced that within a few days he would publish in a permanent form the "Era of Fraud" in the Methodist Book Concern in New York, of which he was at one time an agent. Dr. Lanahan declared fraud is perpetrated in the manufacturing departments. He said that three large oil companies were secretly organized and carried on by the senior agent at New York, with the cooperation of other employes of the concern, without the knowledge of the Methodist church. The capital stock of the companies, he said, aggregated more than $1,000,000.

Dr. Lanahan said that he will furnish proof that for more than 12 years every financial report made to the church by the New York management was false from $20,000 to $100,000; that the reports were false as to the amount of cash in the Shoe and Leather bank, where the official account was kept, because the senior agent kept large amounts of the concern's money in his personal account and used it to speculate in stocks in Wall street; that large sums of money sent to the concern for church benevolences were used in the same way.

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS.

A Chance for Each County.

The Grand Army encampment committees are at work on a plan of bringing the resources of each county of the state before the crowds who will attend the national encampment next September in St. Paul. The object is to give each county opportunity to build an arch, or some other form of display, along Third street, and on other streets where the crowds of visitors from abroad will congregate. This matter has been brought to the attention of one or two counties, and other will be asked to participate in the movement. It will afford the best possible advertisment for the resources and capabilities of each county, and should be the means of starting an immigration movement that would certainly prove beneficial. Mr. W. J. Footner, of St. Paul, has been chosen by the Grand Army committee to promote county displays, and the officials of any county desiring to participate should apply to him for information, or to J. S. Pinney, general secretary of the G. A. R. committees. If a large number of counties will take hold and make creditable displays in the streets of St. Paul during the encampment, the good effect will be speedy and substantial, while the cost of the displays would be comparatively small for each county. This is a feature of national encampments that will be wholly new and Minnesota should not fail to take hold of it quickly and vigorously.

Look Out for Sharks.

The boom and rush for homes on the Red Lake reservation lands has begun in earnest. Every day witnesses train after train of prairie schooners passing along the several routes leading to the promised land, while the railways are furnishing their quota of home seekers to every available point along the border. One disgusting feature and a detriment which the opening of all public lands has brought about to the honest home seekers, has already manifested its presence at all available points along the border, and this is the hordes of so-called "locators," who stand ready to hang about and besiege every home seeker, claiming to locate any and every one (mostly on paper) at any price and on any portion of the reservation. The greater portion of these "locating sharks," practically speaking, have never been on the lands and know nothing about the conditions or rules governing the opening of these lands. Several parties have already been taken in by these so-called locators, and it would be good policy for homesteaders to see to it that if locators have to be employed proper and competent men are secured.

How They Are Issued.

The people throughout the northwest who are preparing to take advantage of the excurson rates offered over the railroads while the Northwestern Cycle show is in progress at the Exposition building, Minneapolis, should remember that the tickets are issued on the certificate plan. The rate offered is the round trip for a fare and a third. The certificate plan means that passengers within the territory designated by the railroads must purchase full fare one-way tickets to Minneapolis not earlier than April 3 nor later than April 9, and take a certificate receipt therefor, which will be issued by the selling agent upon application. These certificates, when presented at the manager's office at the cycle show, will be stamped and then entitle holders to return to their destination at one-third the regular rate.

The State Loses.

Sec. Hoke Smith has decided adversely to the claim of Minnesota that the swamp lands within the ceded portions of the Red Lake reservation to be opened to entry May 15, were granted to the state by swamp land grant of March 12, 1860. The secretary says the intent of the act was to grant to the State swamp lands within its borders that has not been, prior to the state and approved by the department, disposed of a reserved and same act made prior to the granting act. Such reservation of these lands had taken place and accordingly none of them were given to the state under the grant.

PAY AS YOU GO.

Pay as you go. 'Tis so easy to say:
"I will settle to-morrow, or maybe next day;"
So easy to murmur: "Just charge this to me;
I will pay on the 1st, whatever it may be;"
While the butcher and baker are writing it down
In a white little book with a cover of brown.

Pay as you go; if you haven't the cash,
Oh, try not to purchase with promises rash.
If you have not the money to buy what you need,
Don't open accounts, 'tis sowing the seed
For a flourishing harvest of burdensome debt,
You must garner some day, while you worry and fret.

Pay as you go; be they ever so fair,
Your carpets and hangings, the clothes that you wear,
You cannot lie down in tranquil content,
When you're owing for furniture, clothing and rent,
While impudent hirelings of men that you owe
Harass you with bills and more numerous grow.
Pay as you go; though your dwelling be small,
The furniture modest, and humble the hall,
If only the belonings are only your own,
'Tis better by far than a mansion of stone,
With turret and tower and pinnacle tall,
But a burden of debt o'erhanging it all.

A VALUABLE CLAIM.

BY WILL LISENBEE.

Buck Simmons walked behind the huge prairie-breaking plow, watching, with evident satisfaction, the chocolate-colored ribbons of earth which the plow was turning over. The two yokes of oxen that drew the plow were showing no inclination to hurry through life, which disposition was in perfect harmony with Buck's own feelings on the subject. He did not believe in physical precipitation in connection with common labor. To be in a hurry seemed to him to be a species of folly that was totally inexcusable.

On reaching the end nearest the cabin he brought the team to a halt, and, allowing the cattle to graze on the luxuriant grass, seated himself on the beam of the plow and lighted his pipe.

"There ain't much better land than this in these parts," he mused, "an' as fer watermelons, it can't be beat this side uv the Rockies."

A covered wagon, drawn by a pair of shabby sorrel mules, came to a halt in the road close by, and a bushy-bearded man got out.

"My name's Billings—Zeke Billings," he said, as he came up to the spot where Buck was seated. "I'm looking for a claim to buy. Can you direct me to where I can find a good one which I could purchase at a reasonable figure?"

"Ye couldn't 'a' struck it better if ye'd 'a' searched fer a week," replied Buck, removing his pipe from his mouth and blowing a cloud of smoke from his bearded lips.

"That's fortunate," responded the stranger. "Then I may infer that you can give me the desired information?"

"Ye've sed it."

"Thank you. Is the land in question near here?"

"'Bout six inches from where ye're standing."

"Ah, I see. Your own claim is for sale?"

"It can be bought."

"How much land is in your claim? A full quarter section?"

"Ye've sed it."

"Is the land good?"

"Think I'd be a-plowin' pore land? What do ye take me fer? Must think I'm powerful fond uv work!"

"No offense, I assure you," replied Billings. "What advantages does your claim possess besides that mentioned?"

"'Tain't more 'an four miles ter water."

"Why, do you call four miles from water close?"

"Ye would if ye'd hauled it 26 miles fer one season."

"But I wouldn't live in such a country as that. A man wouldn't get anything but water-hauling done."

"Thar warn't anything else ter do thar."

"Didn't you raise any crops?"

"Nary crop."

"What made you stay in such a country?"

"Couldn't git away."

"What made you go there?"

"Ter git a claim."

"Why, what on earth could you want with a claim in a place like that?"

"A man's got ter meck a livin'."

"Make a living? How did you expect to make a living in a desert where nothing would grow?"

"Sell my claim."

"How did you happen to find a buyer?"

"It allus rained oncet a year; then we hus'led ter sell out 'fore the ground dried. That was our bizy time."

"What do you suppose a man would think of you for selling him such a claim?"

"I never stayed ter see."

"I suppose not. What did the man that bought your claim do when he found out what kind of a place he had got into?"

"Lived thar till the next rain."

"What then?"

"He sold out ter another feller. The west is a great edicator. A feller can't stay hyar long an' be a tenderfoot. Ye'll say so 'fore ye're hyar a year. Now, this yere claim uv mine—"

"To be sure—we were talking about your claim. I can see that the land is very good, and I suppose water could be got by sinking a well. I like the lay of this piece of land, and if your price is reasonable, I might strike a bargain with you."

"Ye've sed it."

"What would you call a fair price for your claim?"

"'Bout er thousan' dollars."

"A thousand dollars! Why, man, I can get as good a claim as can be found in the county for $200. Remember you can give no deed, but only quit your claim."

"I likewise knows all that; but this yere ain't no common claim. Say $500?"

"No. Two fifty is the most I can give."

"Then the claim's yourn."

"Very well. I will come back in a few days and have the papers fixed up."

"That seems fair-like; but I puts it like this: Ye're a stranger ter me, an' mebby ye comes back, an' mebby ye don't. If I holds this yere claim fer ye, ye pays me now $25 in hand, the rest ter be paid in three days, when ye gits the claim."

The stranger took out a book, and, writing the desired documents, gave them to Buck to sign, while he counted out the required sum of money. When the amount had been paid and the papers signed, Billings said:

"That fixes the matter all right. I will come back in three days and pay the rest of the money and take possession of the claim."

He was about to retrace his steps to his wagon when Buck stopped him with a wave of his hand.

"As I war jist sayin'," he said, "this yere is no common claim; but thar aire fellers that would try ter meck out like this—they wouldn't have the claim as a gift."

"Why, what do they say is the matter with it?" asked Billings, growing interested.

"'Tain't hardly worth repeatin'," went on Buck, in a careless tone. "I puts it that it is jealousy uv them, seein' I've got the best claim in the settlement. If you seed one uv them fellers it's likely he'd say that thar can't be no water got on this yere claim. He'd say that the well-borer war hyar an' bored about 600 feet an' got no water. That would be a lie, 'cause he only bored 400 feet, but I'll allus believe he'd 'a' got water if he'd 'a' bored deep enough. Then some object ter the claim 'cause they says I've settled on a school section, which ain't open for settlement, an' that I'll haf ter git off soon as a school board is organized. But how the Sam Hill do they know who the school board's goin' ter be, an' how can they tell what they're goin' ter do 'fore they're elected? Some people does meck me have that tired feelin'!"

"Why, if that is the case," broke in Billings, "I don't know as—"

"I ain't through yit," put in Buck. "Let me tell ye all the onery skunks aire doin' ter ruin the repertashun uv this yere claim. Some puts it that it is too close ter the line uv the Injun territory, an' that the road agents an' robbers would kill a feller off as fast as he could come hyar, an' that sich vishus invirunments would be the sp'ilin' uv the society uv the neighborhood; but thar hain't been but two men killed on this yere claim since I come here, which is full six months ago, an' them war both strangers who war campin' in the road hyar, an' never a-standin' g'ard none. Whatever else could sich chumps expect?"

"That is horrible!" said Billings, with a shiver. "As I were going to say, in that case—"

"I ain't through yit," continued Buck. "I's an honest man, an' b'lieves in tellin' the whole story which them slanderers aire so fond uv exaggeratin'. Some puts it that the snaiks on this yere claim is its greatest drawback, an' ter hear 'em talk ye'd think that a feller couldn't stay hyar 15 minnets without bein' swallered by them; but wait till I tells ye the true facts. Now, these yere snaiks aire perty bad, 'less ye know how ter take 'em. A feller must wear high boots an' keep his eyes peeled. Then I wears er buskskin suit under my other clothes, which has saved my life more 'an once. Now, thar was Ruggy Jones, who lived over thar on the next claim. He comes over ter see me one day, 'lowin he ain't afeared of no snaik livin'. He warn't the man ter listen ter no reason; he comes a-wearin' of them low dude gaiters, an' the first thing he knows he's bit with one uv them snaiks. Well, he slobbers 'round a little, takes a fit, tryin' ter kill everybody, then curls up an' dies deader 'an Moses. 'Twarn't my fault, seein' as how he had been warned; but some folks will be fools. Uv course, accidents will sometimes happen, even with the most keerful. Thar's my wife, Mandy, now. You couldn't find a keerfuler woman 'an her, but it all happened like this: One night one uv them dad blamed snaiks gits an' hides itself in the bed, an' the first thing we knows Mandy is bit. It warn't her fault, fer who'd think uv wearin' snaik pertecters in the bed? Well, she pumps a gallun uv my best whisky down her throat, an' it kinder newteralizes that yere pizen, so instead uv dyin' she only has some fits. Mandy ain't no slouch in a skirmosh, an' when them fits comes on ye'd be safe in 'lowin' that I had my hands full. She gits the corn-knife, 'lowin' that everybody is after her, an' out she goes, slashin' at everything, dangerus like. It's about daylight by this time, an' she meets Sol Miller, who is out early lookin' fer his mules. She mecks fer him, an' 'fore he gits on ter what she's drivin' at, she has sliced off one ov his years, an' he only 'scapes by bein' one ov the best runners in the settlement. She next slashes the head uv my best dog off, an' after she had sliced the tail off one uv my hosses, I finally ropes her. She gets quiet like after awhile, but them fits will come back on her—"

"That is enough," interrupted the stranger. "I wouldn't live on this claim for all the land in the county. Give me back my money, and we will call the trade off."

"No, we don't," replied Buck. "I reckon the contract don't say nothin' about givin' the money back. If ye want the claim, pay the rest an' it's yourn; but if not, the 25 is mine. That's the contract."

He was interrupted by a shriek which issued from the cabin, and the next moment the figure of a woman emerged from the door and came running wildly across the prairie, flourishing a corn knife about her head.

"Blame my cats, that's Mandy havin' one uv them fits!" cried Buck. "Look out fer yerself an' team, stranger, while I runs fer a rope!"

But Billings did not wait to listen. With one bound he was in his wagon, and a moment later had lashed the mules into a gallop and was disappearing down the trail in a cloud of dust.

Buck darted around the cabin, the woman in hot pursuit, and this was kept up till the stranger was well out of sight. Then the two went into the house.

"I reckon he's gone for good," said Mandy, laying the corn knife on the table.

"Ye've sed it. That snaik story fixed him. It allus does."

"How much did you get out of this bargain?" asked the wife.

"Twenty-five. That's the fourth this week. A hundred a week ain't so bad. I reckon I'll knock off work for the day."

And he sat down and began to examine the money he had received, assuring himself that it was genuine.

"I'll tell ye, Mandy," he said, "a feller can't be too keerful in dealing with them eastern sharpers. They are allus up ter some swin'lin tricks ter beat honest people."—N. Y. Ledger.

THE FARMING WORLD.

BRAIN AND MUSCLE.

The Successful Farmer of To-Day Uses Both Hands and Head.

The man who uses both brains and muscle will far outstrip in the race of life the man who uses only his muscles. This is true in every calling in which men engage, but especially is it true in farming. The farmers who are getting along the easiest, other things equal, are those who mix brains with their work; who plan and systematize their work; do everything in its season, and in the most thorough manner possible. The farmer who, for instance, does not decide what crops he will plant till planting time comes; or the one who breaks his ground regardless of the condition of the soil, plants untested or doubtful seed in poorly prepared soil, cannot be said to have mixed enough brains with his work.

There is no doubt that many farmers would have better profits if they would rest, recreate and read more and work fewer hours. There is such a thing as doing too much manual labor. The farmers, as a class, certainly cannot be accused of being lazy. The majority of them work too hard, at least during some seasons of the year. It is more than likely that many do not distribute their work well, and are, as a consequence, too busy at some seasons and have too much leisure at others. Here, again, is where the brains come in. The work should be planned with a view to doing it most economically. This can be done by a judicious distribution of work which will keep hands and teams reasonably busy during all seasons of the year, instead of hiring help and rushing at some seasons, and then taking it easy for a considerable spell.

There are times when even the most systematic farmer is thrown behind with his work as a result of long wet spells, or circumstances over which he has no control, and in order to do work in its season it becomes necessary to rush a little and work from sun to sun; but, as a rule, where sufficient thought is put into the work, eight or nine hours is enough for one day's work. Eight hours for work, eight hours for sleep and eight hours for rest, recreation, study and domestic pleasures would be a good division of the day. With this division there would be ample time for reading, thinking, planning and systematizing the work, and in addition to the increased pleasures of life on the farm, the profits would, if any difference, be increased.

The cooperation of brain and muscle on the farm, however, means more than merely to improve methods of farming; it means cooperation with brother farmers, and organization for marketing to the best advantage, and for purchasing in a way to be independent, to an extent, at least, of useless and extortionate middlemen and combines. "Improved methods" at the market end are as necessary as in the matter of production. There should be sufficient mixture of brain and muscle to drive the gamblers from the grain pits, and restore normal markets. —St. Louis Journal of Agriculture.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

After testing several varieties of flax the Mississippi station concludes that flax culture cannot be made profitable in that state.

The Swedish agricultural college finds the best time to apply nitrate of soda to spring wheat to be half at time it sprouts and half when it is heading.

Experiments with oats in Germany show that varieties most productive on one kind of soil are most productive on all kinds; but difference in food contents was found to be due to difference in soil and not to difference in variety.

The Alabama station finds more than six times as much nitrogen in cowpea vines in the fall as in the same vines the next spring, after they had lain on the ground all winter. The clear inference is that the vines should be plowed under in the fall rather than let them lie on the surface till spring.

Examinations by experiment stations show that American clover seed is clearer than European, and has equal vitality. Some European seed was found to be mixed with finely crushed quartz, colored to resemble clover seed, and other samples proved to be old seed colored bright like the new.—Journal of Agriculture.

USEFUL IMPLEMENT.

Full Description of a Homemade Clod Crusher and Harrow.

A very convenient homemade implement is shown, bottom up, in the accompanying illustration. It is made as follows: Bolt two 2x12 oak boards (a a) 8 feet long to two 4x4 crosspieces (b). On the front edge bolt a 2x4 (c), placed edgewise. This will provide a 6-inch surface, which will strike the clods and prevent them getting back on the crusher. To the back edge of the crusher bolt another 2x4 oak (d) flatwise, and bevel the upper edge. To the beveled surface bolt an old sickle bar. The guards will have slant enough to let trash escape, and yet will pulverize the ground almost as well as a disk harrow. The hooks for attaching the team can be made by a blacksmith. Use four horses and let the driver ride on the crusher.—W. B. Bolton, in Orange Judd Farmer.

A COMMERCIAL VIEW.

Why Country Merchants Should Spread the Good Roads Gospel.

It should not require a very acute mental vision for merchants in country towns, who are almost entirely dependent on the farmers for their trade, to see that it is to their interests to assist in the work of improving the highways leading to their towns.

A spider with no web wherewith to catch flies is no worse off than a town with no roads radiating from it. Every mile of good road adds so much more area to a town's territory of trade. Every steep place, every muddy place, every sandy stretch is a barrier that the farmers will avoid by going to some trade center more easily reached.

If the merchants in a slow-going town would organize their clerks into a road improvement corps and go out in the highways and by ways mending the roads it would attract more customers than to cut off two per cent. from their selling price.—Good Roads.

ARTICHOKES FOR HOGS.

An Excellent Food and a Reliable Preventive of Cholera.

Hitherto the growing of this valuable tuberous-rooted perennial, illustrated herewith, has been almost wholly neglected and greatly misunderstood. But their great value as a cheap, handy, healthy hog food has been so thoroughly aired the past three years, in the press of the country, by men who have had practical experience with them, that an enormous demand has been created for them.

As a hog food they cannot be excelled. A good plan is to plant all your lots with artichokes about May 1, when your hogs are turned on pasture. Then when your pasture plays out in the fall —or about September 15 to October 1— you will have fine food in your lots for your hogs, where they can root at intervals, whenever the ground is not frozen, until the following May, when they will have received as much benefit from one acre of artichokes as from ten acres of corn. They will also have left enough tubers in your lots to reseed the ground for the next crop.

It is a hog's nature to root, in fact, his hogship is never happier than when he is rooting, and an artichoke can truly be called a hog's drug store.

A wealthy hog raiser of the writer's acquaintance, who has made 480 acres of $100 land out of hog raising for the pork market, says he would not be without a big patch of the tame artichokes, as he has had no hog diseases in his herds since they have been allowed to eat artichoke tubers.

A sow will not eat her pigs if she has been allowed previously to eat artichokes, and hogs do not root up pastures in the spring when they have previously been allowed to root in the artichoke patch to their hearts' content.

A hog's object in rooting is to obtain roots, which ,as I said before, serves the same purpose to him as does the drug store to the human being. After he has eaten a goodly portion of artichokes, the rooting notion will be almost entirely out of his head, so say extensive stock raisers, who have grown and fed the artichoke.

But there are artichokes and artichokes; in many parts of North America, the "wild" artichoke is a native. It is merely a bad weed, a dangerous pest, which produces very few and small tubers, and is very difficult to exterminate. Many farmers who have seen it growing understand that there is a difference—a vast difference—in the wild and "tame," or domesticated sorts. In fact, they are as different as is "wild" and tame rye.

During the past few years the "tame" or domesticated sorts have been imported from Europe and are in some parts of the United States being extensively grown as a hog and stock food.

The artichokes can be as easily grown as corn or potatoes, and on land that will produce 50 bushels of corn, you can easily raise 500 bushels of artichokes.

The writer frequently does this and has grown over 900 bushels per acre on ground that had never been manured.

Cut the tubers, plant and cultivate precisely same as potatoes. They are a great soil enricher, and can be easily exterminated by plowing the young plants under when they are about a foot high, as the old tubers have rotted, and the young ones have not yet formed at that time.

I would not think of farming without them. The improved white French is the only variety worthy of culture and it is a purse comforter. Six bushels will plant one acre.

Again I say grow the artichokes and you will have a fine, healthy swine food and no cholera.—J. P. Vissering, in Western Rural.

LIVE STOCK POINTERS.

Systematic training is necessary with young colts.

Sheep must be kept dry in winter if they are kept healthy.

Fine silky hair is a good indication that the animal will fatten readily.

It will add much to the comfort of all stock on the farm if they can have a clean bed at night.

Fall pigs must be kept in a good condition through the winter if they are to fatten in the spring.

Better purchase a little feed rather than to allow the stock to run down in condition at this time.

Where the supply of manure is insufficient commercial fertilizers can often be used to a good advantage in growing potatoes.

A sow that is suckling a litter of pigs is a voracious eater and should be fed all that she will eat up clear at each meal.—Farmer's Voice.

When to Sow Clover Seed.

I should advise everybody to sow clover seed early as they could, even on the snow, but I would advise to put it more than half an inch deep. The best crop I ever had, the man sowed right on the furrow, as it was left by the plow, but I would advise a full inch, rather than half an inch, and if some of it is too deep, it will come up next year. One of the best farmers I know, who has raised 300 bushels a year, puts on the seed and harrows it in, just as he does his oats or his wheat.—B. S. Hoxie, in Farmers' Review.

A Damage to Beekeepers.

Spraying fruit trees when in bloom is considered of paramount importance nearly everywhere, and in some states laws make it obligatory. It is so general in many western sections that apiarists complain bitterly. Where there is an abundance of clover and other blossoms furnishing sweets, bees get along all right; but where they depend in large part upon flowering orchards, the question of partial or complete destruction of the bloom through spraying is a serious one.

DEAF MUTES DANCE.

A Jumping Mummy on the Piano Keeps the Step for Them.

A social club of deaf mutes exists in Warsaw since 1883, and as there are a large unmber of persons thus afflicted in the capital of Russian Poland, the club is doing very well. During the last week of carnival the club arranged a ball, and in order to enable the member to dance to the music in time, a very curious plan was adopted, which proved quite efficient. A large paper doll was rigged up on the piano, and the player, also a deaf mute, who furnished the music, which, of course, could not be heard by the members of the club, used a pedal to make the paper figure move up and down in time with the piece played. A large sign alongside announced the character of the dance, and thus it became possible for the deaf mutes to enjoy the dances as if they were not afflicted with their organic shortcomings. Besides that, they were spared the agony of those who could hear, for some wag had tampered with the piano, which was frightfully out of tune, even the player never noticing that fact. The deaf mutes danced into the early morning hours and unanimously voted the entertainment a magnificent success.

Provoked a Speech.

A good story is told of the way in which a New England senator was once aroused to make a stirring speech. At the outset of his political career he had been known as a remarkably clever "orator of the stump," and later on, in the lower house of the legislature, he made a brilliant name for himself. But when he became a senator he ceased talking, much to the regret of his friends and admirers. Finally the liquor law came up for discussion, and the wife of a friend of the senator, who was much interested in its passage, was greatly disappointed to see that the brilliant man had no apparent intention of joining in the discussion. She sat down and wrote a few words on a sheet of paper, which she inclosed in an envelope and sent by a messenger to the senator. "Do speak! Even Balaam's ass spoke once!" This brought the senator to his feet and elicited one of the best speeches he ever made.

GYPSINE.

Won't rub off!!

Neither will Gypsine!

Q. What is Gypsine?
A. Gypsine is a permanent and everlasting wall finish; entirely different from all Kalsomine preparations.
Q. How is it more durable than Kalsomines?
A. It is made from a Gypsum Rock cement base and grows hard on the wall with age.
Q. How about Kalsomines?
A. They are but temporary, softening after a short time and have to be washed and scraped off, in fact spoil any wall to which they are applied, as they rub and scale.
Q. Will not Gypsine rub and scale off?
A. No, when originally applied to a clean wall it is everlasting, and can be recoated to change tints or when necessary

Q. Is Gypsine injurious to the health?
A. Unlike all poisonous wall paper held on with vegetable paste or whiting and glue kalsomine, it is recommended by the leading physicians and sanitarians everywhere.
Q. Can anything but plain wall tinting be done with Gypsine?
A. Any kind of frescoing or relief decorating can be done with it.
Q. Where can I purchase it?
A. From your local paint dealer.
Q. How can I learn more about Gypsine?
A. Ask your dealer or write for copy of GYPSINE ADVOCATE and sample circular.
